Lindbergh Still Hopes for Baby's Return

Colonel Lindbergh disclosed definitely yesterday that there was an original ransom note for the return of the Lindbergh baby, and this note was such as to provide an absolute means of identifying the kidnapers. Lindbergh also stated his certainty that agents of the kidnapers had received the $50,000 ransom which he paid about a week ago.

Hindenburg Is President Again

A final count yesterday in the German elections Sunday show that President Paul von Hindenburg defeated his Fascist opponent, Adolph Hitler, by nearly 6,000,000 votes. Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, at President Hindenburg's request, has consented to remain in office as chancellor.

Honolulu Trial Begins

The prosecution's side of the killing of Joseph Kahahawai was begun yesterday in the Fortescue-Massie "honor slaying" trial in Honolulu. The case is being tried before what has been termed the "whitest jury" ever called in Hawaii. Six men of American extraction and one of German are on the jury.

U. S. Would Ban War Tanks

Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson in an address to the Geneva disarmament conference yesterday proposed the abolishment of tanks, mobile artillery, and the use of gas.

Richard Whitney Questioned

Exposure of the "bears" of Wall Street was sought yesterday in the Senate banking committee's questioning of Richard Whitney, president of the New York stock exchange, summoned to produce full details of the larger short transactions in last week's tobogganing market. The investigation, long delayed, is an inquiry inspired by President Hoover, who believes the economic recovery of the country has been delayed by systematic and purely selfish beating down of stock and bond prices.

JOAN BENNETT STARRED IN FIRST COMEDY ROLE

Joan Bennett, usually associated with straight dramatic roles, turns comedienne in "Careless Lady," the new Fox comedy-romance in which she has the leading role opposite John Boles, and which will be shown at the Carolina today.

It was when "Careless Lady" first went into production that Miss Bennett proved her comedy technique equals if not surpasses her dramatic talents. Her role is that of a New England maiden, brought up by two very prim and sedate aunts. She rebels at repression and decides to go to Paris and learn to be sophisticated and attractive. This scheme would be excellent except for her arrest in a police raid, which gives her the notion of pretending to be the wife of a noted millionaire during her foreign tour.

Hot Headed Missouri Senator Expelled From University In 1799

This miserable joke grew into a story for a whole progeny of stories of his having been caught stealing as a young fellow.

Expelled Boy Sees Red

Another story is that Benton went into his roommate's trunk to get some money to pay for his laundry. He told his roommate later how much he had taken, and his roommate said it was all right. But when he later went to the trunk he found that more money was gone than Benton had said he had taken. Although Benton denied having taken more, his roommate preferred charges, thus causing his expulsion. As he left the University, he turned to a mob of jeering students and exclaimed wrathfully, "I am leaving here now, but damn you! you will hear from me again." And they did, as did the whole country.

Twenty-eight years later Benton was reinstated. The minutes of the society for May 9, 1827, Charles Biddle Sheperd: "I move that Thomas H. Benton be readmitted as a member of our society. I further move that a certificate stating the same, signed by the president and secretary, be transmitted to Mr. Benton." This motion was passed. Tradition has it that Benton returned the certificate with the laconic answer, "Go to hell."

There is much speculation as to why Benton did not resort to a duel if false charges were brought against him. It is known that Benton was not opposed to dueling even in his college days, for K. Battle, in his History of the University of North Carolina, states that "a distinguished statesman, Thomas H. Benton, figured in a dangerous fray, drawing a pistol on Archibald Lytle of Tennessee, the difficulty occasioned by Benton having struck his adversary's nephew, a lad in the grammar school. Lytle excused himself for not having engaged in the duel on the grounds that he had come a long distance for an education and could not afford to be expelled."

In spite of the hindrance he incurred as a result of the theft charge, Benton was one of the outstanding men in the United States Senate when that body included such famous statesmen as Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Robert Hayne, and Daniel Webster.

Pool Tournament

law faculty, George R. Lawrence also of the department of public welfare, and Dr. Harry W. Crane of the psychology department.

Dr. W. C. Coker is on the committee on the development of the beautiful in North Carolina while John Sprunt Hill of Durham, prominent alumnus of the University, is on the same group.

Heading the committee of recreation is Dr. Harold D. Meyer of the sociology department while Dr. S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the department of rural sociology, is chairman of the division on taxation.

Other local persons serving on committees are: Dean H. G. Baity of the school of engineering, public health division; Dr. W. B. Saunders of the department of sociology, on the juvenile court division. Dean D. D. Carroll is on the committee on taxation.

Charming (Mr. Davis gave him a regal number of extra names that are impossible to remember) was unexpectedly good. He moved about with the stage presence of a veteran, which he indeed is, and put over his lines with a surprising effectiveness. George Hogan, Cameron Murchison, Dicky Hobbs, and Baylor Henninger made fine palace guards. They were superbly martial in their stances, and they were natural in their crap game. The two gentlemen who staged the What-Price-Glory fight in the second act were excellent, and their bit deserved a separate mention of their names on the program. Out of the extra Ladies, Jean Breckenridge was most noticeable as the sophisticated wife of the professor. They, with Lucille Varner, Julia Booker, Sarah Summerlin, Betty Wright, and Nell Booker walked pleasingly across the courtyard, accompanied by Loren MacKinney, Edwin Tankersley, James Van Hecke, Edwin Graham, John Kenfield, and Aubrey Blake. Sim Nathan was the lamplighter of comic relief.

What this department wants to see is a request performance of Cinderella. It seems obvious that the play itself is worth it, and the size of the audience was an unfortunate thing that could surely be remedied. Requests for a return performance should be addressed to Mr. Harry E. Davis (and more power to him for a swell play).

Baseball Practice

In case of threatening weather this afternoon, the baseball team will meet at Emerson field at 4:00 o'clock. Thursday afternoon at 4:00 the Carolina baseball outfit will again meet the Durham Bulls.

days is reviewed and all details agreed upon. Then the team gives a program of two talks and several musical numbers.

Friday Program

Beginning early Friday morning every school in town, white and colored, is given a program of two or three short talks and a variety of music. The schools give a class period to this meeting. At noon the boys are guests of a civic club at luncheon, and render the program of the day. In the afternoon the list of school visits is completed, and a program given before a Parent Teacher Association and mother's meeting. Athletic matches are indulged in with the high school boys often on Friday afternoon. In the evening there is a mass meeting of older boys, or more often a Father and Son banquet, with the team doing a special program of talks and music.

Saturday Program

Saturday morning brings a mass meeting of smaller boys of the town at a theater, with talks and music, followed by two or more reels of comedy picture. From this meeting until mid afternoon musical programs are taken to county and state institutions within reach of the town. Then a hike with the scout-age boys to some convenient camp site for a council-ring program on scouting principles. Saturday night is an evening of fun. The high school boys bring their girl friends, and the team puts on a program illustrating materials appropriate for "An evening of wholesome fun." Then refreshments are served and the team spends the remainder of the time meeting as many boys and girls as possible.

Sunday Wind-up

Sunday morning finds a member of the team speaking to the Sunday school class of older boys in each church in town. The musicians also take part in the opening exercises of two Sunday schools. At the 11:00 o'clock hour the team takes over the service at one of the churches bringing in a faculty man from the University for the address. The local Hi-Y boys make a special effort to get a large attendance of boys for this service. The special choir number is given by members of the team. Sunday afternoon the team returns to the University.
