

SENIORS CHOOSE SUPERLATIVES AT CLASS MEETING

At their smoker in Swain Hall Wednesday night, the members of the Senior Class elected their dance leaders, class day officers, and superlatives.

Following the refreshments, Pat Patterson, president of the class, opened the session by introducing Dr. George Coffman, head of the English department, who delivered the principal address.

Elections of dance leaders followed the talk, and 'Pat' Patterson was unanimously chosen to lead the figure. He will be assisted by Chuck Erickson and Beverly Moore. The date of the dance has been tentatively set for either April 18 or 25, and both the Junior Prom and Senior Ball will be given on the same week end.

Vesper Services

Sponsored by the three cabinets of the Y. M. C. A., vesper services are held in Gerrard hall each evening at 6:30 o'clock under the leadership of Bob Barnett.

This idea of a daily vesper service first originated four or five years ago, did not flourish at its first beginning. It was tried again the years following, only succeeding in the winter quarter. From several years of experience it has been found that a vesper service will not succeed during the fall quarter, due to the predominance of fraternity rushing; consequently, this year the idea was carried out for the first time the second week of the winter quarter and will continue through the spring. The vespers last twelve minutes and are open to the public.

MANNING TELLS FRESHMEN ABOUT MEDICAL SCHOOL

"Students Must Have Ability to Work To Be in Medical School," Says Dean.

Dean Isaac H. Manning of the University school of medicine gave the freshmen some interesting facts about the department of which he is head in chapel Thursday. He first gave the requirements necessary for the right type of student to undertake the study of medicine. He stated that it is not necessary to be a genius, but merely to possess a good average brain combined with ability for hard work.

The three learned professions according to Dean Manning are law, the ministry, and medicine. In each of these professions learning and ability are required, but in the study of medicine especially there is no room for the lazy student.

A large number of factors play a part in the preparation for the pursuit of medicine. In the pre-med course the department believes in the need for the cultural and basic studies. These, however, should be subordinated to the courses giving a knowledge of the fundamental sciences such as biology, zoology, physics, and chemistry. In these courses the experience in laboratory methods so indispensable to medicines is gained.

Dean Manning gave the entrance requirements demanded by most of the larger and more prominent medical schools for graduate work. The minimum requirement is a total of sixty semester hours. That is equivalent to the two year course given here. Many schools, however, require three years, and some demand the A. B. degree. Six full courses in chemistry are necessary.

The medical school dean, who has been a member of the faculty for thirty-one years, said that from long observation he had found that a student's average grades are a very good indication of the character of work he will do in the medical school. Moreover, he asserted that the presentation of subject hours alone will not suffice for admission to the school but that high grade work must have been done. This is a prime requisite as the work in this department is comparable only to that in the engineering school as to its difficulty.

Dr. Manning told of the aptitude test to be given Friday at three o'clock and urged all contemplating medicine to take it. It is used as a gauge of a student's qualifications for this work.

"The cost of a degree in medicine is perhaps the most expensive of degrees," said the speaker. "The tuition is higher and

QUERIES CHOSEN TO BE DISCUSSED BY DI AND PHI

The joint ways and means committee of the Di and Phi societies announce the following bills to be discussed at the joint session of the two societies Tuesday night in the Di hall. President Little and Speaker Whitten urge all members of both bodies to become familiar with the problems involved in these questions. The bills are:

Resolved: That the management of the University, State College, and N. C. C. W. should be consolidated into one large University of North Carolina.

Resolved: That the student body has too little control over extra-curricular activities on the campus.

Material on the first question may be obtained from the Brookings Institute Report, from which the following is an abstract:

"It is extremely unfortunate that the State College and the University are located in different cities and also that North Carolina College for Women is developing its own individual program. If there were some integrating agency, it is probable that much of the duplication now existing could be eliminated."

NEW PLAY SERIES ARE INTRODUCED

Student Playwrights Will Present
Guest Performance of "The Blue Remembered Hills."

The Playmakers are instituting a series of experimental plays to be produced in connection with the playwriting class conducted by Professor F. H. Koch. Any play that shows promise, regardless of the theme's uniqueness, will be considered material for these productions.

A play by Theodore Herman, a graduate student, will be the first of these series. It will be presented this evening in the Playmakers Theatre, as a strictly invitational performance.

Herman's play The Blue Remembered Hills, was probably inspired by one of Housman's poems. It suggests the splendid ecstasy of youth and the joy of living. Technically speaking The Blue Remembered Hills is a one act play in two scenes. The first scene is in a room of a dormitory in a boys' college. The second scene is the living room of a fraternity house. Ten minutes is supposed to elapse between the scenes.

The play deals with the boy's consciousness of the value of adolescence and the conviction that to compromise with life is the deepest of all tragedies. Five boys are caught in the swirl of One boy is willing to compromise; another wavers upon the edge of a definite action; a third unconsciously influences an older boy who, in turn, exerts a most subtle influence upon every one he meets.

There are now two other experimental plays in rehearsal: Margaret Howe's The House of Grief, and Anthony Buttita's Playthings, which are to be given in the near future.

Taylor Society

Dr. G. T. Schwenning of the commerce school will address the Taylor Society tonight at seven o'clock in room 103 Bingham hall.

C. Felix Harvey

C. FELIX HARVEY DIES WEDNESDAY OF HEART ATTACK

Alumni Association President
Passes Away After Short Illness.

Charles Felix Harvey, president of the alumni association, died at his office in Kinston late Wednesday afternoon with angina pectoris. He had been suffering from a heart attack a short time before his death, but for the past few days he had returned to his work. Mr. Harvey was a native of Kinston, where he became associated in business with his father shortly after graduating from this institution in 1892.

Prior to his graduation here he was the winner of the essayists medal of the Phi society and also of the Hume essay medal in his senior year. A few days after receiving his diploma he went in partnership with his father, the late Lemuel Harvey, which firm became L. Harvey and Son.

At the time of his death he was a trustee of the University as well as of the Kinston public schools. During his lifetime he was president of the Seven Springs Supply Company, Kinston Insurance and Realty Company and the Carolina Brick Company, besides being connected with numerous other enterprises, including a bank and several cotton mills.

When he died, Mr. Harvey was seated at his office desk discussing matters with a business associate. The office was in the heart of the business district, and the news of his passing spread rapidly.

Mr. Harvey is survived by his wife, two sons, C. Felix Harvey, Jr., and Leo H. Harvey, and one daughter, Mrs. Arthur P. Wilson of New York. Mr. Harvey's mother, Mrs. L. Harvey, and a sister Miss May Harvey, also survive.

Funeral services are to be conducted from the Queen Street Methodist church at 11:30 this morning. President Frank P. Graham, and a number of faculty members and trustees will attend the funeral.

President Graham today sent Mrs. Harvey a telegram in which he said: "On behalf of the University and personally I wish to express my deepest sympathy to you and your family. The State has lost a noble and useful life. The University has lost a devoted and distinguished son. I feel deeply the loss of a dear and loyal friend. The spiritual consolation of a beautiful spirit will always be yours."

J. Maryon Saunders, Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, said: "Mr. Harvey had begun his year as alumni president with sincerity and understanding. Thoroughly loyal always to the University, he had brought to his new position as president of the alumni clear thinking combined with long experience in dealing with University and alumni affairs."

Kemp P. Lewis, of Durham, first vice-president of the Alumni Association, will succeed to the presidency.

Sophomore Committee

Dave Henry, president of the sophomore class, requests that all members of the class executive committee meet with him at the Sigma Chi house Friday night at seven-thirty o'clock.

KOCH WILL READ CONNELLY'S PLAY SUNDAY EVENING

"The Green Pastures" Was First
Produced in New York
February 26th.

The reading of the Carolina Playmakers for February is to be given by Professor Frederick Koch, Sunday night in the Playmakers Theatre.

The title of the reading is The Green Pastures by Marc Connelly. It was first produced in New York February 26, 1930, and is still running. The author used as a substantial basis, Roark Bradford's Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun.

The play is an attempt to present concretely the religious ideas held by thousands of Negroes in the deep South. Their idea of heaven, that it is a place where all will have everything that makes for innocent pleasure, is one held by many. Their idea of the inhabitants of heaven is of themselves clothed with power and glory. One of the features of the play as produced is the singing of spirituals that serve as a sort of emotional connective tissue between the scenes. Professor Bruce Carpenter says of this singing that it "adds a unity and an emotional emphasis that is invaluable."

The critics have been most enthusiastic. Theatre Arts Monthly attributes to the play "the glow of a quiet beauty and a self-sustaining form." Brooks Atkinson, as quoted by Professor Carpenter, says that "as comedy, fantasy, folklore, religion, poetry, and theatre, it is of surpassing beauty." Professor Carpenter points out "the striking resemblance to the miracle plays of England. Just as the shepherds in the Secunda Pastorum bring to the Christ-child mittens and other gifts that the shepherds of Jerusalem would never have heard of, so the characters in The Green Pastures place modern clothes on many of their Bible figures and make them do strictly modern things."

Of special interest to North Carolina is the fact that Richard Harrison, who plays The Lord, was a teacher in the A. and T. College in Greensboro.
