

DRAMA FESTIVAL CONTINUES TODAY AS KOCH SPEAKS

Carolina Professor Will Open Second Day's Activities of Annual Gathering in Playmakers Theatre This Morning at 10:00 O'clock.

MANY FEATURES TODAY

Speaking on "Our Carolina Theatre Advancing," Professor Frederick Koch of the University will talk at 10:00 o'clock this morning in the Playmakers theatre, opening the second day's program of the 11th annual Dramatic Festival.

"What Would Father Say," an original play production, written by Mary McIntosh, will be presented at 10:15 o'clock by Lenoir high school in the first of a series of productions staged for discussion and criticism.

"Judge Lynch," an illustration of an all-male cast, will be presented as a guest performance by Male high school of Louisville, Kentucky. This play is written by J. W. Rogers, Jr.

Pearl Setzer, E. C. Paget, Thomas Humble, W. R. Taylor, Elizabeth Farrar, and W. R. Wunsch will present short talks on selecting, casting, acting, diction, directing, and stage craft following the two plays.

Luncheon Session

A luncheon session, with R. C. Robinson of Goldsboro acting as toastmaster, will be held in the Carolina Inn at 12:00 o'clock. Speakers will be Pearl Setzer, Walter Spearman, Katherine Gaston, W. R. Hill, W. K. Morgan, and Frederick H. Koch. Talking on "A Dramatic Movement in Carolina," Mrs. R. H. Lewis, Mrs. Denis H. Sutton, and Miss Mary Heyman will address the group.

The final contest for play production of the city high schools will be started at 2:00 o'clock at the Playmakers theatre. Lenoir high school will present a play by Parker Hard, "The Gypsy."

"A Game of Chess," written by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, will be staged by Southern Pines high school.

The winner of the preliminary contest scheduled to be held this morning among Broughton high school of Raleigh, Hugh Morson high school of Raleigh, and Leaksville high school, will compete with the two plays in the afternoon.

At 4:15 o'clock the final contest of original plays of the junior colleges will be staged. Mars Hill Junior College will present "At the Sign of the Zodiac" by James M. Britt. "Nuts" by Evelyn Schaffle, will be produced by Biltmore Junior College.

Other Finals

The final contests in the production of original plays by individuals will be held at 7:30 o'clock. "Wings of the Eagle" by Walter Spearman will be given by the Charlotte Little Theatre Workshop. A Chapel Hill group will stage "Special Rates" by Bernice Kelly Harris, and Sedgfield and Jamestown will present "All out for the Game" by Waldeen White.

"A Woman's Way" by Ella Mea Daniel will be produced by Catawba College, opening the final contest in the presentation of original plays by senior colleges. "East is East" by Alice Deal is scheduled to close the Friday session, being presented by Lenoir-Rhyne College.

LIPSCOMB CALLS SPECIAL MEETING

Freshmen to Gather This Morning in Gerrard Hall at 10:30 O'clock for Reconsideration of Previous Action on Dance.

A special meeting of the entire freshman class has been called by President Nate Lipscomb for 10:30 o'clock this morning in Gerrard hall.

The meeting is to be for the purpose of a reconsideration and a new vote on the matter of the proposed freshman dance. At a meeting held the last part of last quarter, a vote was taken on the question in which those members of the class present voted for a formal dance. This was on the understanding that a series of dances would be sponsored jointly with the sophomore class.

Student Objection

After the vote had been taken there was considerable objection to the decision reached on the grounds that insufficient notice of the meeting was given and that the representation present was not large enough to give a true voice of the sentiment of the class. This movement was led by Norman Kellar, who presented a petition signed by some sixty members of the freshman class to the class officials.

The issue at the meeting this morning will center around the formality or informality of the dance. President Lipscomb, who has taken an impartial attitude in the entire matter, issued a statement at a meeting of the executive committee Wednesday night saying that it was his sincere wish that the best interests of the class be observed.

Special notice is called to the fact that the place of meeting has been changed from Memorial hall, as was originally announced, to Gerrard hall. This change has been made because of conflicts with the North Carolina Dramatic association.

April Law Issue Carries Feature On Constitution

Featuring a discussion of North Carolina's proposed constitution and carrying leading articles by other authorities, the April issue of the North Carolina Law Review was received yesterday for distribution to local subscribers and subscribing barristers throughout the state and elsewhere.

The review, which follows the usual form of having three leading articles in the first section and case comments by student editors in the last, features a leading article, Dean M. T. Van Hecke's discussion, entitled "A New Constitution for North Carolina."

Van Hecke in Favor

Pointing out the fact that North Carolina has not had a general revision of her constitution since 1868, Van Hecke, who has been an able adviser in the new movement towards revision, suggests that, in view of the fact that so many changes have taken place, the people might not be wrong in accepting the new constitution when the matter comes up for a plebiscite next November. The new constitution has already been accepted by the legislature.

The other two of the leading articles were written by Philip

Winston Emphatic In Defending Lee

Militating against usual conceptions of his subject and stating that he had found that he could take almost nothing for granted, Judge Robert Winston yesterday spoke at the Bull's Head on his latest biography, "Robert E. Lee."

Beginning with his statement as to the fallibility of popular beliefs about Lee, Winston went on to give examples of the points in which he found traditional ideas lacking in truth.

Lee Powerless

In answer to the contention that Lee could have averted the war by the slightest twist of his wrist, the speaker stated that the hero in that respect "was as powerless as an autumn leaf in a West Indian hurricane," and was, politically, of so little consequence at the time before the war that the papers rarely paid great attention to his movements.

Winston next took up the fight against the charge that Lee was a secessionist and had inherited the attitude from his father, "Light Horse Harry," stating that Lee's thoughts were centered on "his mother, Washington, and the Union."

Finally, in the role which has attracted considerable attention, Judge Winston saved the Confederate hero from the reputation of austerity to which so many model-seekers have condemned him, saying that he had been far from the gloomy person he was reputed and had lived the happiest days of his life after the war in the period in which he is usually represented as horribly persecuted.

Freshmen Make Strong Protest To Compulsory Gymnasium Work

University Must Require This Work, However, in Order to Comply with Rules of Education Association.

While gymnasium may add muscle to arms, legs, and waist, and while it may add a few inches to chest expansion and increase lung capacity, prevailing freshman opinion considers it is an evil. Freshmen as a whole seem to think that gym is unnecessary, advancing the fact that they have gotten along without it until they came to Carolina.

A surprising number of freshmen do not want added muscle. One freshman complains that he is so tight with muscle that he can no longer relax and no longer sleep comfortably. Perhaps the most common complaint is that the added muscle increases the sizes of certain organs of the body until clothes become too tight and have to be discarded, an economic evil. Then there is the classic story of the frosh who likes his clothes to fit snugly, who came to "collitch" with a new tuxedo and was soon unable to adorn himself therewith.

That the work of pushing up dumbbells is too strenuous is a common complaint. Thirty minutes without intermission leaves them "pooped out," world-weary, or just plain tired. One freshman querulously protested that he often missed supper because his legs refused to navigate to Swain. Very few stated that gym interfered with school work, although they wistfully added that they could well use the extra half-hour.

George Malone, Missing From University For Two Weeks, Located In Florence, S. C.

George H. Malone, University senior who disappeared March 21, has been located in Florence, S. C., according to a communication from the student's father received yesterday by Dr. K. C. Frazer of the department of government. The message was related by Dr. Frazer to Dean of Students Francis F. Bradshaw.

The dispatch, said Dean Bradshaw, contained no other information regarding Malone's actions except that he had a job in the South Carolina city. The student reported this fact to his father during a telephone conversation with the latter.

No reason for the boy's action was given, nor any account of the manner in which he was located.

Malone left Chapel Hill on a Durham-bound bus Wednesday, March 21, and no further news of him had been heard here since except a report that he had attempted to enlist in the army. Officials at the Richmond, Va., recruiting station wired here Tuesday that they had recognized the missing student from a picture in a newspaper.

George Malone, University senior, was located yesterday at a rooming house in Florence, S. C., where he was living under an assumed name. He had never been in Richmond, Virginia, as reported.

Malone, son of John W. Malone, Pensacola, Florida, banker, at first denied his identity, but under the investigation of Chief of Police E. R. McIver of Florence later broke down and admitted that he was the lost Carolina student.

According to Malone, he went to Florence March 22, the day after his disappearance, and found employment in a local auto paint shop where he has been working the last ten days. He said that he had been promised a permanent position at a Florence motion picture house.

He was registered under the name of George Murphy. He averred that he intended notifying his parents as soon as he was located.

Malone gave no reason for his leaving the University, but in a later telephone conversation with his father in Pensacola, he is quoted as having said he left because he was becoming dissatisfied with his studies. He will meet his father today.

According to a news dispatch, Malone appeared in the best of health and seemed happy after communicating with his father, who had instituted a nationwide search for his lost son.

Juniors-Seniors to Meet

A joint meeting of the junior and senior classes will take place Monday night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall for the purpose of selecting dance leaders for the annual junior-senior dance set. All members are requested to be present.

STAFFS TO MAKE CHOICES APRIL 12

Publications Union Board Sets Next Thursday as Date for Staff Nominations of Newspaper, Annual, and Magazine.

Staff nominations for the editorships of the DAILY TAR HEEL, the Carolina Magazine, and the Yackety Yack will take place next Thursday afternoon, April 12, it was announced yesterday after the weekly meeting of the Publications Union board.

Under the constitution of the Carolina Publications Union, the board is invested with the power to call for staff nominations for these positions. The Buccaneer has already held its nomination.

Extra Magazine Issue

At yesterday's meeting, the board sanctioned the publication of an extra issue of the Carolina Magazine this year. Although the magazine is contracted to appear only 14 times a year, distribution of holidays this year has made possible a fifteenth edition to be published late in May or early in June.

Action on the recommendation of the advisory board of the Student Welfare Division suggesting free subscriptions of local publications to high and preparatory schools in the drive for increased enrollment was postponed. The board was not willing to spend the money derived from student fees unless ratification by officials warrants the expenditure as justified.

Further investigation was made into the possibility of obtaining Associated Press service for the DAILY TAR HEEL next year. Definite action will be taken next meeting.

Infirmary List

The following students were confined to the University infirmary yesterday: Fannie Bradley, A. L. Clark, Helen Edwards, R. R. Leeper, Minna La Grand, J. N. McCaskill, R. W. Patrick, J. M. Rainey, and C. C. White.

UNIVERSITY CLUB STARTS DEFINITE DRIVE FOR ROOMS

Organization Fosters Campaign to Supply Adequate Lodging Facilities for Visitors at Annual High School Week Here Next Week.

NEW MEMBERS SELECTED

The University club, in collaboration with the extension division of the University under E. R. Rankin, has begun a concerted drive to situate competitors from state high schools who will be guests of the University next week-end at the annual high school week.

Agnew Bahnsen, Jr., president of the club, last night asked the cooperation of all students in making this year's high school week a success. A large part of the meeting of the club in Graham Memorial was devoted to plans for the occasion.

Due to the burden now on the University building department, it will be impossible to put new beds in all dormitory rooms for the visitors, and it will consequently be necessary for the men to double up Thursday and Friday night of next week.

High School Roster

Lists of the visiting high school students will be made available next week. University students are asked to cooperate by scanning the roster and agreeing to "bed up" with any of the high schoolers with whom they might have an acquaintance.

Final selections of the new men for the club were made at last night's session. It is expected that a list of the new members will be made public through the DAILY TAR HEEL early next week. Definite plans were made for the induction of these students.

Further plans were made for the University club banquet which will be held during the junior-senior dance set.

There will be a call meeting of the group in Graham Memorial next Tuesday night and according to Bahnsen, it is imperative that all members are in attendance.
