In high spirits and in a fighting mood, the Carolina gridgers topped their preparations for today's Homecoming Day game with Georgia with a light drill yesterday afternoon.

The Georgia squad arrived early yesterday morning and also took its last signal drills. The Bulldogs were reported in good shape. In charge of them was Rex Enright, backfield mentor, who is acting head coach in place of Harry Mehre, called home recently on account of the death of his father. Enright was head frosh coach here last year.

The kickoff will come at 2:30 this afternoon, and it is expected that a colorful crowd of 20,000 will witness the afternoon's festivities.

Can Carolina's line stop Georgia when Yale couldn't? What-powered offense will Carolina be able to offer without Johnny Branch? Will the Tar Heels fight harder because they'll be without Branch and battling the odds?

These were question to be heard over and over on every side for the Tar Heels will take the field against what is probably their strongest enemy of the year, without their biggest single star, the brilliant little Branch having been suspended for the rest of the season for breaking training.

Coach Collins has shifted his backfield around, moved the veteran Chandler from full to quarter, and put Croom in Phipps' place at left half to get a punter in the first backfield, and the way the Tar Heels have been battering the frosh in scrimmage since Branch's suspension, it looks like there'll be a great fight.

Another big question was on the lips of the dopesters, too. Will Chuck Collins, wily experimenter and tactician, shift Carolina's offense around, inasmuch as Rex Enright, who has been in charge of getting Georgia ready since Mehre was called home by the death of his father, was a coach here last year and knows Carolina's players and plays so well?

Today's game will answer all those questions, and the fans think the answers are going to entail the feature battle of the North Carolina football season.

Coach Enright of Georgia has announced he would probably start Georgia's first team, something he didn't even do for Yale. That makes it look like Georgia, tough as is Georgia, has a respect of its own for Carolina.

NEGRO SORORITY RANKS FIRST IN SCHOLARSHIP

For the second time in three years, Alpha Kappa Alpha, colored women's sororoity at the University of Kansas, ranked first in scholarship among the national sororities on the campus. This club led the field two years ago, but dropped to the bottom last year. Delta Sigma Theta, the other colored women's organization, ranked last.

SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

Possibly with the exception of the Turkey Day games, this week should be the most important week of the football season. All the push overs are out of the way and everybody is settling down to tackle their real schedule. After today's games, we should be able to tell who will emerge as champions of the various sectors of the football country.

Georgia-North Carolina

This game, of course, will hold the attention of Dixie football fans. After a 26-7 walloping handed Yale by the Bulldogs, the Tar Heels will be expected to fold up gently and take their beating, but it won't be as bad as that. The Blue and White forward wall will play football with any outfit in the South—even against Georgia's Roberts, Downes and Co. However, it still remains undecided whether or not the Tar Heels will be able to stand up against the continual battering that they are sure to get. Personally the writer thinks that last year's game will be replayed. The Carolina team will put up a whale of a fight for three and a half quarters and in the closing minutes, Georgia will shove over a pair of touchdowns. One vote for Harry Mehre's charges and a prayer for the Tar Heels.

Duke-Davidson

Last week's showing against the Villanova club has established the Blue Devils as serious contenders for the state title, and Davidson should not stand in their way. Duke by three scores.

Alabama-Tennessee

The fur should fly thick and fast in this game if early season form (even against set-ups) means anything. The Crimson Tide has scored 150 points to date while the Vols haven't been bashful about pushing the pigskin over themselves. But since Alabam' will be troubled by a long trip, our vote goes to Coach Neyland and his boys.

Army-Harvard

Another game that causes predictors to tear their hair out. The Cadets looked plenty good against Michigan State, a tough Western team, while the Crimson is in the throes of a new coaching system. Then again New Hampshire gave them plenty of trouble. Ray Stecker and Co. ought to win by a hair.

Brown-Tufts

The Bear is running this year and should continue after today. So far they have beaten Colby, Rhode Island State, and Princeton, while the Engineers had a tough time with Colby. Brown by about four.

Yale-Chicago

Another intersectional game for the Bulldog. Last week the Eli contingent fared poorly against another Bulldog, but should snap their brief losing streak today. The depression has hit the Midway since 1924, and on Chicago's form this season, Yale should win by about two touchdowns.

Dartmouth-Columbia

It'll be a battle royal between Hewitt of the Lions and Morton of Dartmouth, with the Indians on the long end of the score, despite the fact that in last week's game against Holy Cross, Dartmouth lost the services of four first-string linemen. When Morton starts throwing passes, it'll be too bad for Columbia.

Michigan-Ohio State

This is the game in the Middle West. The Wolverines have

NORTH CAROLINA READY TO ASSIST YOUNG GRID PLAN

Most Schools of Both Carolinas Willing to Cooperate in Fight for Charity.

College athletic authorities in the Carolinas appear to be undecided about Owen D. Young's request that at least one football game be played by each college this fall for charity.

Mr. Young, member of the President's committee on unemployment relief, urged that colleges unable to set aside a regularly scheduled game for relief funds, should try to play a post season game.

North Carolina State and Wake Forest are two North Carolina teams "willing to cooperate" but neither has any definite plans.

Dr. R. R. Sermon, in charge of athletics at State, said the matter had been discussed before Mr. Young's announcement but that it was impossible to make an announcement at this time.

Pat Miller, Wake Forest coach, said his athletic council would consider the request. He pointed out that the Deacons play only one home game and that would not draw enough for the purpose.

Davidson, through Norton Pritchard, a college official, said it would be impossible for the Wildcats to play a charity game as no post-season games are allowed by the faculty. He said football receipts at Davidson dropped off $7,000 last year and were still showing a decrease this season. This, he said, would eliminate the possibility of designating a regular game for charity.

Jess Neely, coach of Clemson, said it would be "impossible to give a definite answer at this time."

Dr. Ralph K. Foster, director of athletics at the University of South Carolina, said post-season games were contrary to Southern Conference rules and he could make no statement on an unemployment game until following the conference meeting in December.

The Duke university Blue Devils are ready to tackle any formidable opponent for the benefit of the unemployed, Coach Wallace Wade declared tonight. "We have lost money on both of our home games this season and I think it would be unwise to schedule a charity game here, but Duke is willing to do anything it can to the situation," Coach Wade said.

University of North Carolina athletic officials have done nothing official about engaging in a charity game, but the suggestion has been made that the Tar Heels meet the University of Florida. The contest would be played in Durham. "We have not discussed a game officially," Dr. Foy Roberson, member of the athletic council, said, "but I am certain the University stands ready to do what it can for the unemployed."

BOYS PREFERRED TO GIRLS AS BOARDERS

Boarding house keepers catering to University of Kentucky students prefer boys to girls. Girls, they say, leave rings around the bathtubs, burn too many lights late into the night, wear out the plush on the divans too quickly, despise common food, leave too many bottles lying around, and strew cigarette ashes on the rugs. Their only redeeming quality is that they do not use as many cuspidors as boys.

ONLY VETERAN BACKS

Carolina will have to start today's game minus the services of Johnny Branch, leaving the Tar Heels with only two veteran backfield men, Rip Slusser, halfback, and Stuart Chandler (pictured above). Chandler, originally a halfback, was converted to full at the start of the season, and tomorrow will see the former Oak Ridge star at quarterback. Bill Croom and Hanes Lassiter complete the first string backfield.

HARD LUCK HITS HEEL RING TEAM

Hudson With Cracked Rib and Preston With Trick Knee Lost for Few Weeks.

A repetition of last year's bad luck hit the Carolina boxing squad Thursday when two of Coach Rowe's most promising rookies were forced out of action on account of injuries. John Preston, welterweight, had a trick knee to collapse on him, and Paul Hudson, middleweight, reported with a cracked rib. Both boys will be out of action for some time.

DOSSENBACH AND WILLIS LEAD IN TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Willis, Seeded No. 4, Defeats Harrison While Dossenbach Takes Rabl Into Camp.

"Ricky" Willis, seeded No. 4, and Fred Dossenbach led the parade of freshman net candidates into the quarter-finals of the annual fall tennis tournament, coming through their second round matches yesterday with the loss of only a few games. Willis took W. B. Harrison into camp to the tune of 6-0, 6-4. Earlier in the afternoon, Harrison had eliminated L. V. Anderson, 6-0, 6-2. Dossenbach received a default in his first round tilt and went on to trim M. K. Kalb, 6-0, 6-1.

In the first match on the day's program, Paul S. Jones took fifteen minutes to win a 6-0, 6-1, decision from J. G. Stoll. This
