

SIGMA NU BEATS S. A. E. IN UPSET

Second Section Goes Into Three Way Tie as Morrie Long Defeats Grant and Harper.

Yesterday's ping-pong matches witnessed the unexpected defeat of S. A. E. at the hands of the Sigma Nu paddle wielders. S. A. E., with Bryan Grant and Gwen Harper playing previously had a perfect record, having won four games with no losses. Long was the hero of the match, first defeating Grant 6-4, and then taking the final set from Harper, 6-2, after the latter had beaten Lenior Wright by a close 7-5 count.

This unexpected win by Sigma Nu places three teams of the second division in a deadlock for first position. S. A. E., Pi K. A., and Sigma Nu have all won four matches and lost one. Three Teams Forfeit

As the tournament nears its end, the most numerous defaults seen in a single day resulted in Sigma Chi forfeiting to Aycock, Delta Tau Delta to Grimes, and Best House to Zeta Psi.

Phi Kappa Sigs Win
With Odum and Carson playing a steady game, Phi Kappa Sigma handily downed Everett. Odum won from Stoll by a love set, while his partner, Carson defeated Rosen 6-4.

Pi K. A.'s Are Victors
Woerner and McMillan continued their good play for Pi K. A. and easily bested Enloe and Tucker, playing for Phi Delta Theta. Both of the winning players took their sets by a 6-1 score.

Pi Kappa Phi Loses
Rosentrach, Lewis representative, vanquished both Dixon and Poole of Pi Kappa Phi, first defeating Dixon, 6-1, and then Poole by a 4-6, 6-1 margin.

Chi Phi Has Perfect Day
In the first love match of the tournament Abels and Hudson of Chi Phi took the measure of Seawell, S. P. E. pongster, 6-0, 6-0.

GREEN WAVE END OUT WITH INJURY

Jerry Dalrymple May Be Kept Out Of Rose Bowl Game New Year's Day.

Tulane's Rose Bowl hopes were given a severe jolt when it was learned Monday night that Jerry Dalrymple, the Greenie's great end, was confined in a New Orleans hospital from kidney trouble.

The injury was received in Saturday's battle with Washington State. Dalrymple felt no ill effects Saturday night, but collapsed the following day while driving.

Physicians said that only time would tell the extent of the injuries, and it was doubtful whether it could keep the Tulane captain from participating in the Rose Bowl game with Southern California New Year's Day.

Dalrymple said that he suffered his injury when he collided with "Turk" Edwards, Washington State's star and all-American tackle last year, after attempting to block the big westerner on the second kick-off.

The absence of Dalrymple in the lineup in the Rose Bowl game would be a serious loss to the Green team, which counts on his brilliant end play and his rallying power over his team mates.

Track Notice

Coach Bob Fetzer has requested that all men who are interested in varsity track meet today at Emerson field. The track schedule and plans for work after the Christmas holidays will be announced.

The general opinion among football officials is that something radical will be done at the next meeting of the football rules committee in order to decrease the number of deaths suffered while playing football. Thirty-one youths have died this year, more than ever before, and since something must be blamed, the kick-off takes the "rap." The general feeling is that if the flying wedge was eliminated, it would greatly decrease the chances for injury. So far, two methods have been advanced. The first and more radical is to eliminate the kick-off entirely and the other is to return to the teed kick-off. The latter method tends to increase the distance covered by the ball and thus give the ball carrier more chance to "solo." However, time will tell.

Southern Football Best

There can be little doubt that southern football has come into its own at last. 1931 has been a banner year for conference schools in intersectional competition. Whereas football's front line was in the west, the scene has now shifted to Dixie. Among the highlights of the past season were: Georgia's victories over N. Y. U. and Yale; Tulane over Washington State; Washington and Lee over Princeton; Vandy over Ohio State; and Tennessee's smashing, conclusive win over New York.

Tulane And Georgia Monopolize Daily Tar Heel Conference Team

Georgia Places Four Men on First Team, With Tulane Following With Three; Carolina Places McIver at Guard; Other Entries Are From Tennessee, Vandy, and L. S. U.

JACK BESSEN

Tulane and Georgia dominated this year's all-southern selection by accounting for seven men on the first-string eleven. Georgia with four men—Smith, Hamrick, Downes, and Maddox—led the field but was closely followed by Tulane's trio, Dalrymple, Zimmerman, and Felts. Tennessee, Vandy, Carolina, and Louisiana State each placed one man to make up the first team.

Dalrymple and Smith

There was little doubt who were the best ends in the south this year. Jerry Dalrymple, all-American end two years running, was by far the most outstanding end the south has seen in many a year. Most of his effectiveness comes in defensive play, although he is also a deadly pass receiver. Vernon "Catfish" Smith of Georgia extended his all-southern streak to three years, thereby setting some sort of a record.

The tackle positions offered more competition with four outstanding tackles, Leyendecker of Vanderbilt, Hamrick of Georgia, Patton of Sewanee, and Stark of V. P. I., with the first two mentioned winning the first-string berths. Leyendecker is the star of the Commodore line and is sure death on going under punts. Hamrick, the Bulldog star, is one of the best tackles at piling up the enemy offense.

McIver for Guard

North Carolina placed its lone entry in the guard positions. The writer has yet to see a guard in the south as outstanding in all the branches of the game as Staton McIver, the Tar Heels' 170-lb. bundle of T.N.T.

McIver plays most of the game in the opposing backfield, and is an expert, par excellence, at opening up a hole. The other guard berth was a battle between two teammates, Leathers and Maddox of Georgia. Maddox continued the brand of ball that won him all-southern last year and so was given first string.

This year there have been more outstanding pivot men than ever before, but the honor of making the first selection goes to a sophomore, Jack Torrence of L. S. U. Torrence is six feet four and weighs 265 pounds. Teams like Army and

TWO MAJOR GRID GAMES SATURDAY

Southern California-Georgia and Army-Navy Games Close Season Colorfully.

Of the choice games afforded the nation's football enthusiasts this Saturday, the two outstanding conflicts are the Army-Navy charity game at New York and the Georgia-U.S.C. tussle at Los Angeles. Earlier in the season, Army, adjudged as having only a mediocre team, fell before the onslaught of Pittsburgh's Panthers and on the following week rose to the heights and ran rough-shod over a supposedly superior Notre Dame eleven. As a result of Navy's surprise victory over Penn last week the traditional Army-Navy game takes on the color of former years.

The Georgia-University of Southern California game promises no little action as both teams have fine records, and each will be striving to establish the superiority of its respective section. Georgia will have an opportunity to offset the defeat received in the skirmish with Tulane, by defeating the Trojans Saturday. U. S. C. will have to be at its best to down the Bulldogs and if successful, has yet another obstacle in its path to national honors, namely Tulane's Green Wave, from the banks of the Ole Mississippi.

An added attraction for the spectators will be the individual dual waged by those two sterling quarterbacks, Austin Downes, of Georgia, and Gaius Shaver, U. S. C. Both men have been placed on various all-American selections and one or the other should come through.
