BEERS CONTINUES WORK BEGUN IN GERMAN SCHOOL

Zoology Professor Makes Study of One-Celled Animal Life in Foreign University.

Professor C. Dale Beers, of the botany and zoology department of the University, completed last summer an interesting period of research in proto-zoology or one celled animals at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Biology which is located on the outskirts of Berlin. He was particularly interested in the diet of these one-celled animals and the effect of different diets on their life history and general well being.

The didinium was concentrated on by Dr. Beers. This animal is microscopic and feeds only on one of its related one-celled animals, the paramecium. It is so specialized that it can eat only that. About every four hours the didinium will consume a paramecium which may be four times the volume of itself. In ordinary temperatures of water it will reproduce sixteen didinians daily or in higher temperatures it is possible for them to reproduce one thousand from the lone animal.

Parameciums Starved

When the parameciums are denied certain foods until they are lean, and then are fed to the didinium, the latter diminishes constantly until his diet of well-fed parameciums is resumed. He is possibly suffering from a deficiency disease such as the rickets, pellagra, or some other disease from which under-nourished persons suffer. This unusual animal will live for four or five years in a dormant state without any food, but will recover as soon as he is fed. Dr. Beers is now experimenting to see how long it is possible for them to live without food. The animals on which he is now experimenting have been unfed for five years but still remain alive. While in this condition.

FRESHMAN FACES COOL PROPOSITION

While the rest of the campus is sweltering 'neath the sun's torrid rays, freshman Paul W. Crayton of Greensboro is earnestly praying for the weather to remain warm.

But then, Paul has a special reason for his desire for winter to be postponed: he's lost the keys to his trunk. For five days and nights, now, he has faced the world with nothing but a thin blue shirt and a few other garments, of course, to keep him warm—and the nights are growing cooler.

The leather key-pouch that Paul lost contained keys to his trunk, his suitcase, and his room. "I don't know what I'll do when it gets cold," he says. "My roommate's clothes don't fit me and all my winter clothing is in the trunk."

If anyone finds the keys, Paul hopes they will return them to his room on the third floor of Old West.

CHANGES PLANNED IN YACKETY YACK

New Editors Hope to Publish an Annual Superior to the Last Edition.

Work on the 1932 publication of the annual Yackety Yack will begin officially today with a meeting of the editorial staff at 2:00 p. m. in Graham Memorial, announced J. Holmes Davis, editor-in-chief, yesterday. Plans have been made for the style of the volume, and seniors have been informed that appointments can now be made for photographs. The publication will not be late this year, asserts Editor Davis. The date for distribution has been set for May 15.

New Policies

The policy of the present year's staff will not be adhered to, explain the editors of this number, the fortieth since the annual's creation in 1892. This new annual will be modeled after that of 1930 and before, rather than the volume published last year, which did not meet total popularity on the campus because of its departure from the usual standard. The new volume will probably be 7x11 inches in size, which is about an inch less in length of cover, although the number of pages is approximately the same. The pages will contain a border as was customary prior to the last number.

"Believe It Or Not" Brings In High Pay

Robert L. Ripley, originator of the "Believe It or Not" column is one of the highest paid men in the newspaper business. His income for last year was placed at $700,000 which should make many a managing editor gnash his teeth in rage. Besides his syndicated column, Ripley derives a substantial sum from his book, motion pictures, and vaudeville appearances.

He began "Believe It or Not," while on the staff of the old New York Evening Globe. The editor objected strongly to these insertions into his regular sport drawings but Ripley continued to shoot one in, now and then. Suddenly, the public's fancy was struck by these weird facts and Ripley became one of the all time freak successes of the business. Although he has imitators by the score, he is still the leading exponent of his art.

Students Barely Escape From Burning Frat House

A fire in the Sigma Chi house at Dartmouth college caused the injury of a student there and his guest. Twelve other persons residing in the house barely escaped with their lives and a few of the occupants were obliged to leap from the windows.

Starting in the basement at 6:00 a. m., apparently from an overheated furnace, the fire raced through the three story wooden structure before it was discovered. The college library nearby was undamaged.

University Represented

The University was represented during the summer at the United States Fisheries Laboratory for Investigations in marine biology at Beaufort, North Carolina. The group from the University included Professors H. V. Wilson and C. Dale Beers, Miss Edna Deviney, Miss Rebecca Ward, and Jos. H. Pratt, Jr.

The installation was led by Ed Hamer, student advisor. The officers installed were Jack Poole, president; Bob Drane, vice-president; Ralph Gardner, secretary; and Frank Kenan, treasurer.

Mr. Comer in his charge to the officers and council members made a very impressive speech on the co-operation and friendship of the members. "Individually," he said, "we cannot accomplish very much, but together we can be a leading factor in campus organization."

Wisconsin University To Organize Flying Club

A call has recently been issued at the University of Wisconsin for men and women who are interested in flying to organize a Wisconsin flying club such as those which have been organized at Yale and Harvard. The Wisconsin group plans to promote an annual program of studies in the university curriculum of some feature of aviation, to take part in individual flights under expert instructors.

There will be no regular chapel assembly today. Freshmen of the commerce school will meet with Dean D. D. Carroll in 103 Bingham hall, and those in the school of education will meet Dean N. W. Walker in 201 Peabody. All other freshmen are excused from chapel.

Old Oak Bites the Dust

When the rings on the old oak, in the rear of South building, which was cut down yesterday, were counted, it was found that the tree was as old as the University. It was felled yesterday after it had been determined that the tree was dead.

POLICY OF INFIRMARY IS EXPLAINED BY ABERNETHY

At chapel exercises yesterday the freshman class was addressed by the University physician, Dr. E. A. Abernethy.

Three policies of the infirmiry were laid down by Dr. Abernethy: an ill student shall not remain in his dormitory room, but must report to the infirmiry immediately; surgery work is not performed in the University hospital but is done in the Durham hospitals or at the home of the patient if it is near.

DR. DEY RETURNS FROM PARIS TRIP

Romance Language Department
Head Attended 400th Anniversary of College de France.

Dr. William H. Dey, head of the romance language department of the University, has returned after spending a summer in Paris. Dr. Dey was delegated by the University to represent it at the 400th anniversary celebration of the College de France.

Like Greek Schools

Although the college was founded in 1530, lack of funds prevented the celebration of the anniversary last year. This institution, like the Greek schools of ancient times, has no formalities of entrance, according to Dr. Dey, and no examinations are given there. It is entirely separate from the Sorbonne, granting no degrees. Such men as Paul Hazard, Bedier, and Faral give lecture courses there, and one of the big attractions to the place aside from the excellence of the courses is the fact that it is entirely free.

Anniversary Celebration

The anniversary celebration lasted for five days, from June 18 to the 22, and included beside the formal meetings at the College de France, a trip to the Chateau of Fontainebleau, built by Francois I, founder of the college, and a reception by Paul Doumer, newly-elected president of France, at the Elysee Palace.

At the conclusion of this celebration, Dr. Dey started his research work on the French literature of the 19th century. Most of this was done in the libraries of Paris, especially in the national library.

Co-eds Must Smoke

The women students of Northwestern university have recently filed a petition that they be permitted to smoke in their rooming and sorority houses. In part the petition reads: "If our petition is granted, we pledge ourselves not to smoke on the walks about the quadrangles, and to do everything in our power to decrease public smoking on the streets of Evanston."

Playmaker Reading

The first Playmaker reading of the year is scheduled for Sunday night, October 11, at 8:30 o'clock when Professor F. H. Koch will read "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream" by William Shakespeare in the Playmakers Theatre. It will be accompanied by Mendelssohn's music. The public is invited.

Judge Winston Returns

Judge R. W. Winston is spending a few weeks at the Carolina Inn, having recently returned from an extended stay in Lexington, Va.

FURTHER STEPS TO CONSOLIDATE SCHOOLS TAKEN

Commissioners of Greater University Guests of N.E.C.W. at Founder's Day Exercises.

The commission in charge of the plans for the consolidation of the University, North Carolina State college, and the North Carolina College for Women met Monday afternoon with President Julius I. Foust of the women's college to elect a director of the survey. Beside the full commission, Dr. George A. Works of the University of Chicago, who had previously been recommended by the sub-committee for the directorship, and Dr. F. J. Kelly of the Office of Education, Washington, were present.

The commission elected Dr. Works as the director of the survey and went on record as favoring the appointment of two associates upon the survey staff. These are to be men of distinctive attainment in some field of learning. The commission also decided that the survey staff should call in at least three men of like attainment as conferees to confer with it in the beginning of the study and at such other times during the progress of the study as is considered desirable. They also decided for the investigation of certain specific subjects such as graduate study, engineering, etc. They authorized the employment of specialists of high standing.

Dr. Works is spending three or four days in the state familiarizing himself with the institutions and will meet Thursday with the sub-committee to go further in the matter of the selection of associates, conferees, and specialists.

The commission were the guests of N. C. C. W. at its Founder's Day exercises at which Governor O. Max Gardner was the principal speaker.

LEGION MEETS AT CHARLOTTE FRIDAY

Owen Robertson, commander of the Chapel Hill post of the American Legion, has announced that there will be the greatest legion celebration ever held in North Carolina, October 9, in Charlotte. The convention is being held as North Carolina's official home-coming in honor of the recently elected national commander of the American Legion, Henry L. Stevens, Jr., of Warsaw. It is hoped that every member of the local post will renew his membership before October 9, so that the complete membership of the local post may be presented to the national commander in Charlotte.

From present indications, it is apparent that every member of the local post will be enrolled for the next year before the convention in Charlotte.

ONLY MORONS WHISTLE SAYS N. Y. U. PROFESSOR

Professor Charles Gray Shaw, of the faculty of New York university, has recently come forth with the startling declaration that only morons whistle. According to Professor Shaw persons who whistle, be they jazz tunes or ballads of long ago, are morons devoid of moral stamina and possessed of an inferiority complex. "No great or successful man ever whistles," said the New York university professor.
