N. C. CLUB WILL HEAR ASHEVILLE MAN TOMORROW

Dr. McClure, Asheville Agricultural Student, Will Address Local Organization Monday.

Dr. J. G. K. McClure, president of the Farmers' Federation, with headquarters in Asheville, is to be the principal speaker at the meeting of the North Carolina Club Monday evening at seven-thirty o'clock, in 103 Bingham hall.

The Farmers' Federation was put into operation ten years ago by Dr. McClure who came to Asheville seeking improved health. He became interested in the agricultural conditions of mountain farmers and sought some means to develop agricultural industries and markets, so that the farmer may confidently increase his production.

This organization has eight warehouses in and around Asheville through which it sells the produce of the farmers, and buys their necessities at cost. This federation has greatly increased the avenue of markets for the farmers of western North Carolina and is gradually extending its program for improvement.

Foreign Relations Conference Opens At Duke University

Students from eight southern states gathered at Duke University Thursday for the opening of the eighth annual Southern Students Conference on International Relations and heard Dr. Edward S. Corwin, professor of jurisprudence at Princeton University.

J. I. Morgan, Jr., Duke student and president of the conference, together with President F. P. Few of Duke, welcomed the delegates in the afternoon session Thursday. At this session Dr. C. B. Gosnell, of Emory University, and Amy Hemingway Jones, of the Carnegie Endowment for international peace, were the principal speakers.

The evening session was given over to the address of Dr. Corwin on "The Foreign Relations of China." Professor Corwin has recently made a visit to China and was called into conference by government officials upon his return to this country.

Friday morning Pierre De Lanux, director of the Paris information office of the League of Nations delivered his address on "The Outlook for Disarmament," while Dr. George G. Wilson, professor of international law at Harvard University, spoke on "Limitations in the Effectiveness of Treaty Provisions."

Other speakers on the program who addressed the meeting are: Dr. J. Fred Rippey of Duke University; Professor K. C. Frazier of the University; President F. P. Few of Duke University; and President Frank Graham of the University, who made the concluding address before the body.

Carolina-Georgia Debate

Tuesday night the University debating team will meet the University of Georgia team on the proposition that the United States should adopt a policy of free trade. The debate will take place in Memorial hall at eight-thirty.

Term's Dance Events Completed By Grail

The program of dances for the winter quarter ended last night with the Grail dance from nine o'clock until twelve in Bynum gymnasium.

Three law fraternities, Phi Delta Phi, Delta Theta Phi, and Phi Alpha Delta, entertained at a tea dance yesterday afternoon. The room was decorated in the law school colors of red and white, and music was furnished for both functions by Jelly Leftwich and his University Club Orchestra.

CRIME SITUATION IS LEGION'S TOPIC

Durham Commander Is Principal Speaker at American Legion's Annual Ladies' Night.

The Chapel Hill post of the American Legion gave their annual dinner and ladies' night at the Episcopal parish house Friday with the members of the Legion Auxiliary and other women in the families and among the friends of the Legionnaires as guests of the post. Paul Robertson, post commander, was toastmaster; J. O. Harmon, manager of Swain hall, had charge of the dinner.

After Adjutant W. S. Hogan reported on the membership for the past year, W. B. Umstead, past commander of the Durham post, addressed the group on the possibilities of the American Legion taking the leadership in relieving the crime situation. He discussed the general situation of law breaking, speaking particularly of the large per cent of white criminals.

At the end of the meeting, Professor George McKie directed the preliminaries to select a representative of the University to participate in state-wide oratorical contest which is sponsored by the state department of North Carolina in Raleigh. L. H. Fountain was selected as representative and C. Rutledge as alternate.

Washington's Rules Issued to Students

A pamphlet called George Washington's Rules of Civility and Decent Behavior in Company and Conversation are being distributed throughout the freshman and sophomore classes by the office of the dean of students. These rules, which were found in some of Washington's papers that were completed before he had reached his sixteenth birthday, were thought it first to have been original with him. It was later discovered that they had been used in France and England many years before Washington's time and that his tutor had used them to teach the boy penmanship.

This booklet, whose title gives a concise description of its contents, was edited by Charles Moore and published by the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award Committee of the New York southern society. Any student who desires to have a copy of these rules may do so by applying at 205 South Building at the dean of students' office.

Each year this committee awards a medallion to that student in the University who ranks highest in leadership and character as selected by a local committee. This honor was won last year by Ray Farris, and the year before by Ed Hudgins, both of them were past presidents of the student union.

Some Political Demogogy

Thursday, February 12, the editor of this publication called leaders of both parties into conference to tell them that the columns of the Daily Tar Heel existed for the entire student body and that the leaders of any political faction could have space each day, which was to be edited and written by themselves. Saturday, February 14, the "All Campus Party" and the "Non-Fraternity Party" published statements of their sides.

Conceiving the idea that they were for some reason or other being prejudiced against the "Non-Fraternity Party" complained that they would rather not have any space at all than what was given them.

Again on Friday, February 27, we reissued our invitation to the parties. The "All-Campus Party" replied that they would issue no statements unless the "Non-Fraternity Party" saw fit to do so also. The "Non-Fraternity Party" made no reply, but yesterday released a publication of their own called "The Spokesman."

The Daily Tar Heel reiterates the fact that such a publication as "The Spokesman" is entirely superfluous in such a small town as Chapel Hill. In the first place the students publishing the paper are working directly against the welfare of the official publications of the University in that this is a year of economic depression and even in the best of times the amount of advertising to be obtained in Chapel Hill has a definite limit. The Buccaneer, The Carolina Magazine, and The Daily Tar Heel all lost money last year and unless everyone co-operates they may lose money this year.

If The Daily Tar Heel were unpopular with the student body there might be justification of a sort for the political paper, but two overwhelming votes two years ago and last spring have backed up the Tar Heel and its program. In fact in the election last spring as to whether the daily should be continued or not there were only thirteen votes out of the entire number cast which were opposed to the idea.

On two points then is "The Spokesman" superfluous: it duplicates in its columns articles which were not submitted to The Tar Heel but would have been published had they been submitted, it thus being a waste of human energy; and it secondly places the already established publications in the jeopardy of running into deficits.

LOCAL MAN GIVES HIS VERSION OF MEMPHIS ARREST, IMPRISONMENT

Henry R. Fuller, Book Salesman, Arrested and Treated As Criminal While Asking for Communist Headquarters; Describes Incarceration in Tennessee Jail.

Editorial note: Henry R. Fuller, a college textbook traveling salesman for the Houghton-Mifflin Publishing Co., who makes his home in Chapel Hill, was arrested Saturday night, February 21, by Memphis, Tennessee, police and held until the following Monday morning when he was released without charge. He was arrested as he walked into the police station and asked the address of the local Communist headquarters, the inquiry being made because Mr. Fuller was looking for Horace B. Davis, former professor in a Memphis college.

Mr. Fuller was graduated from the University in 1926 with high honors, and for two years thereafter was advertising manager of the University Press. He comes of a prominent Florida family and is a great grandson of John Sevier, who was for six terms Governor of Tennessee and a hero of the Battle of King's Mountain.

Mr. Fuller's friends, who were amazed at the action of the Memphis police, say he is not and never has been a Communist. In Chapel Hill he is known as a man of unusually quiet and gentle manners. Mr. Fuller's own version of the Memphis affair, which has appeared in the Memphis Press-Scimitar, is given below.

By Henry R. Fuller

I walked into the Memphis police station a student of economics. I came out almost a Communist.

I saw a negro woman slapped in the face by a police officer.

I saw a man with his mouth bleeding and three teeth missing after he had been "questioned."

I was held thirty-six hours incommunicado. No charge was made against me.

"Lucky To Be Free"

I came out of jail with a feeling that I was lucky because I had powerful friends and that the less fortunate could not even hope for a square deal.

I'm confident these conditions do not prevail in Memphis alone.

To go back, I have possibly more than normal curiosity. If things happen around me I like to see them. If congressmen shout that "Communism is menacing the country," I am foolish enough to want to look at the menace.

It was with this curiosity that I walked into the police station Saturday night. I turned to the first officer on my left. I asked if this was the place for asking and answering of foolish questions.

A young man politely said, "What do you want to know?"

Three Questions

"Do the police know of any Communist organization operating in Memphis? Is there any headquarters here for Communist propaganda? If so, where is it?" These were my questions.

The nice young fellow assured me there had been a few Communists but they had been driven out of town. I mentioned that I had chanced on a Communist meeting in New Orleans which was supervised by police.

As I was turning to go an older and larger man, whom I later found to be a detective, rose from a chair where he had been listening.

"What's this thing you are

Atheism Discussion Causes Suspension

C. L. Coburn, news editor of "The Varsity," undergraduate newspaper at the University of Toronto, was suspended indefinitely as a result of an editorial discussion of atheism, according to a telegram received by the Daily Tar Heel last night.

Bairnsfather Draws Buccaneer Picture

Two students accosted Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, in the lobby of the Carolina Inn immediately after his lecture last Friday night. They introduced themselves as members of the Buccaneer staff and asked:

"Won't you give us a drawing? We want it for the issue that's just about to go to press." Captain Bairnsfather hesitated, then said, "I'll do it."

He sat down and with rapid strokes produced an Old Bill picture. He ended it with his signature and turned it over to the delighted students, who in turn hurried it over to Durham to the photo-engraver; the cut was returned to the Orange Printshop; and Old Bill appears in the latest issue of the Buccaneer.

COKER MANAGES "FOREST SCHOOL"

July 8 to August 27 marks the fifth season of the Allegheny School of Natural History. During this time courses will be given in field zoology, field geology, field botany, natural history of birds, and nature study. The faculty is composed of Dr. R. E. Coker of the University, director, (Ph.D. Johns Hopkins); A. A. Saunders (Ph.B. Yale); Professor W. P. Alexander (E.Sc. Cornell); and L. E. Hicks (Ohio State University).

A laboratory in the field, well equipped by nature with a wide variety of original specimens, illustrating many examples of the principles of science, is the scene of this "School in the Forest," conducted by the Buffalo Museum of Science in cooperation with the University of Buffalo. It is located in Allegheny State Park in Western New York, seventy-five miles south of Buffalo, close to the Pennsylvania border.

This school offers the most advanced knowledge and appealing methods of imparting it to students. The surrounding country is composed of a terrain of wide variety and richness, and a cool summer resort in one of the largest state parks in the country, a section of the Allegheny Plateau, in climate and forest cover like the Adirondacks and Canada.

N. C. Press Issues New Sociology Book

Illiteracy in the United States by Sanford R. Winston, Professor of Sociology at N. C. State College, came off the University Press last week. This book, a reference of illiteracy in the United States from 1870 to 1920, shows that in the South Atlantic States illiteracy has declined from forty-six to eleven per cent. The percentage of illiteracy in North Carolina from 1870 to 1920 has decreased from fifty-one to thirteen per cent.

Further analysis of illiteracy in regard to sex, age, city, country, race, nationality and according to school systems is also given in Winston's work. The volume also analyzes illiteracy in reference to birth rate, infant mortality, age of marriage, suicide and other important social phenomena.
