

FETZER BELIEVES STUDENTS NEED SPORTS PROGRAM

University Athletic Director Addresses Sophomore Class Assembly in Gerrard.

TOUCHES COACHING TOPIC

By the unanimous request of the executive committee of the sophomore class, Coach Bob Fetzer, director of athletics at the University, yesterday addressed the class at its weekly meeting in Gerrard hall.

Coach Fetzer spoke on the type of man whom the athletic council was seeking as head coach, but would not divulge any of the names of the many being considered. He commented on the fact that there is available a great many really capable men. "We have always tried and will continue to try to give as good an athletic program as possible here," said Coach Bob, "and in spite of financial difficulties we are continuing our schedules.

Athletics Desirable

"Athletics is a legitimate part of our educational program, and in that connection we are trying to provide in the way of a head coach of football, a man who fits into the picture. We want a man who thinks of football not only as a sport, but also as a part of this University's program—a man whom we feel that the campus will learn to love and admire.

"The Athletic council is doing a very thorough job. I believe that you will be satisfied with the selection it will make." Thus Coach Bob stated the position of the University on the coach.

McCORKLE TALKS ON MUSIC STUDY

Compares Music with Literature In First of Series of Wednesday Night Lectures.

"The great significance of music lies within its scope as a literature," stated T. Smith McCorkle, acting head of the department of music, last night in the first of a series of lectures on musicology in the Hill music hall.

In comparing music with literature, McCorkle stated, "Good literature, as I conceive it, is the product of thoughtful and sympathetic philosophy, and to me the literature of music is equally accurate, forceful, and intelligible in its portrayal of human philosophies and emotions."

In writing music, according to the music head, the characters are bits of tunes as in drama the characters are human personalities.

"The music writer allows the musical characters to pursue their own way in line with their natural bent, but they are also subjected to the environment of association with the other musical characters or themes."

McCorkle's talk is the first of a series of lectures which will be given every Wednesday night in the Music building on the general subject of music.

SNAVELY TALKS WITH OFFICIALS

Working their hidden ball play to perfection, Coach Bob Fetzer and Dr. Foy Roberson made a short gain yesterday in the coaching muddle. Slipping and weaving so no one could find them, the two members of the council conferred with Carl Snavely, Bucknell coach who was in Chapel Hill for the second time yesterday.

Coach Madison Bell, formerly of Texas A. and M., who was in town the early part of the week checked out of the Carolina Inn yesterday for Houston, Texas. Even before he had gone, Snavely blew into Durham for his second trip south in recent weeks and conferred with Dr. Roberson there coming to Chapel Hill later in the day. He looked over the University, chaperoned by Chuck Erickson.

Just as Bible and Morrison recommended Bell, Coach J. L. Marks, of Kiskiminetas prep school, recommended Snavely very highly. Marks has tutored such stars as Barclay, Cliff Montgomery, Joe Galus, Bob Hamilton and countless other collegiate stars who began their football career at Kiski. It is believed in some circles that due to the fact that Carolina has been getting some outstanding men from Kiski recently Coach Marks' recommendation will carry considerable weight with the council.

Bell Well Liked

Bell made quite a favorable impression with members of the council he met as well as other students that conversed with him. He was very well pleased with the set-up here, commenting especially on the beauty of Kenan stadium.

It was also learned last night through the Daily Texan, publication of the University of Texas that Clyde Littlefield, head coach of the Longhorn track squad and former head football coach, had been questioned by Coach Bob at Chicago through the Texas representative at the coaching meeting. Littlefield resigned the football coaching job this year but may be rehired. He was not considered very carefully but is out of the picture due to the fact that he has three years of his track contract to fill.

Dr. Pierson Leaves

Dr. William W. Pierson, dean of the graduate school, left last night to attend a three-day conference of the committee on graduate instruction of the American council on education.

Man-Hunting At Women's Colleges Provides Adventure And Romance

Dating Systems at Peace, Greensboro, Meredith, and Queens Found to Vary in Efficiency and Efficacy; Little Privacy Or Freedom Enjoyed Except in Chapel Hill.

There is adventure in dating a girl at most any woman's college in North Carolina. If it weren't for the fact that there are so many brothers and cousins and uncles floating about, it's wondered what the poor female would do with her weekends.

At Peace, unless he happens to be a cousin or a brother or an uncle, young men are supposed to avoid the campus except "weekendonly." When the time finally arrives, the Peace-pursuing fellow begins to feel belligerent. Before he can reach the longing lass behind the parlor door, it is essential that he deposit his chewing gum, brush his hair with the backs of his palms, and enter the dean's office. There he is tremulously presented by the female to-be-dated.

Strictly Private

The parlor doors having been propped open (in spite of drafts), the date ensues; conversation is helped along with an occasional contribution of students passing by, the dean in the next room, and a somewhat inquisitive night-watchman. The evening ends abruptly with a "tearing-away" of the young men beneath the spiral staircase next the exit. If one of them happens to look up, he invariably notes a long line of pajama-clad legs, making splashes of blue and green and crimson where legs are braced against the rails of the stairway. The young men cease their pondering over the flavor of lipstick they would enjoy most and stare

Mark Twain is spoken of as "a man possessed of such charm that, with his tongue and his pen, he could amuse the whole world." In regard to his actions the author says, "It is more important to know how an important American writer reacted to persons and objects in his environment than to theorize about how he should have reacted."
