

PRESIDENT SAYS EDUCATION NEEDS MORE DEMOCRACY

Graham, in Speech at Columbia, Points Out Place of Education During Depression.

President Frank P. Graham gave his conception of the role of education in times of depression in an address to the district meeting of the Kiwanis clubs of the two Carolinas, in Columbia, S. C., Friday night. "Today," President Graham stated, "the new frontier and the chief economic and social factor in American life is public education. . . . If we fail there, we fail everywhere."

Place of Education

He further asserted that, "Basic as are the matters of deficits, debts, and the depression, there is something more fundamental at stake back of them all. In tightening up our budgets, we must not lose our democracy. One of the greatest needs in America is a reassertion, in the teeth of cynicism, in our faith in Americanism, in a deeper and a wider use of the ways and powers of democracy."

Equality Base of Democracy

Dictatorships, President Graham pointed out, encroach upon the ideas and processes of democracy throughout the world, whether as fascism in Italy, bolshevism in Russia or privileged interests in America. He stated further that the equality of our democracy and the future of our commonwealth rest in the opportunities open to the children in the public schools.

Evil of Cut Budget

He emphasized the danger of dropping hundreds of teachers in the Carolinas and the crowding of the increasing number of children in the room of the heavily loaded teacher, and the fact that it is the children who pay the costs necessitated by this wasteful economy.

"We stand for a budget of fairness, economy and excellence that will, as an expression of

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following are verbatim statements obtained from various members of the University faculty indicating personal reasons for their choice in the Presidential election next Tuesday. THE DAILY TAR HEEL regrets that the known Republican supporters were indisposed to public announcements of their views.)

William S. Bernard, classics department: "I am voting for Roosevelt, first, because I am a Democrat and believe that the doctrines of this party are for the interests of the people as a whole.

"I am voting against Hoover in particular because his constant policy has been to manipulate the functions of government in favor of special privilege of the five per cent, as against the ninety-five per cent.

"Again, I am voting as stated because Roosevelt seems to be intelligent and Hoover stupid."

Dr. English Bagby, psychology department: "I am voting for Mr. Roosevelt in this election principally because I believe that the Democratic tariff policy will establish more satisfactory economic relations with foreign countries."

FORREST TO READ HIS LATEST WORK AT PLAYMAKERS

"How It All Began" Will Be Read Here at 8:30 Tonight in Playmakers Theatre.

Belford Forrest, playwright and theatre director who is reading his latest play, How It All Began, at the Playmakers theatre tonight at 8:30 o'clock promises his audience "a peppy evening, even if they don't like the play." The public is cordially invited to attend the reading.

Speaking of the play in a recent letter to Harry Davis, he says: "It's all about the swell bunch who built the first theatre, and they were all just as tricky as theatre managers today, the idea being that the theatre world has never been otherwise and out of a great smouldering heap arose the priceless beauty of Romeo and Juliet, Hamlet, Othello, and such trifles.

The First Theatre

The first theatre was built by a butter and egg man (a grocer). The first deadheads crashed the gate before the first theatre was built—they started the free list in the lease. The partners fought, lied, stole, cheated—stopped just short of murdering each other. And so on and so on—the theatre is eternally the same. My opus tells the story of how old Burbage swindled his brother-in-law, a grocer, into building the theatre. It is a blasphemous, red-blooded, Elizabethan yarn, obscene and diverting."

Forrest motored up from Columbia, S. C., Saturday with a group of friends who are anxious to hear him read his play.

The visitors were also the guests of the Playmakers at the final performance of Uncle Tom's Cabin last night.

A theatre manager from New York who is very much interested in the play for a Broadway production will probably come down today to hear Mr. Forrest read his play and discuss the production with him.

'Y' CONTINUES TO AID FIRE VICTIMS

Local Y. M. C. A. Cabinets Active in Helping Colored Boys Of Palmer Institute.

Contributions to the fire victims at the Palmer Memorial Institute are pouring in thick and fast, according to Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the campus Y. M. C. A., who, with "Y" cabinet officials, is in charge of the general relief program. Contributions will be received at the "Y" or a boy will be sent for them upon request.

In a letter appealing to the campus "Y" for aid, Dr. Charlotte Hawkins Brown, president of the institution, who appeared here with the Sedalia Singers last Sunday, said that socks, underwear, shorts, shoes, pants, vests, overcoats, and hats were needed by her boys.

The Palmer Institute is considered one of the most progressive and beneficial institutions to the negro in the south. Located at Sedalia, N. C., ten miles east of Greensboro, the influence of the school has radiated out all over the nation through the Sedalia Singers, a group organized there, which has appeared in concerts in many sections of the country.
