

Tar Heels Nosed Out By Tennessee, 7-0

Vols Take Advantage Of Carolina Misplays In Second Period To Win

Wynn Pushes Over Lone Score After Peacock's Fumble of Punt; Line Outplays Vols.

By Jack Bessen

Although that much vaunted Tennessee attack failed to click, the Vols took advantage of every break to crash through to a 7-0 victory over a Tar Heel team that completely reversed last week's form.

Whereas, last week, Carolina's tackling was undeniably weak, yesterday's tackling was hard and vicious. The Tar Heel running attack was also much improved over last week, Coach Collins' charges making five first downs.

Wild Bull McEver was not so wild yesterday; in fact, Gene was meek and gentle like a lamb. The All-American back and leading point scorer of 1929 carried the ball thirteen times and made a total yardage of twenty-five yards, averaging almost two yards a rush.

Tennessee scored their lone marker midway in the second period, when Peacock fumbled a kick, Tennessee recovering. The Vols then pushed the ball over in five plays.

Acting-captain Theron Brown, Carolina right end, met Captain Skeets Mayer of the Vols where the formality of meeting each other was gone into. The Tennessee leader won the toss and elected to defend the west goal with Carolina kicking off.

June Underwood kicked off to Tennessee's ten yard line where it was brought back to the thirty-one yard line by Feathers. McIver made the tackle. On a spinner, Brackett to Wynn, the Vols netted four yards through left tackle. Brackett plunged through the center of the line for six yards and a first down. After two plunges through left tackle gained but four yards, Brackett, whose punting featured the Vols offensive, booted the ball from his forty-five yard line to Carolina's fifteen. Play seesawed back and forth, with Tennessee making whatever scoring threats were made. The Vols were once inside the Tar Heel ten yard line but an incomplete pass into the end zone saved the Tar Heels from a possible marker. The quarter ended with Tennessee having the ball on Carolina's twenty-five yard line.

Carolina received the ball on her own twenty-four yard line. After two thrusts failed to make any headway, Croom kicked to the Vols forty-two yard line. McEver made one through the line. Tennessee was penalized five yards for off side. McEver was tackled savagely by Gilbreath, losing three yards. Feathers then attempted to kick, but June Underwood, who played a great game at tackle, blocked the kick and it was recovered by Fysal on Tennessee's thirty-four yard line. This was the closest that the Tar Heels came to the Vols goal in this period, Croom's pass being intercepted by Feathers on his own fifteen yard line and run back to his thirty-one yard marker. Brackett kicked from his thirty yard line to Carolina's thirty-four where it was fumbled by Peacock, Derryberry recovering on the Tar Heels twenty-six. This happened to be the break of the game. Wynn made seven and Brackett made three for a first down. Feathers made seven, and Wynn reeled off three more

The Tar Heels made a gallant effort to keep the Vols off, holding them on the two yard line for three downs, but Wynn crashed through for the score. Hickman place kicked the ball for the extra point. The half ended with the score: Tennessee 7, North Carolina 0.

The second half started with Carolina using the same lineup that started the game except that Ferebee was at quarter and Chandler at full. In this period, McEver did not carry the ball once. Carolina's most serious threat came late in the third period when they advanced the ball to Tennessee's five yard line. Brackett kicked to his own thirty yard line. A penalty for unnecessary roughness netted the Tar Heels fifteen yards, advancing the ball to the fifteen yard line. On three successive plunges, Croom gained nine yards, but failed by a foot to make first down, giving Tennessee the ball on her five yard line, where Brackett kicked out of danger.

In the fourth period the Tar Heels unleashed a desperate passing attack in an effort to score, but to no avail. Two passes, White to Thompson and White to Phipps netted forty yards but the Tar Heels were unable to make yardage when gains meant first downs. The game ended with Tennessee in possession on her own thirty yard line.

Although the Tar Heels did not win, the 14,000 odd spectators saw an exhibition of football rarely seen in Kenan stadium. Tennessee's heavier line was outplayed by the Carolina forward wall, while the backfields were on a par. Underwood, McIver, Brown, Gilbreath, and Walker starred for the Tar Heels while Feathers, Derryberry, and Brackett starred for the visitors.

The lineup:
Carolina Tennessee
Walker Derryberry
Hodges Saunders
McIver Stewart
Gilbreath Mayer (c)

Staff Meeting

The city editors and sports editors of the Daily Tar Heel will meet at 5:00 this afternoon, while the editorial board will convene at 5:30. There will be no regular meeting of reporters this week.

STARS OF TENNESSEE GAME

June Underwood, tackle, and Butch McIver, guard were two mainstays in the Blue and White forward wall. Time and again these two linemen stopped the Tennessee attack dead in its tracks. It was mainly through their work that McEver was only able to make a two-yard average per try. In the second session, Underwood crashed through the Vol line to block Brackett's kick.

OHIO CO-ED PERFECTS SYNTHETIC DINNERS

For many years scientists have been attempting to perfect a synthetic food. A co-ed graduate student, Miss La Vaughn Dennison, of Ohio State has perfected a cracker which will replace a regular meal of meat, potatoes, carrots, and pie. This cracker's chief ingredients are bran and milk and it contains every vitamin except vitamin C, which is found in most greens.

Now that synthetic food is practical, Miss Dennison is doubtful over its future. She is quoted in the Ohio State Lantern as saying:

"I doubt whether man will be able to give up his food which he loves so well. Habit is pretty strong and the thought of life without mashed potatoes and pumpkin pie, a world without restaurants and grocery stores might sound pretty stale to most of us."

It is believed that the cracker when perfected will be used as food to the undernourished and by explorers who must carry large supplies of food in little space.

FALL BASEBALL SEASON CLOSES

Dean Hobbs Praises Work and Spirit of Men in Practice Games.

Yesterday the fall baseball season came to a close as Coach Hearn called for a suspension of the game until next spring. The spring season is expected to be opened about the middle of February. The baseball diamond will be needed for intramural athletics the remainder of the fall quarter, and inclement weather is expected soon which would make further play impossible.

The last day of practice was spent in a vigorous batting drill, and the baseball equipment was turned in at the end of the practice as the men retired for a winter of well-earned rest.

The whole fall practice in which eighteen games were played in five weeks of practice was looked upon by the coach as unusually successful. Both team and player profited by the time spent on the field, and the team work of the varsity has been considered excellent.

Between eighteen and thirty-six men reported every day for practice, there always being enough for two full teams. The fact that some players had laboratory periods to attend in the afternoon prevented them from being out every day. But on the whole attendance was better than ever before.

Not only has attendance been excellent but the spirit shown by the men in their work has been better than in former years. This fact was brought out in an address to the team last Thursday night by Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman of the athletic committee.

Dr. Hobbs made a very interesting as well as instructive talk to the team at the Thursday

At The Game

By Morris Long

Tennessee's highly touted retinue of grid stars who were supposed to outscore Carolina by at least three touchdowns found the going much tougher than most Tar Heel partisans had ever expected and had it not been for a break in the game the Vols wouldn't have been on the top end of the score. There were many long, grouchy countenances in the Hill last night being worn by betters who gave Tennessee eighteen points.

Smoky Ferebee did some fancy trotting in the second half, his galloping efforts being responsible in a great way for the Carolina advance to the ten yard line in the third quarter. Reminiscences of Johnny Branch floated out to the 13,000 when little Ferebee meandered some twenty yards through a broken field in the third period.

The football bee was buzzing vociferously about the great performance expected of the All-American McEver of the Vols before yesterday's game, but after all the yardage was totaled up the bright light of the Knoxville contingent only had mustered some twenty-five yards in thirteen attempts. If McEver is All-American material how about Key and Roberts of Georgia, not to mention Zimmerman of Tulane and Downes of Georgia.

Shull of Tennessee must be nearsighted or possibly he was a little peeved with the officiating. At any rate he very neatly blocked Umpire Bates of Sewanee in the fourth quarter, much to the consternation of the official.

Something must have happened to the police at the east end of the gridiron just before the imbroglia started as some two hundred of the knot hole gang pulled a "One-eyed Connelly" act and crashed the gate, reminding one of a Notre Dame team, coming out onto the field.

Red Gilbreath was all over the field and all over Captain Mayer of Tennessee yesterday, and if his work continues to be as good as his exhibition against Tennessee the Texan will rank well among Southern Conference centers. McIver, Walker, and Brown didn't make many mistakes either, little ground being gained over them.

Abe Spatz, Carolina's battler, like Hickman and Mayer of Tennessee also had a rough day of it. Abe had his girl down from New York, it seems, and some one tried to do wrong by him. With blood in his eyes and revenge in his heart Abe gave his adversary a thorough going over, and it is rumored that Archie Allen's task of finding a freshman flyweight boxer is solved.

"Scarface" Al Capone lost out for the first time in six semester popularity contests at the University of California, drawing only third place on a field led by Will Rogers and Mahatma Gandhi.

He spoke about the means of improving the game from the player's and spectator's standpoints, and advised the men to be good students so as to be eligible to play in the games.

Hearn gave the boys a talk at the meeting and thanked them for the splendid interest they had shown throughout the fall season, saying also that he was pleased with their performance. Captain Longest jointly appreciated the interest shown by the team as expressed by the coach.

THOMPSON LOSES WELTER DIADEM

Bows to Brouillard, Frenchman, Friday in Hard Boston Bout.

Lou Brouillard, hard hitting Frenchman from Worcester, Mass., became welterweight champion of the world Friday night by pounding out a 15 round decision over Young Jack Thompson, San Francisco Negro. The bout was staged in the Hill last night being worn by betters who gave 18,500 spectators.

Brouillard sent his opponent to the floor for counts of nine in the tenth and thirteenth rounds and scored repeatedly with both hands to pile up a good lead in points. Thompson claimed a foul in the sixth round, but his claim was disallowed and the fight continued without further interruptions. The unanimous decision of the judges was popular with the crowd.

Brouillard was the second man to win the welter title from Thompson. The Negro took the title from Jackie Fields in 1930 but lost a ten round decision to Tommy Freeman before the year was out. Last winter Thompson and Freeman were matched for a return engagement, and Thompson regained the championship. Brouillard has beaten Thompson once before, but the first fight was an overweight affair and the title was not at stake.

Hollywood Gossip

The hot stage, heated to ninety-five degrees, in an aid in enacting anger and other violent emotions; the cold stage, at fifty-five degrees, is a help to an actor portraying hopelessness, mental depression and loss.

An experiment with temperature on the set of Paramount's "The Beloved Bachelor" resulted in these findings by Paul Lukas, Dorothy Jordan, Vivienne Osborne and Charlie Ruggles.

Robert Milton and other directors have banned the "Wa-Wa" brigade from Hollywood. This brigade comprises the atmosphere players who never can think of extemporaneous lines to fit scenes; instead of making intelligent conversation, they murmur "Wa wa, wa wa."

Jeanette MacDonald, Maurice Chevalier's queen in "The Love Parade," has been signed by Paramount to appear opposite the favorite Frenchman in "One Hour With You" and another yet to be announced. Miss MacDonald has been doing concert work abroad for the past several weeks.

Three loud rings of a bell in the Paramount New York studios mean that "shooting" is under way and everyone must keep silence. A former pugilist, "punch drunk," had not been advised of the rule. When he came onto the "His Woman" set, where Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper were starting a scene, the three bells rang.

He jumped from his seat and almost knocked out the assistant director before he was stopped.

David Mir, first cousin of the prince who slew Rasputin, the "black monk," is playing in Paramount's production of "Working Girls," with Paul Lukas, Judith Wood, Charles Rogers, and Dorothy Hall.

Frederic March will appear in eight transformation scenes before the eyes of the audience as he changes between his two personalities in Paramount's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."
