CLUB TO STUDY CAUSES OF WAR

International Relations Club to Convene Tonight at 8:00 in Graham Memorial.

"Potential Causes of War Involving the United States" is the subject to be discussed tonight by the International Relations club when it meets in its regular fortnightly session in Graham Memorial at 8:00 o'clock. Harry E. Riggs, a member of the club's executive committee, will preside as chairman for this meeting. The subject for discussion was announced yesterday by B. C. Proctor, president of the club.

It is likely that the controversial Far Eastern question will come up in the meeting tonight, as a result of the recent talks and articles by Upton Close.

The previous meeting of the International Relations club concerned itself with the general subject of war. Tonight the subject will take a more specific form, when the club members will consider those influences in international relations which may draw this country into armed conflict with another country.

Students and townspeople who are interested in international relations are invited to participate in the club's discussions, which come regularly every other Sunday at 8:00 o'clock.

Di Senate Bills

The Di senate has the following bills on its calendar for discussion at the meeting to be held Tuesday night: Resolved: That the Dialectic senate should inaugurate an anti-war movement on the campus; Resolved: That the vocational placement bureau should be revived; Resolved: That admission to the Carolina theatre is exorbitant.

PORTRAITS PRESENTED

James Iredell and Alfred Moore, who served as United States Supreme court judges and who were members of the original board of trustees of the University, whose portraits were presented the law school in ceremonies yesterday morning.

Student Is Trusted To Make Wise Choice Of Courses At Minnesota

Need Not Attend Class and Gets Degree After Passing Five Comprehensives.

(Editor's Note: The following article is an editorial sent to the DAILY TAR HEEL by Phil Potter, editor of the Minnesota Daily, on the Minnesota plan of curriculum.)

Investigating the actual operation of the General College, we find that the student is recognized as an adult from the moment he registers to the day he graduates. His first contact with his college is likely to come through the official bulletin, and there we find each course described in detail. The officials of the college work on the theory that if a course is fully and accurately described, the student can be trusted to make an intelligent choice.

The student is graduated from the General College with the degree, Associate in Arts, at any time that he can pass comprehensives in five of the nine cultural fields offered for study. He selects the courses which, to his way of thinking, will best prepare him for these examinations. Although the normal amount of preparation for these comprehensives is two years in the General College, the student is considered mature enough to decide when he is ready for these tests, and hence is allowed to take them at his own pleasure.

Naturally the student need not attend class unless he thinks it worth his while. In the classes of the General College the lecturer's magnetism, or lack of it, counts very heavily. In the classes which are conducted by genuine teachers, in the strict sense of the word, the principle of the General College is being carried out with great success. Several of the classes are conspicuous for the high interest displayed by the students. These classes where students appear to be thinking and enjoying the process are those, without exception, which are taught by teachers of warmth and personality.

The General College, of course, draws almost all of its faculty from the other colleges of the University. Although its teachers are, for the most part, those who have distinguished themselves as appealing to students in other colleges, the General College cannot rise very far above the general level of teaching ability in this University. Our chief criticism of the

RALEIGH EDITOR TO GIVE READING

Jonathan Daniels of Raleigh News and Observer to Read "Iactus Novus" at 8:30.

Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, will read his new play, "Iactus Novus" (The New Cast) tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers theatre.

The play will be of particular interest to the students of the Roosevelt administration, as the play stimulates thought as well as humor.

"It is a satire of the New Deal with its scene laid in the Rome of Julius Caesar, who had his own troubles with feeding hungry people, rehabilitating stricken agriculture and so forth and so on. Today is not the first time in the history of the world that people have been hungry and didn't want to be hungry. In a way, it is a satirical consideration of the ancient miscarriage of millenniums and dictatorships," Mr. Daniels stated concerning his play.

Daniels wishes it affirmed that his play is a satire of the present rather than a story out of the past. Its problem is contemporary, dealing with the civilization that we live in. Jonathan Daniels was a member of the original group of Carolina Playmakers, and was a good actor in his time, Professor F. H. Koch stated yesterday. He was here at the same time as Paul Green, Tom Wolfe, and Elizabeth Lay, who is now Mrs. Paul Green. These people were writing plays to be produced in the auditorium of the Chapel Hill high school about 1919 and 1920. During his college days, Daniels was editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL and dramatic critic for the campus. He was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship for his novel, "Clash of Angels," a satire on "Paradise Lost."

Weak-end Rest

The following students were confined to the University infirmary yesterday: J. A. Alexander, G. E. Best, L. L. Copenhaver, M. E. Evans, Earl Freeman, H. C. Holland, R. H. Klingman, W. B. Patterson, R. E. Smithwick, L. C. Sistare, Milton Scherer, C. B. Tuxler, Ben Wyche, and Miles Winslow.

DR. HENDERSON SPEAKS

Manning hall was the scene of a distinguished gathering of members of the North Carolina Bar, members of the Society of Sons of the American Revolution, and alumni and friends of the University, who came here yesterday for the presentation to the law school of portraits of two eminent sons of the state who became early justices of the Supreme court of the United States—James Iredell of Edenton and Alfred Moore. Both were original trustees of the University.

The portraits were presented by the North Carolina Society of Sons of the American Revolution, of which Dr. Charles Lee Smith of Raleigh is president. They were accepted for the University and the law school by Dean M. T. Van Hecke in the absence of President Graham. The date of the presentation is the 144th anniversary of the date on which President Washington signed Justice Iredell's commission.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, of the University mathematics department made the address of presentation. The Iredell portrait was unveiled by Charles E. Johnson, Jr., of Raleigh. The presentation address was made by Alexander B. Andrews, prominent attorney of Raleigh.

The Alfred Moore portrait was unveiled by Cama Mary Clarkson, daughter of Francis O. Clarkson, of Charlotte, and

Minnesota Plan Evolved To Solve Problems Like Those Of University

General College, Separate from Other Departments, Set Up at Mid-Western School; One Similar to That of Minnesota Now Being Considered for Operation on Campus Here.

Considered from the standpoint of curriculum change at this University, the most striking feature of the Minnesota plan is that it was brought into being to solve problems with which the University of North Carolina is now faced.

One of the most salient facts which the Minnesota committee on administrative reorganization discovered was that only 50 per cent of students entering were reaching graduation. At this third largest university in the world the committee also found that there were from 1,800 to 2,000 students who did not pass into their junior year.

From these trends—and they are distinctly present on this campus—the Minnesota committee came to the decision that a reorganization must be made within the curriculum in order to meet the needs of that portion of the student body which did not reach graduation.

Accordingly, it made in February, 1932, a recommendation to the faculty that a general college be set up, separately from the other departments of the university. This general college, a prototype of which is being considered for this campus, was to meet the needs of non-graduating students, students who could not meet the entrance requirements of the various

SALON ENSEMBLE PLAYS TOMORROW

Thor Johnson to Direct Group in Program Before Freshman Assembly at 10:30.

The Carolina Salon ensemble, conducted by Thor Johnson, will render music at freshman assembly tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Johnson's program includes three selections by the orchestra and one piano number by Hubert Liverman.

The ensemble will play "Prelude" from the L'Arlesienne Suite by Georges Bizet as the first selection. "Dornroeschew Waltz," a number from Tschai-kowsky's "Sleeping Beauty" will be the second arrangement played.

Following this Johnson's band will play "Cortege du Sardar" from "Caucasian Sketches" by Michael Ippolitow-Iwanow. Hubert Liverman, pianist, will play John Powell's "Banjo Picker" in a piano solo.

T. Smith McCorkle, acting head of the music department will introduce the orchestra and make announcements.

Johnson, leader of the orchestra, organized his ensemble two years ago. Commenting on the orchestra, the last Yackety Yack states, "The accomplishment has been due to the sheer musical skill and organizing ability of the leader of the group, Thor Johnson."

The Salon ensemble is made up of a group of 20 musicians. Liverman, who will perform on the piano, is only a freshman.

Johnson's orchestra has been actively engaged on the campus, playing in concerts and in the Playmakers. It rendered recently the musical accompaniment to the production, "Princess Ida."

Devotionals will be led by members of the Freshman Friendship council.
