

LAST PLAYMAKER OFFERING STAGED ON OUTDOOR SET

"Midsummer Night's Dream" To Be Presented Tonight In Forest Theatre.

Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" is presented tonight and Saturday in the Forest theatre at 8:30 o'clock as the 15th outdoor production of the Carolina Playmakers. The play, directed by Professor F. H. Koch, is the final Playmaker presentation of the year.

"Midsummer Night's Dream" will represent the most elaborate of the Forest theatre offerings, eight of which have been Shakespearean. Unusual sets designed by Mary Dirnberger, fairy dances directed by Phoebe Barr and brilliant costumes by Oramae Davis will feature the play, together with the most talented cast presented during the season. Thor Johnson's Carolina Salon Ensemble will accompany the production with Mendelssohn's music.

Begun in 1919

Professor F. H. Koch is especially fitted to direct the play, with a broad background of Shakespearean drama. Koch instituted the Forest theatre tradition with "The Taming of The Shrew" in 1919 and has directed each of the following productions with the exception of "Romeo and Juliet" in 1930, in which he played Mercutio. All outdoor performances before 1926 were enacted by daylight, before the installation of lighting effects.

Professor Koch's interest in Shakespeare dates back to his senior year in high school, when he saw the celebrated Alexander Salvini play "Hamlet" in Peoria, Illinois. This was the first performance Koch had at-

HANDBOOK STAFF MEETING CALLED

Editor Expects to Have Work on Editorial Material Completed By Middle of June.

Carl G. Thompson, Jr., editor of the 1933-34 freshman "Handbook," has asked that his assistants on the booklet confer with him this afternoon as to the progress being made on completing the work to which they were assigned.

Thompson said that no definite date could be named for the publication of the "Handbook," but that he expected to have his editorial work completed before the middle of June.

Phil Hammer has been getting material from the churches and organizations to go into the "Handbook;" Bill Anderson was assigned to handle the sports section; and Charles Bond has been working with the Y. M. C. A. officials for the 'Y' section. Vermont Royster has prepared an introduction to the University for the book.

W. T. Minor, business manager, has begun work for the advertisements which are to go into the pamphlet. Thompson announced that the cover would be red with black letters, indicating the colors of the class of 1937, and that the content will include a short explanation of the activities and requirements of every important organization on the campus.

FOUNTAIN NAMED AS PHI SPEAKER FOR FALL TERM

A. S. Kaplan Elected Speaker Pro-Tem; Charles Bond Chosen as Sergeant-at-Arms.

Lawrence H. Fountain of Tarboro was elected over Red Rankin as speaker of the Phi assembly for the fall quarter of next year at a special meeting of the group Wednesday night. The election was postponed from Tuesday night due to dissension over the eligibility of various members to vote.

A. S. Kaplan was unanimously elected speaker pro-tem and the nomination of Charles Bond as sergeant-at-arms was unopposed. Other officers chosen were: Albert Ellis, treasurer; A. S. Kaplan, representative on the Debate council; Winthrop Durfee, reading clerk; H. Rubin, chairman of the ways and means committee; and Frank Edmundson and Ezra Griffin, assistants to Rubin.

Campaign Committee

The following committee was chosen to campaign for new members next fall: Ed Lanier, Charles Holley, I. S. Temple, and A. Ellis. After the incoming officers took places, the meeting came to a close.

Engineering Society Elects New Officers

At the meeting of the William Cain society last night, the University chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the officers for next year were elected. Fred E. Culbert was elected president, R. N. Dailey, vice-president, Sidney Franklin, secretary, J. Lynch, treasurer. T. F. Hickerson, professor of civil engineering, was re-elected faculty advisor of the society.

The senior trip is scheduled for next Wednesday to Roanoke, Virginia, where an inspection will be made of the steel mills.

BAND CONCLUDES CONCERT SERIES

University Symphonic Unit to Present Last Program Sunday in Hill Music Hall.

The University band, directed by Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will present its final concert of the year in Hill Music hall Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

The concert band numbers about 50 players and was selected from members of the parade band which was organized in the fall. It is one of the few symphonic bands in the country and has been recognized in a national survey as one of the outstanding college bands.

Vocalist Included

Sunday's concert will include a group of vocal selections by William G. Barnett, baritone. Barnett was recently selected for the solo part in the presentation of Gaul's oratorio "The Holy City," conducted by Professor Dyer in Fayetteville, and also appeared in Debois' sacred cantata "The Seven Last Words" presented at Elon College last month.

The remainder of the program will include five movements from a suite by Bach, "Andante" from Mendelssohn's "Italian Symphony," "Cubaland Suite" by Sousa, "Bolero" by Ravel, and Wagner's symphonic poem "Entry of the Gods into Walhalla" from the "Gotterdammerung."

PRESS PUBLISHES LIFE HISTORY OF FAMOUS ACTRESS

Biography of Fanny Kemble, English And American Stage Star, Latest Release of Press.

"Fanny Kemble," a biography by Dr. Leota S. Driver, has just been released by the University Press.

This work is a complete life of "the last of the Kembles" the historic family of the English and American stage. The early years of her life in England, her home, her years of study in France, her life in Italy and Switzerland and her happy 40 years in the United States, are all treated in the 214 pages of this book.

Her talents gained for her the recognition and friendship of the great and near great of two countries. She was received at court by Queen Victoria, and welcomed to the White House by Andrew Jackson.

Though opposed to slavery, she married a slave owner and lived for many years on his plantation in the state of Georgia.

Architect Lectures On New Tendencies

Albert Simons, prominent Charlestonian architect, delivered an illustrated lecture last night in Murphey hall on "Tendencies of Modern American Architecture."

The visiting speaker acquainted the audience with the development of American architecture and with the aid of illustrations, showed the tendencies of the art today.

Mr. Simons was brought to the campus under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects, of which he is a member. The program was sponsored by the Fine Arts committee of the University.

CHOIR TO APPEAR HERE IN BENEFIT CONCERT TUESDAY

Guilford College Group Brought To Chapel Hill by University Music Department.

For the benefit of the student loan fund, the University music department will bring to Chapel Hill the Guilford College choir for a concert Tuesday evening in Hill Music hall.

The choir is made up of college students who sing without accompaniment, and is under the direction of Max Noah. Now in its fifth season, the group has made great progress since its inception and is recognized as one of the finest musical organizations in the south.

Favorable Comment

Critics have commented favorably on the performances of the choir. A writer of the Baltimore Sun said: "The singing is infused with a serious religious spirit . . . which gives to the scholastic music that necessary touch of understanding which keeps it from being a mere vocal exercise in contrapuntal music."

Rob Roy Peery, noted composer and music critic, has said of the choir: ". . . every member gave evidence of careful training and thorough musicianship."

The program of the choir includes compositions of Mendelssohn, Healy Willan, Bach, da Palestrina, William Byrd, da Vittoria, Thomas Weelkes, Gretchaminoff, Nikolsky, Tschesnokoff, Christiansen, and Gustav Holst.

Tickets to the performance Tuesday may be obtained for 30 cents.

A similar benefit concert was presented several weeks ago by Kay Kyser and his former University of North Carolina band.

Stray Terrapin Finds Loving Care And Quiet Retreat In Battle Dorm

Tender-Hearted Student Offers Bed and Board to Wandering Reptile; Adopted Pet Provides Considerable Amusement And Embarrassment for Dormitory Residents.

"You like salads for meals, don't you?" the cashier in the Crescent cafeteria murmured in surprise when, for the second time that day, the grinning boy filed past bearing furtively upon his tray two orders each of spinach, asparagus tips, and lettuce.

Her surprise would have been still greater if she had noticed the boy furtively wrapping the "health-foods" in napkins. The mystery would have been completely solved if she had known about Xerxes, Xerxes who had adopted Battle dormitory as a place in which to live, Xerxes the terrapin. For the benefit of those not in the know, a terrapin is your old friend, the turtle. Finds Shady Nook

One clear day Xerxes had waddled into Battle, because near the madding crowd he loves so much, near the roar of traffic he knew there would be a congenial atmosphere.

He waddled into the open room and was seized with joy by the occupant, who sensed that here in the mute creature there would be a sympathetic soul, one who would always listen patiently and not escape through the nearest exit like a more human roommate.

But the adoption of Xerxes also involved certain responsibilities. Food must be procured, hence the odd diet found on the owner's tray at each meal. And Comfortable Bed

Any trouble incurred in raising the comatose terrapin was repaid during the week-end of the Junior-Senior dance set. Burning with youthful humor the owner managed to slip the horny-backed creature between the sheets of a neighbor's bed. When the roomer returned in the early hours of the morning he little suspected the presence of any bed-mate.

Other residents of Battle were let in on the secret and all gathered outside the door of the somewhat weary, unnaturally elated returned dancer.

It has been rumored that the results of the eavesdropping were so entertaining that the listeners have decided to pension the turtle for life.

Anchored to the radiator by a ribbon tied to its right hind foot, Xerxes basks all day on the window catching flies and bugs. The exercise he takes daily consists of an unwilling swim in the wash bowl for the edification of uninitiated residents of the dormitory.

Education School May Be Saved From Becoming Mere Department

Next Few Days May See Change in Course of Events and Prevention of School of Education's Relegation to Department in College of Liberal Arts.

Fighting against two powerful forces, both of them the results of state legislation, the school of education here may sink to the status of a department in the college of liberal arts. However, events of the next few days may greatly change this outlook.

Because the new school laws of the legislature have not yet been digested by officials in the school of education, and because the effect of a recent ruling favorable to the schools by the attorney general is not yet known, the school of education refused yesterday to comment on the probable course of future events. By next week, however, they may be in a position to discuss the future status of the school.

Enrollment May Decrease

The first of the forces operating against the school's life is the fact that free tuition has been abolished in the University at Chapel Hill. This means that, next year, over 400 students in the school of education will have to pay or drop out.

The second of these forces is the sharp reduction in salaries affecting the public schools. This reduction, which amounts to 32 per cent, means that the maximum monthly salary for four weeks would be $68.00, with the average salary amounting to about $55.00 a month.

The combination of these two factors means that a student, if he trains to be a teacher, must pay for tuition and at the same time realize that there will be practically no room for advancement above a pitifully small salary in this state. Apparently the only possibility of promotion would lie in his chances of teaching in another state.

May Become Department

If these antipathetic forces are not found to be weakened by the ruling of the attorney general, or by general improvements in the economic condition of the country, it is probable that the enrollment will decrease considerably. It is also probable that the course in education would become a department in the college of liberal arts leading to an A.B. in education.

Such a status of the schools of education both here and in Greensboro has in the past been recommended by a committee investigating the present three branches of the Greater University. The depression and recent state legislation may bring this change about, at least in this school.
