DORMITORY CLUB AIDS RED CROSS

Several Suggestions Acted Upon At Meeting of Dormitory Presidents Yesterday.

At the second meeting of the Dormitory club for this year, Colonel Joseph H. Pratt, of the local Red Cross, asked the dormitory presidents for support of the local organization in its membership drive, and P. L. Burch, of the buildings department, announced that his department would co-operate with the club in making several changes that have been suggested by students.

The members of the club agreed to aid the Red Cross, and it was decided that the president of each dormitory would canvass his building for contributions Monday night.

The complaints sent to Burch were from the dormitories in the old quadrangle, asking for brighter lights in the lavatories and hooks for towels.

In connection with social activities, the club decided that each dormitory should have a social at sometime during the winter quarter, and it advocated that a room on the first floor be set aside for a common social room. E. C. Smith has promised to furnish passes for each of these social events.

At the close of the meeting the members of the organization attended a complimentary show for them at the Carolina theatre.

McKee Heads Junior Senior Dance Group

A committee for arranging plans for the senior-junior dance, which will close senior week next spring, has been appointed by A. S. Cate, president of the senior class. Headed by W. W. McKee, the committee will include also Francis Anderson, Sparks Griffin, T. S. White, and Lenoir Wright. The group will meet from time to time to draw up plans for the dance.

There will be a new system of delivering invitations for the dance which will be inaugurated by the committee. The bids will be delivered to each person directly instead of requiring each person to go to the "Y" to secure them.

WAYS OF HELPING BUSINESS SHOWN BY DR. MURCHISON

University Professor Tells Rotary Club That Bottom of Depression Is Passed.

"There is reason to believe the bottom of the depression has now passed, but the improvement has not in any sense reached levels that we could call general business recovery," Dr. C. T. Murchison, director of research in the University school of commerce, told the Chapel Hill Rotary club in an address at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

"Regardless of the change of administrations, our economic problems cannot be solved unless public opinion is mobilized as never before," Dr. Murchison asserted. "Our current operating expenses can be reduced some, but the principal item that absorbs our revenue, a fact which many seem to overlook, is the debt service."

Suggests Solution

One solution of the nation's economic problem, Dr. Murchison thought, would be a shortening of working hours, which would result immediately in increased employment. There must be, he said, an adjustment to the machine age which is here to stay.

Another solution, he suggested, would be for the country to put an end to financial buccaneering, such as Samuel Insull and many others have been allowed to engage in.

As one way of helping the international situation, Dr. Murchison recommended that America cancel debts due her by European nations.

"The only way we can collect now," he asserted, "is by taking goods from the nations who owe us or by reinvesting the proceeds of those debts in foreign countries."

"The new administration would be wise to cancel debts, and along with debts should go cancellations of reparations. This would do more to help bring back prosperity than any other one thing, I believe, for we have only begun to tap the possibilities of our economic life."

"In one year we could make up in income from increased trade any losses incurred by cancellation of debts, for our debt problem is now costing us more than twenty billion a year."

Herbert Hazelman Receives Wide Recognition For Musical Ability

"Danse Moronique," Work of University Sophomore, Inspired by Statement of Professor, Will Be Played This Week by National Symphony Orchestra in Washington.

Herbert Hazelman may be an answer to the frequent plea for significant American composers. While neither an infant prodigy nor a seasoned artist, the University sophomore has already witnessed national recognition of his musical ability. The latest indication of his importance as a promising composer is manifested by the fact that late this week the National Symphony orchestra will play his composition Danse Moronique in a concert at Washington, D. C.

The piece is to be conducted by Lamar Stringfield, director of the North Carolina Symphony orchestra, who will direct the latter half of the program, which will be given over to the works of American composers. Hazelman is to leave for the capital sometime today.

Inspired by Statement

His work is a genuine symphony composition, in no respect jazz. However, it has a rather jerky, modernistic movement. The theme was inspired by the widely publicized statement of a New York University professor, "Only morons whistle." With this idea in mind, Hazelman composed the piece with a movement somewhat similar to that of the tunes that are most often whistled. Thus arose the title, Danse Moronique.

It was written last fall between the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. According to the composer, the better part of a month was consumed in its composition and preparation for performance. It was originally written for a woodwind quartet of flute, oboe, bassoon, and horn and was played at the second laboratory concert of the Institute of Folk Music.

The Moronique Danse is the third movement of a suite which Hazelman is working on at the present time. He expects to complete the suite by the end of next spring.

After this rendition, Hazelman, acting upon Stringfield's suggestion, arranged the composition for orchestral use. Oddly enough, this highly technical work was performed while returning to school on a train.

Work Attracted Attention

As a concert selection the piece attracted immediate attention and has been used often in the last year. It was performed by the North Carolina State Symphony here last spring, while the Carolina Salon Ensemble offered Danse Moronique while on tour last year in Winston-Salem. Hazelman, personally, conducted the interpretation of it by the all-state high school orchestra in Charlotte this past spring.

The Asheville youth comes from a family which has displayed no marked musical talent. He says that no member of his mother's family is a musician, and that he knows little of his paternal relations, most of whom live in Switzerland. Hazelman, himself, never became interested in music until he entered high school.

Mastered Clarinet

At that time he began to study music by means of mastering the clarinet. While a high school student, he composed a number of small pieces for the use of the school woodwind ensemble. The

Dr. Hickman is generally recognized as one of the ablest preachers in North Carolina. His commencement sermon at the University last June, was well received. One professor who had heard the baccalaureate sermons for forty years said it was one of the three best in that long period.

Dr. Hickman is preaching every other Sunday in the new Duke chapel to audiences of 1,500 to 2,000 people.

FORUM DISCUSSES PROPOSED CHANGE IN HONOR SYSTEM

Daniel and Weeks Outline Plan; Forum Will Meet Next Week for Discussion.

At its regular meeting last Wednesday in Graham Memorial, the Union Forum engaged in a heated discussion on the proposal made by the student council in regard to the new additions to the present honor system.

Other business brought up in the forum was the reports of the two forum committees. The first, the committee to discourage walking on the grass, reported that their program had been completed and would go into effect as soon as the University grounds committee decided whether or not they would build new walks, or continue to use the old ones. The other, the entertainment committee, reported that the dances in Graham Memorial would be discontinued for the present and that other types of entertainment, namely, negro singers, well known speakers, and other entertainers would be substituted.

Proposal Outlined

The student council proposal was outlined by the ex-officio chairman, E. C. Daniel, Jr., and Haywood Weeks gave a brief explanation. A motion was passed to limit the speakers to a two-minute talk. After an exhaustive criticism was made by the members, a motion was made that the forum go on record as opposing the issue. This motion was tabled, and it was voted to continue the discussion at the meeting next week. The chairman announced that it was not the intention of the forum to take a vote, but to give the members an opportunity for discussion, and added that unless other plans were made the forum would meet next Wednesday.

Dr. William L. Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College and one of the outstanding educators in the state, will deliver the main address for the Armistice day exercises, in Memorial hall this morning at 10:15. Plans have been made for the local post of the American Legion to march to the exercises in a body.

He has likewise won recognition as an author. His most recent and well known books are: Can a Man Be a Christian Today? and The Way of Victory.

Reverend Ronald Tamblin, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will open the program with the invocation. Following this, Walter Patterson will play the national anthem on the organ, and Taps will be blown by George Lawrence. The oration by Dr. Poteat follows. PRATT OPENS RED CROSS ROLL CALL Talks at Carolina Theatre During Week to Urge Realization of Goal Set for Village.

Red Cross Roll Call week was begun last night by talks by Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the local chapter of Red Cross, in the Carolina theatre and in Spencer hall. "Prospects for our goal of 750 members in the community and at least 300 members in the University at present seem very bright," was Colonel Hyde's statement.

Beginning with the talk last night, short talks will be made between shows in the Carolina theatre throughout the week. Among the speakers will be a representative of the University student body and a representative of the local Kiwanis club, according to present plans.

On next Sunday, which is Red Cross Sunday, requests for new members for the organization will be made in the various churches of Chapel Hill, either by the pastors or by prominent members of the community. A brief talk at the Episcopal church will be made by Pratt.
