

CAROLINA-V. P. I. WRESTLERS WILL MEET SATURDAY

"You Will Surely Get Your Eyes Full Saturday Night," Says Coach Quinlan.

Now that the State-Carolina basketball game is a thing of the past, campus sports attention turns to the wrestling bouts between Carolina and V. P. I. in the Tin Can Saturday night at eight o'clock. This is the only home event scheduled for Tar Heel athletic teams, for the remainder of the week though the varsity and freshman cagers go over to Duke to meet the Blue Devils Saturday night, and the boxers journey to meet V. P. I. at Blacksburg.

"For those interested in wrestling you will surely get your eyes full Saturday night," says Coach Quinlan about the V. P. I.-Carolina bouts. His men have made an excellent start so far this season, defeating Princeton and holding the strong Navy team to a 19-12 score. Their opposition Saturday will be the team which finished second in the Southern Conference meet last year, and according to the Tar Heel mentor, the Gobblers have practically their entire 1930 team intact.

Graves, who won the 115-pound conference title for V. P. I. last year, is fighting in the 125-pound division this season and will be pitted against Captain Frank Stallings of the Tar Heels. About this fight Coach Quinlan says, "Neither boy knows what it is to lose, so you can see what you have coming Saturday night."

The other match of great interest will be the 145-pound bout when Captain Bailey of V. P. I. meets Conklin, Carolina sophomore. Conklin went undefeated his freshman year and has won two matches this year against Princeton and Navy.

"There sure will be plenty of action in the 145-pound class," Quinlan was heard to say yesterday.

HIGH CAGE TEAM DEFEATS MEBANE

The Chapel Hill high school basketball quint edged a spirited Mebane team out by the close score of 17-15 last night.

Following up shots seemed to be the only difficulty the Chapel Hill boys encountered during the fray, for they excelled their opponents in every other department of the game.

Chapel Hill had a two-point lead at the half which was tied again and again by the visitors immediately after the beginning of the second period. The score was 11-11 as the whistle blew announcing the end of the third period, which clearly shows the equality of the scoring prowess of the two aggregations. But when the curtain was rung down by the shrill blast of the referee's whistle, the count was found to be 17-15 with the hometown basketweavers leading.

Pennington played brilliant ball for Chapel Hill, while Tom Farrell upheld Mebane's share of the glory with some excellent maneuvering.

This victory for the Hillians makes the count in games won, and games lost even. Chapel Hill high has won two games and lost two thus far in the season.

Tar Heel Mat Captain Tied Navy's Best Star

Captain Frank Stallings, one of the outstanding stars on the Carolina wrestling team, proved his abilities again recently when he wrestled Theobald, undefeated star of the Navy, to a draw in a match that went two extra periods.

College Sports

Northwestern University's "Hard Luck Hank" Bruder, the "Greatest All-American" that ever warmed a bench, has nothing on Wisconsin's Walter Karsten, erstwhile 165 pound wrestler. After a week of strenuous workouts in preparation for the Wisconsin-Iowa mat matches, Karsten, Wisconsin's only certain chance of winning, fell down the steps of the university library, suffering a badly wrenched shoulder that will keep him off the mat for several months.

A similar hard luck blow of this nature was dealt Tennessee prior to the Alabama game. Paul Hug, all-southern end and one of the foremost wingmen in the game broke his ankle from a fall while leaving a theatre.

In the lineup of a D. K. E-Sigma Chi intramural hockey game at the University of Michigan, the name of Fielding Yost, Jr., appeared recently. Yost attended Carolina two years ago and transferred to the school at which his father won everlasting grid coaching fame.

Football was the only sport to make a profit at Princeton University during the past fall, the financial statement of the Princeton athletic committee revealed recently. A revenue of $259,574.61 was realized while minor sports showed a loss of $37,529.11 and basketball an expense exceeding profits of $9,835.24. Despite these deficits, a surplus of $20,097.40 was shown.

At McGill University, Montreal, Canada, intramural chess is a rising sport. Campus organizations have entered a large number of men in a tournament, which is now under way.

A gigantic winter carnival to be held February 4 will signify the beginning of the University of Wisconsin winter sports program.

The University of Arizona lost $2,726 last fall during the football season, according to a financial statement of athletic officials recently.

John (Spinner) Campbell, one of the University of Alabama's outstanding halfbacks, was named backfield coach for the University of Kentucky football team Monday. Coach Campbell, in making the announcement, said Campbell had returned to Alabama and would take up his new duties after graduation this spring.

At the University of Washington, pin ball has been substituted for volley ball as an intramural sport. During the last three years, pin ball has risen to a high position as a popular campus sport.

State College played better basketball in the second half of last night's game with the Tar Heels in the Tin Can scoring ten points to Carolina's nine, but failed to overtake the lead set up by the Tar Heels in the opening period and lost, 22-16.

Paul Edwards was the star of the game, making three baskets for Carolina in the final period when the Red Terrors were rapidly diminishing the Tar Heel's lead. He was high scorer with eight points. Tom Alexander's floor game was very good.

Morgan, center, and Johnson, forward, were best for State.

First Half
Despite the fact that the Tar Heels missed many attempts at the basket they held a noticeable superiority over the Red Terrors during the first half. Carolina's guarding was good as usual and State had few chances at scoring. The score board at this point gave Carolina 13 points to six for State.

GOLFERS WORKING AT HOPE VALLEY

Begin Preparations to Be in Shape for Approaching Season.

With the advent of the golf season near at hand, the members of the golf squad have begun their practice games at the Hope Valley Country Club. When the weather does not permit, the indoor driving net at the Tin Can is brought into use.

Meade Willis has been elected captain of the 1931 golf team which will look to Ben Goodson, Aubrey Brooks, Doc Ballenger, and Begerley Mason for support. The promising sophomores who played on last year's freshman team are: Joe Adams, Billy, O'Brien, Raymond Chat-ham, and Fred Laxton. Paul Carter, a transfer last year may be eligible to compete this season.

Coach Kenfield is optimistic about prospects and looks for a team that will be the equal of, or superior to, the team of last year, which won fifth place in the Southern Conference.

Several meets have already been planned for the spring, although definite dates have not yet been set. The North Carolina intercollegiate Tourney will be played at the Sedgefield Country Club at Greensboro the week-end of April 25. The Southern Conference tournament has been awarded to the University of Georgia, and will be played on Thursday, April 30, and Friday and Saturday, May 1 and 2, at Athens.

It is possible that a match with Vanderbilt will be scheduled for the Wednesday before the tournament in Athens. Home golf matches will be played with the various colleges in the state. Georgia Tech will meet Carolina this year on Saturday, April 18, at Hope Valley.

A schedule is being made up for the freshman team also.

FUNDAMENTALS KEEP GRID TEAM BUSILY ENGAGED

Squad Will Be Divided Into Teams as Soon as All Men Are Out.

Running new plays with the recently adopted shift, blocking, tackling, and sundry other maneuvers of initial heavy work has kept the Tar Heels well occupied during the last two days.

In Monday's practice the prospective backfield men were divided into combinations to play and block the ends.

Linemen grouped in their respective positions, blocked, tackled, and ran through general primary line drill.

It was understood yesterday that the opening of the winter schedule with four teams in action might be delayed pending the appearance of a number of new candidates. Head Coach Chuck Collins stated yesterday that he hoped to have at least fifty new men report for the winter drills. When the size of the squad becomes known, the winter schedule will be assumed. Coaches hope to use as many men and teams as possible.

The call was issued to candidates yesterday. Collins states that on the entire squad to date only one man has reported who has not had previous experience, but that candidates of this calibre are extremely desirable.

U. N. C. Coach Makes And Loses Forwards in Hurry

The mortality rate for forwards seems to be high with Coach Jim Ashmore. Hackney, Price, Satterfield and Cathey graduated together and crippled the Tar Heels for last year. Coach Ashmore patiently trained a new set, and this year, Neiman, Green, and Hutchinson, all lettermen and all eligible, failed to return to college. So Coach Ashmore had to train a new set.
