Honored By The University Today*Five Former Heads of Institution to Be Immortalized in Memorial
Program This Morning; Six Others Will Also Be Recognized.

Five of the eleven men whose names will be immortalized on the walls of Memorial hall this morning have guided the destinies of the University. Four were presidents, and one, Marvin Hendrix Stacy, was chairman of the faculty with powers tantamount to that of the chief executive. The remaining names include life-long benefactors and friends of the University.

This year's roll of honor was selected by the Trustees' committee on memorials which invited the families of the men to erect memorial tablets. This is the first year that formal ceremonies have marked the addition of cenotaphs to Memorial hall.

K. P. Battle Leading Name

One of the most illustrious of the names is that of Kemp Plummer Battle, president of the University 1876-1891. Following a brief career in state government, Battle played the major part in reopening the institution after the enforced closing in 1868. After a progressive administration, he retired to assume the chair of alumni professor of history which he maintained until his death thirteen years ago.

If for nothing else, President Battle will be remembered as the author of the official history of the University. Easily the most valuable book concerning the school, it is fit testimony to the love and devotion its author bore the University.

President Battle's successor, George Tayloe Winston, joins him today on the scrolls. He had the unusual record of having

The affairs promise added enjoyment this year, as they will occur on the week-end of the annual Duke-Carolina gridiron battle. Hundreds of alumni are expected to return to the campus for the game and the dances, which will be given Friday afternoon and night, Saturday morning, and Saturday night.

The departure from the original schedule is due to the fact that the historic Virginia-Carolina game will be played in Charlottesville Thanksgiving. The new arrangement allows the students to attend the dances and both important football games.

Medford told of the working of the bad check committee and the reasons for students giving bad checks. He said that only one per cent of the bad checks were given intentionally and that the majority were due to carelessness of the students. There were 1,600 checks returned last year covering an amount of $12,000. Of these nineteen per cent were due to the failure of the student to keep accurate accounts, eleven per cent were given with intentional deposit, twenty per cent were due to a misunderstanding with the home folks, two per cent were found to be due to the ignorance of the bank laws, ten per cent were caused by bank failures, and only five per cent were the banks at fault.
