

DEAN MATHEWS TO OPEN HUMAN RELATIONS MEET

Classes Will Be Arranged So That Students Can Attend Morning Sessions.

With Dean Shailer Mathews speaking tonight in Memorial hall at 8:00 p. m. as the opening speaker on the program, the second Institute on Human Relations gets under way to continue throughout the remainder of the week. The Institute unofficially opens this morning with the pulpits of the four local churches being filled by visiting speakers.

Tomorrow's program brings to the campus two of the most important speakers of the whole Institute. General Charles P. Summerall, president of Citadel and retired chief of staff of the United States army, will speak at 10:10 in the morning on "The Trends in Our National Defense Policy." He will be introduced by Albert Cox of Raleigh.

Thomas to Lead Forum

In the evening at 8:00 o'clock Norman Thomas, director of the League for Industrial Democracy and former Socialist candidate for president, will make an address in Memorial hall on "Wanted: A New Social Philosophy."

At 4:00 in the afternoon Mr. Thomas will have a public forum in Gerrard hall and both Summerall and Thomas will conduct forums at 12:00 for special commerce, history, and government classes.

For the benefit of those persons interested in doing reading on the topics of the speakers, a special book exhibit has been arranged and will be placed in the lobby of Memorial hall during the week. It contains maps, pamphlets, charts, periodicals, books, etc., pertaining to the general theme of the three divisions of the Institute. This exhibit has been assembled by the members of the sophomore Y cabinet under the direction of Bob Barnett.

Laski to Speak

Through the material aid of the Phelps-Stokes fund, the Weil lectures, and the senior class, the quadrennial plan of the Institute was able to be continued. Dr. H. J. Laski, British economist and 1930-31 Weil lecturer, will appear on the program during the last three nights, through the courtesy of the committee in charge of the lectures this year.

During the remainder of the week the program will consist in daily class room lectures, and two lectures are at 10:00 a. m. and at 8:00 p. m. each day. It has been arranged with the University administration that the lengths of the classes be so arranged that the chapel period each day will last one hour. By making this change it will be possible for the morning speakers to have more time for their addresses.

At the meetings of the Institute in 1927 it was estimated that approximately 22,000 persons attended, and plans are being made this year for an even larger crowd.

Phi Mu Alpha

There will be an important meeting of Phi Mu Alpha Sigma Iota after the organ concert Monday night in the music building. Election of officers will take place.

James Urges Y Men To Attend Institute

All members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets have been requested by Pardner James, president of the Y, to take part in the Human Relations Institute which will open today and run until Saturday.

There will be no regular meetings of the cabinets tomorrow night. Members of the organization are expected to attend the Human Relations Institute throughout the week and be prepared to lend any assistance possible.

"It is important that cabinet members acquaint themselves with the entire program of the Institute so that they may be able to answer any questions that may be asked them," the Y president said in his statement.

He went on further to say that since the Y is helping to undertake this Institute it is imperative that every member do his part to make the undertaking a lasting impression in the minds of every student and individual.

VARIED PROGRAM IS PRESENTED AT LAWYER'S DINNER

Awards, Speeches, and Skits Share Honors at Law Association's Banquet.

Reminiscent of Gridiron Press Club dinners, and characterized by good food interspersed with a variety of frivolity and lese majeste, the annual law school banquet occurred Friday night at the Carolina Inn. Skits at the expense of the faculty, imitations of professorial idiosyncrasies, and laughs, alternated with announcements of awards, interesting speeches, and instructive comment to round out a delightful evening for all present, from Supreme Court Justice to lowly first year student.

Arranged in the form of a mock trial, the dinner got under way with "liquidated damages" (tomato cocktail), proceeded through corpus delicti (meat course), "fructus naturales" (salad) and similar courses, to the final adjournment of court after two and a half hours of more or less serious entertainment provided for the observers of the case cited as Students versus Faculty.

Light Part of Program

Court was called to order with class yells, followed shortly by the law school song, the words and music of which were written by Wex Malone. Orators of the respective classes, including James Chadbourne, Mac Gray, and Beatty Rector, delivered short talks.

High lights on the program were skits by Moore Bryson in which the various members of the faculty came in for a due amount of affectionate "razing" and caricaturing, given and received in the spirit of the occasion. This spirit was further carried out by the aid of bulletin boards placed in the lobby of the Inn, displaying subtle allusions to well-known characteristics of the professors.

Awards Made

The more serious side of the meeting involved the announcement and awarding of honors for work accomplished during the past year. Law Review certificates were given those who had performed noteworthy achievements as members of the

CHASE FORMALLY INDUCTED TO NEW WORK AT ILLINOIS

Former President of University Installed as Head of Mid-Western University.

New England education, ripened in the South, was transplanted to the Middle West Friday when Harry Woodburn Chase was formally installed as the sixth president of the University of Illinois. He has been acting as head of this institution since last July 1, succeeding David Kinley who had reached the University's retiring age. Dr. Chase was educated at Dartmouth and was president of the University of North Carolina for ten years.

Some five hundred delegates representing 232 universities and colleges, sixty-eight learned societies and professional organizations, and including a half hundred federal and state officials, marched in academic dress behind the University band across the south campus to the gymnasium where the exercises took place.

Number of Addresses

In his inaugural address President Chase told the visitors that "state universities like the University of Illinois are expressions of the faith that the provision of opportunities for higher education is one of the functions of the American commonwealth," and that they had obligations of a very particular nature unlike those of any other institution "in the fields of both teaching and research."

Brief addresses of greetings were also brought to the new president by Governor Louis L. Emmerson of Illinois, from representatives of the university world in general, the colleges of Illinois, the faculty, student body, and alumni.

Chase's Speech

"Among the many varieties of institutions, the large state University, like Illinois, occupies a peculiar position," President Chase said. "The very nature of its foundation and maintenance has committed it to certain obligations in the fields of both teaching and research. In teaching it must deal, not with a homogeneous and selected group of students, but with the great numbers who have successfully met its standards—students who have widely different interests and capacities. It must devise ways and means of sending these out of its halls, some as leaders, many just as competent people, but all better adjusted for happier, richer, and more useful lives in the world of tomorrow because of their work and their life here.

"In research," he said, "this institution must touch and vitalize the life of its state at every strategic point. It must also be true to its function as a university in the search for truth in every field and without question as to its immediate value.

"The state universities which have prospered and grown great are precisely those whose states, like Illinois, have had the wisdom to recognize the needs for freedom to teach and investigate and have supported those needs without interference from without in matters of control and policy. Without such a policy a university becomes but an empty name."

University's Obligation

In the opinion of Dr. Chase, the state university owes much
