SHERRILL DRAWS UP FINAL SYSTEM FOR AUDIT BOARD

Plans Completed for Auditing And Keeping Books of Student Activities.

The Student Audit Board announced yesterday through its auditor, R. H. Sherrill, that it has completed the system for handling all financial transactions of the member organizations. These transactions are audited by Sherrill and the books are kept by W. S. Klutz.

Last year the student body voted to create a Student Audit Board under whose direction all financial transactions of student activities would be audited. The Audit Board is composed of Dean Bradshaw and R. H. Sherrill of the faculty, Francis Anderson and Claiborn Carr from the student body, and Haywood Weeks president of the student body, who is chairman of the board.

Groups Included in Audit

The freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes, the engineering associations, the law, pharmacy, and woman's association, the student government and debating council, the athletic association, the student union, and the Student Entertainment Committee are the student activities which collect a compulsory fee through the University and which are forced to come under the supervision of the Audit Board according to the vote of the student body. The publication union is under the auditing system but as yet has not come under the book-keeping system of the board. Five activities have voluntarily come under the Audit Board. These are: the Y. Amendments To State Constitution To Be Voted On At Coming Election

Most Important Proposed Change Is to Alter Document So That Amendments May Be Added Through Special Votes of Electorate Instead of Waiting for General Elections.

A president will be elected or re-elected November 8. All the voters are fully aware of this. However, a large percentage of the electorate does not know that proposed amendments to the state constitution, measures of great significance to the citizens of the commonwealth, are to be accepted or rejected.

Legally, amendments are added to the constitution by an expression of the affirmative will of the people. However, figures show that a small percentage of the voters in this state actually consider and vote on projected revisions to the supreme law of their state.

Propose Change in Amending

In order to arouse interest in such additions to the state constitution, a new amendment is proposed this year which will provide for special elections to determine the fate of the constitutional amendments. This plan will change one sentence in Article XIII, section 2 of the constitution. As that portion reads now, amendments "shall be submitted at the next general election to the qualified voters of the whole state." It would be changed to read, "shall be submitted either at the next general election or at a special election to be called for the purpose."

The remaining amendments to be voted on at this election consist of one "to make the term of office of sheriff and coroner four years instead of two"; another, "to protect insurance for widows and children"; and a third, "providing for solicitorial districts."

Of these proposals, the one calling for special election for amendments of the future has aroused the most wide-spread discussion. The chief argument of those opposed to its passage is that it will be an unnecessary expense to hold a special election when the business could be transacted at a general election.

Refuting this opinion is the statement of the supporters of the measure to the effect that when men are running for office, the interest of the electorate tends to center upon the personalities involved rather than the issues. Consequently, few vote on the amendments, and those few seldom realize the significance of their voting.

Candidates Avoid Issues

The fact that proposed amendments are often governmental and not political in their fram-

RED CROSS WILL MAKE DRIVE FOR MORE MEMBERS

Local Campaign Will Begin Next Week With 1,000 New Members Set as Goal.

Beginning next week, the local chapter of the Red Cross will make a drive for members throughout Chapel Hill and the University, with 1,000 new members as the goal, according to information received from Joseph Hyde Pratt, head of the local organization.

A house-to-house canvass of the community will be made to secure 750 new members among citizens, and the dormitories and fraternities of the University will be covered by a number of students to get members and voluntary contributions. Students who are unable to join the Red Cross are urged to make contributions through the dormitory and fraternity representatives.

Students in Charge of Drive

William C. Medford, president of the inter-dormitory council, will conduct the drive in the dormitories, with one boy in each dormitory acting as assistant. The drive in Spencer hall and the two sororities will be carried on by Miss Elizabeth Moore, and fraternities will be covered by Irvin Boyle, president of the interfraternity council. The drive for members among graduate students is in charge of Horace Peters.

Pratt pointed out that it is of real benefit to students of the University to be members of the Red Cross, besides the aid they will give to others. In the past the Red Cross has been able to take care of a student who became seriously ill at the University, and who would not otherwise have been able to receive proper medical care.

Besides the members in the community, it is expected that at least 300 new members will be recruited among students.
