

ANNUAL MEETING OF ALUMNI WILL CONVEENE TONIGHT

Gathering Will Begin With Banquet in Graham Memorial At 6:30 O'clock.

University alumni, representing sixty local associations, will gather tonight for their annual meeting at 6:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial. President Frank P. Graham will make the principal address of the evening.

The meeting this year has been condensed into one session instead of extending over several days in order to allow more alumni to attend without making it necessary to spend too much time away from their business.

Banquet Tonight

The meeting will begin with a banquet which will be followed by a short business session. Kemp P. Lewis, president of the General Alumni Association for the last two years, will have charge of this. President Graham will then speak on the situation that the University faces upon approaching a new year.

The business that will require the attention of the annual gathering will be the reports of the executive secretary and treasurer, the nomination of candidates for the outstanding alumni offices, and the election of directors to succeed Grady Rankin of Gastonia and Tyre Taylor of Raleigh whose terms expire this year.

The officers whose terms expire this year are: K. P. Lewis of Durham, president; R. G. Stockton of Winston-Salem and Hugh Dortch of Goldsboro, first and second vice-presidents respectively; and Dr. Foy Robertson of Durham, athletic council representative.

Extend Entrance Date For Dramatic Contest

Original plays to be entered in the state contest to take place at the University in March may be submitted as late as January 16, instead of December 20, the time limit first set, officials of the group announced yesterday. The time limit was extended on account of the semester term in many of the schools. Mrs. Fussler stated that every effort will be made to return the manuscript to the authors promptly after the judges have selected those for production, so that groups may have sufficient time to prepare the play for the Dramatic Festival in March.

WOLFE APPROVES STATE INSURANCE FOR UNEMPLOYED

In Address to Rotary Club Professor Declares This Type Of Relief Inevitable.

Unemployment insurance as one means of solving problems for the millions of jobless in this country was advocated by Dr. H. D. Wolfe of the University school of commerce in an address before the Chapel Hill Rotary club at its regular meeting this week.

"Since a certain amount of unemployment is inevitable, its cost should go into the cost of producing goods and services, just as we figure depreciation," Dr. Wolfe asserted.

The speaker said there had been pretty definite opposition to unemployment insurance in this country, that it had been characterized as a sort of dole. Despite the defects of the system, England would not think of doing away with its unemployment insurance, Wolfe said.

Disease Toll Heavy

Pointing out that there are now around eight million men and women in this country who have been unemployed for from one to three years and that pellagra and tuberculosis are taking a heavy toll, Dr. Wolfe said that until comparatively recently "we have not looked upon unemployment as a social responsibility."

"But we have had a real change in our social thinking on problems of unemployment," he said.

Actor Says, However, That Englishmen Are Not Interested In American Lecturers.

By Donoh Hanks

"English actors do not come to America any more than American actors go to England," stated V. L. Granville, the distinguished British actor, in an interview Wednesday night previous to an amazing performance of his "Dramatic Interludes" at Memorial hall. In reversing a common American opinion, Granville turned in disgust from his laborious task of making up his face in his dressing room for his performance a few minutes later.

"American actors and actresses of the American stage are probably more popular in England than English actors in America," he declared. "Even American movies are as popular as British films." When asked why so many English dramatic actors tour America immediately upon achieving success in England, Granville answered that as often heard in England is the question "Why do American actors and actresses come to England?"

Granville Also Author

Granville is not only an accomplished actor, but an author of some note. Although proud of his English birth, he is bitter toward other Englishmen, other than actors, who come to America with the purpose of lecturing. "Americans are gullible

Local Barber Offers Services To State Of Alabama For Sustenance

Griffin, Cut-Rate Barber in Strowd Building, Claiming Three Years College Preparation at Furman, Shows True Missionary Spirit in Offer to Head of Alabama Schools.

In this great center of education where a retention of the present scale of salaries for instructors is a source of much worry, there is one citizen who has a true missionary spirit. Herbert Griffin, a cut-rate barber who operates a little one chair shop in Strowd building, has offered to teach in any state which cannot afford to pay its school teachers, asking only his room and board in return.

Last month Griffin, who is from Fairmont, read in a newspaper that country schools in Alabama would soon have to close on account of insufficient funds. Acting in the spirit of education, since barbering is not so profitable anyway, he sent an application to the state superintendent of education at Montgomery, Alabama.

Griffin's Plan

Griffin's idea was that grateful parents of the pupils in his school might gladly offer their homes to him, so that he might board with one family one week, with another the next week, and so on, at no expense to the state. To Griffin's great chagrin, the Alabama department of education, instead of accepting his application, referred his letter to the Associated Press, which promptly printed it throughout the country.

"School children cannot prevent the depression," he says; "therefore teachers should teach without any salary when it is necessary." He thinks "the right kind of education (excluding Mohammedanism, Buddhism, etc.) is one of our greatest civilizing influences."

MONROE DOCTRINE IS TOPIC OF TALK

Visiting Speaker Says That Policy Has Been Characterized As Both Good and Bad.

"The Monroe doctrine has become the scapegoat of international affairs, the subject of all kinds of misrepresentation and misunderstanding," asserted Dr. Carlos Davila, ex-president of Chile and former ambassador to the United States, in his address on "The Monroe Doctrine" in Gerrard hall Wednesday night.

"The Monroe doctrine has been given to the public as a series of contradictions: Now as an omen for Peace, and now as a dire menace; now as the lamb, and now as the lion," the distinguished South American diplomat and editor asserted. "It has been likened unto the dove legend, and to the hideous vulture."

This was the second of a series of lectures Dr. Davila is delivering here under the auspices of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

He gave his third lecture last night on "Economic Relations Between American States" and the final talk on "Cultural Reciprocity Between the American Peoples" will be delivered tonight in Gerrard hall. There will also be a round table conference this afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in Bingham hall. Dr. Davila will address the students in assembly today on student life in Chile.

GRANVILLE GIVES VARIED PROGRAM WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Distinguished English Actor Offers Well-Balanced Presentation in Memorial Hall.

V. L. Granville, the distinguished English actor, presented his "Dramatic Interludes," a well-balanced and varied presentation in make-up and costume from the drama of all periods, in Memorial hall, Wednesday night, before a large and appreciative audience. Granville said, as a prelude to his program, that the stage as an educational feature had a definite bearing on the progress of man. It was his opinion that the stage will always exercise a great influence over people.

Portrayed Characters

Granville portrayed noted characters in drama from the Bible up to the present period. His portrayal of Job was characteristic of his talent and ability for the role of serious drama, and the role of Lady Wishfort was an excellent interpretation of light humorous comedy.

The fine acting and the period costumes were raised to even a higher point of excellence by the remarkable lighting effects that were used.

Another feature of the evening's entertainment was the actor's ability to quick changes in costume and make-up, which he accomplished with only the aid of a very small red light attached to his make-up box.
