

K. A.'S DECLARED WINNER OF DEKE ATHLETIC AWARD

Trophy Given for High Scholarship and Participation in Varsity and Intramural Sports.

The Kappa Alpha fraternity was declared winner of the annually awarded Deke trophy last evening in Memorial hall, along with the presentation of other honors of Awards Night. Dean F. F. Bradshaw formally presented the trophy in behalf of the members of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

The method of computing the points scored by the various fraternities competing for the award consists mainly in counting the scholastic average of each chapter as one half, and dividing the remaining credits between varsity and intra-mural athletics. Although the Kappa Alpha lodge was winner by a wide margin, there was considerable competition. The next three ranking fraternities were Kappa Sigma, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and Zeta Psi. The latter, winner of the trophy on its inauguration last year, scored approximately the same number of points this year. By dint of their athletic activities, however, the K. A.'s were able to assume first place.

Presented by Bradshaw

Dean Bradshaw, in his presentation speech, reflected credit upon the members of the D. K. E. fraternity for associating themselves with this movement to encourage both scholastic and extra-curricular activities among the Greek letter fraternities on the campus. The beneficial effect is already observable in the fact that the scores of the leading fraternities are much higher this year than last.

The trophy is a silver piece of mounted statuary about thirty inches high. The figures, classic in design, represent Minerva, goddess of learning, holding aloft a tablet, and Apollo, god of the games and the sun, in a running position at her side.

GEOLOGY GROUPS WILL TOUR WEST

Despite the rumors to the contrary, the western motor trip will be given as usual this year. The trip which begins on June 7 and lasts through August 4, is being run by the Southern Tours, Inc., of Chapel Hill. The extension division of the University has nothing whatever to do with the running of the trip; it is only attending to the educational part of it.

Through the extension division the services of Dr. Gerald MacCarthy, of the geology department, have been acquired. Dr. MacCarthy will teach two courses, one on the introduction to physical geology and the other on the physical and economic geology of the United States. Also there will be advance courses for a few of the students.

Mr. J. B. Whitener, superintendent of the schools of Maiden, is to manage the trip, and the party will travel in small busses and a few private cars. This year the tour will cover about 9000 miles, visiting such places as Pikes Peak, Grand Canyon, Los Angeles, and Yosemite and Yellowstone National Parks.

DORMITORIES TO ELECT OFFICERS

Following the established custom, the undergraduate dormitories will elect their presidents, vice presidents, and athletic managers, to-night at 10:30 o'clock, in first floor halls of each dormitory. The Carolina Dormitory Club has considered that it is better to have all of the dormitory elections the same night at the same time, in order that all of the dormitory residents will have an opportunity to have general notice of the elections, and in order that the residents will make their plans to attend and participate in the elections.

Elections are held this year in order that the dormitory activities of the fall quarter such as freshman receptions, smokers, and intra-mural athletics, may get under way without delay. Also, the dormitory residents are better known to each other at this time of the year, and they will be in a better position to select good leaders for these important offices.

The Dormitory Club has under consideration plans to make the present dormitory organization more effective next year.

JENKINS SPEAKS ON LEGISLATURE

History Professor Reviews Work of Present Session in Monday's Chapel Talk.

Professor William S. Jenkins, of the department of history and government, spoke in freshman chapel yesterday on "The Organization of the State Legislative Body and the Important Issues That Confronted the Present Legislature."

The North Carolina legislative body is called the General Assembly and is composed of a senate, or upper group, and a house, or lower body. The senate is composed of fifty members who are elected from thirty-three districts. The members of the house of representatives number 120, each county being allowed at least one representative. The elections for the legislature are held every even year, and the regular sessions are held the odd years. The pay of a member of either house is $600 for the session, and the length of a session is usually about sixty days, but the present legislature has been in session almost 140 days, breaking all former records. There are prospects of adjournment by tomorrow.

Assembly Criticized

There has been widespread criticism of the present General Assembly, according to Professor Jenkins, but there have been many grave problems confronting the legislators. Tax reform is probably the hardest to solve. The former method of taxation was an ad valorem tax of two dollars and forty cents on every one hundred dollars' worth of property. The budget commission wanted to cut the appropriations for all state institutions. The McLean law provided for the state to take over and operate all six months schools in the state, and schools to be operated by revenue from some other source than land. There were other bills such as the Hinsdale luxury tax, the Day general sales tax, and the corporation recapture tax. All of these bills were rejected.

Graham Memorial Will Provide Social Center For All Students

New Union Building Should Meet Demands as a Place for Recreation if the Campus Sees Fit to Vote for Its Upkeep.

Costing when finished four times as much as any building now on the campus, including the new library, which is the largest building in the University, the Graham Memorial student union building will by far surpass anything that this campus has. The plans for the building called for a central portion and two large wings on each end. The proposed total cost of the structure, with complete furnishings is two and a half million dollars. As yet money has not been raised to build either of the planned wings, but the central portion is just being completed. This section will alone cost half a million.

Pride in Building

Every student at Carolina now ought to take pride in the fact that such a building is being erected on this campus and that he will be able to have the use and advantages of a union building. Students may also take pride in the fact that former college generations have contributed and helped to raise money and that now the present generation may also be considered to have an important part in the voting of raising money to help furnish it.

Graham Memorial will not be taking the place of any building now on the campus, for there has been no building of the size ever planned for the purposes of this structure. It will truly be a student activities center. Every phase of the student life will be found there, and it will act as a radiating point for the whole campus. Just as South building is the center of the University as far as administration goes, the student body will center activities and meetings in the Graham Memorial.

Appropriate Meeting Place

Not only will activity and business offices be placed in the union, but it will be an appropriate get together place for all students. Boys in fraternities already have many of the advantages that this phase affords. Fraternities have lounge rooms, reading rooms, visiting and meeting places, large enough halls to give dinners and small dances, but the non-fraternity man is at a disadvantage in this sense. They have absolutely no place for spending their leisure time besides in their room, in the present inadequate Y building, down street, or even in the last extremity in Durham.

The new union building then particularly makes an appeal to this group. Here on the ground floor are several large rooms which may be used for welcoming visitors, listening to a radio or phonograph, reading, having general bull sessions, or engaging in some games. There is a large and beautiful ballroom on the same floor where small dances may be conducted, and down stairs is a large dining hall for special dinners, and where they will be able to get something to eat at odd hours. The building resembles and fills the same need as a student hotel, and will provide a second home, and certainly a Chapel Hill home, to non-fraternity men.

Chemistry Trip

Fifteen chemistry students went to Asheville on an inspection trip last Friday. Dr. F. K. Cameron and Dr. A. M. White were in charge of this trip. From Asheville, the group went to Canton to inspect the Champion Fiber company.

One of the main things inspected was the machinery of the factory. They also inspected the management of the mill and the way in which the finished article was turned out was of general interest to the students.

CARR DORMITORY TO BE LAW CLUB

The University Administrative Board has set aside Carr building for the exclusive use of law students for the year 1931-32. It is understood that the building must be completely occupied by law students during this coming year, otherwise steps will be taken to determine what group will occupy it after that date.

Carr building was assigned to law students because of the desire manifested by the law group. Both law faculty and students presented a written petition to the committee in charge of the building; and after sixty-two students had consented to occupy the building, an agreement was drawn up enabling them to do so.

There are six suites, each of which will be occupied by three students, and twenty-two rooms arranged for two students each. There is also a large reception room.

The law students are very enthusiastic over the new living quarters, and every possible effort will be made to turn it into a barrister club.

Saturday morning at 9:30 A. M., Professor Roscoe B. Turner, of the Yale law school, will discuss the Administration of Banking Laws. Afterwards, due time will be given to unfinished business and the election of officers.

ANNUAL AWARDS NIGHT CLIMAXES YEAR'S ACTIVITY

President Graham Tells Honor Students They Represent Aristocracy of Ability.

The annual Awards Night, the climax of the past year's activities and efforts on the part of University students, took place last night at 8:00 in Memorial hall. At this time students found recognition of the efforts they had spent throughout the past school year in the various lines of activity: scholarship, athletics, dramatics, music, and literary pursuits.

"Hark the Sound"

The meeting was opened by a cheer led by the chief cheerleader, Ed Hazelwood, and was followed by the singing in unison by the audience of "Hark the Sound," led by Dr. H. S. Dyer. President Frank P. Graham, the principal speaker was introduced by the presiding officer of the occasion, Mayne Albright, president of the student union.

Graham's Speech

Mr. Graham said that this was the night of recognition and awards. "These men constitute our real aristocracy. They are not an aristocracy of birth or money or position or popularity but an aristocracy of ability, work, and achievement.

"These scholars, writers, athletes, debaters, actors, musicians, and other artists have won through by dint of sheer merit, will, work, and worth. They have the something plus. They held on after others let go and dropped by the wayside.

"Theirs," he continued, "is a preeminence measuring the openness of our student democracy and the height of our University excellence. They would teach us all to call out the best that is in us. They lead us to clear out of our campus, our town, our fraternities, our dormitories, anything that would tear down the excellence within

Drama Group Will Give Burlesques and Make Awards Saturday Night.

The annual Playmaker capers are scheduled for next Saturday night in the Carolina Playmakers theatre. At that time all persons connected with the theatre will assemble for the celebration which begins promptly at 8:00.

The program consists of burlesques on the activities of the Playmakers and special selection of dances and songs. This year's celebration will be somewhat different from any previously presented.

Play-book Planned

A book has been made from sketches and suggestions offered by members, and this will represent a visitor's tour of the theatre. Professor F. H. Koch will show the visitors through his playwriting class, the theatre and its activities in a satire composed of short episodes.

In this presentation, all the activities of the past two quarters will be satirized. The sketches will include satires on "East Lynn," "Very Pale Pink Angel," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "The Perfect
