

DECREASE SHOWN IN REGISTRATION OF THIS QUARTER

Figures Show That There Are 96 Less Students Here Than Last Quarter and a Drop of 213 Compared with Number in School Last Spring.

HUSBANDS MAKES REPORT

Two thousand one hundred and ninety-seven students have enrolled in the University this quarter, according to a report made yesterday by Ben Husbands, assistant registrar.

This figure shows a drop of 213 individuals, comparing the number registered this period with the spring quarter in 1933.

The figure is also 96 lower than that of last quarter, 2,293 being enrolled in the University for that term.

Fifty-eight individuals have registered this period who were not in school during the winter, and approximately 100 persons here during the last period have not returned.

Not Great Decrease

The decrease between the spring and winter quarters this year is not as great as the decrease between the winter and fall periods, but enrollment has fallen off approximately 100 individuals each quarter.

Two thousand four hundred and thirteen people were in the University in the fall term this year and 2,293 in the winter, showing a loss of 120 as compared with the drop of 96 this quarter from the winter period.

Comparing the registration this fall with the enrollment in the 1932 opening period, there is a loss of 201 individuals, 2,614 being in the University in the 1932 fall term. In the winter of 1933 there were 2,497 in school, showing a loss of 204 in comparison with the last period this year when 2,293 were signed up.

Coach Bunn Hearn Now Beginning His 25th Baseball Season

along fine until the crowd raised a clamor for "Old Stuff" to come to his team's aid.

It was three men up and three men down the rest of the way. In addition Bunn laced out a triple which won the game for '33.

The secret is that the Tar Heel coach keeps himself in splendid condition and takes his practice licks regularly with "his boys." If he laid off a year, it might be hard to get that left arm right again.

"His boys" come first with the Carolina mentor at all times, but he gets just as big a kick out of the game as any one of them.

And that goes whether his team is flashing championship ball as it did last year or playing an average season as in 1932. The first year after he returned to Carolina.

For baseball is more than bread and meat to "Old Stuff," it is his spiritual food and his life. If you ask Bunn what he thinks of his prospects for this season, his typical reply is: "Well, we've got some good boys. They're mostly young and green, but they're hustlers and hard workers."

And if you press him for his opinion as to whether he will win the title again, his likely answer is: "Well, you can't tell just how fast the boys will come along. We ought to have a good team though next year."

And that is what Bunn likes. "Good boys" who "hustle" and "work hard" and have a chance to develop into a strong team. Coach Hearn was saying

Private Libraries Of Chapel Hill Contain Many Unusual Collections

"Prof" Koch's Assemblage of Playmaker Material Includes Every Article and News Item Written About Group; Most Complete Thoreau Collection in World Owned by Dr. Adams.

Although the University library is known throughout the south and the whole of the United States, it does not have a local monopoly on famous book collections. The private libraries of Chapel Hill are famed not only in this country but also in some cases in foreign lands.

Perhaps the most complete collection of its kind is that of Professor Frederick Koch, whose library contains over a hundred books in which the Playmakers and their work are recorded. Arthur Quinn's "History of the American Drama" contains a long chapter on Playmaker activities. The Playmakers are discussed profusely in Montrose Moses' "American Dramatists" and also in MacGowan's "Footlights Across America."

24 Scrap Books

Koch's collection contains the four volumes of Carolina Folk Plays, and all the issues of "The Carolina Playbook." His famous scrap-books, twenty-four in number, tell the complete story of the Playmakers, beginning with the North Dakota Playmakers and continuing up to date. These scrap-books contain every article and news story that was ever written about the Playmakers. They are also illustrated with scenes from various productions.

Dr. Raymond Adams has the most complete Thoreau library in the world. Adams owns first editions of "The Conquered Merrimac," "Conquered Days," and "Sonnets and Canzonets." In the collection is a valuable book from Thoreau's own library book on Minerology. A complete set of "The Dial" is also to be found in Adams' library. This collection contains over a thousand items by or about Thoreau.

Dr. Richmond Bond has two unusual and valuable collections. One contains the collected works of Addison, and also several eighteenth century editions of "The Tatler." The other is an almost complete library of eighteenth century burlesque poetry. Although there are many valuable items in his collection, Bond stated that his was a scholar's rather than a collector's library.

lections, Bond stated that his was a scholar's rather than a collector's library.

Humor Collection

A library of American humor is owned by George Horner. It has copies of "The American Jest Book," and almanacs, and also the burlesque of almanacs, Billing's "Komik Almanac," the Brother Jonathon (Uncle Sam) and John Bull tales, and sketches of local color interest, both southern and northern. The collection contains about four hundred items on American humor.

W. T. Couch's library contains books about books. There are books discussing the publishing and selling of books, and others that tell the whole history of bookmaking. "Geschichte des Deutschen Buchhandels" discusses the history of bookmaking from the time of Egypt, Greece, Rome, China down to the present. Couch's collection is a supplement to the library's books on the subject.

The late Dr. J. M. Bell had a collection of books and articles by James Watt, an ancestor of Bell.

Dr. N. W. Walker's library contains numerous school books, and books on education. Another of his collections, books and articles concerning North Carolina, has been given to the University library.

Dr. Gregory Paine owns several first editions of works by James Fenimore Cooper, which are extremely rare.

Until Dr. Archibald Henderson decided to sell his famous collection of Shaviana last year, his voluminous material on the great Irish dramatist was generally considered one of the best-known features of Chapel Hill. It is safe to say that the Henderson collection was one of the most complete accumulations of data on a living figure ever to be assembled in this country or Europe. For almost two decades scholars and interested parties from all over the world viewed Dr. Henderson's collection as the most authoritative source of almost any type of information regarding Shaw.

Junior-Senior Meeting

Classes to Elect Leaders for Dance Set This Spring.

There will be a joint meeting of the junior and senior classes Monday night at 7:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall. Leaders for the junior-senior dance set will be elected.

After the election the seniors will remain to elect the commencement marshals. This is a very important meeting, and all the members of the two classes are urged to attend.

STUDENTS SHOULD GET WINTER QUARTER MARKS

Students who have not as yet obtained their grades for the winter quarter are urged to get them from the office of the registrar in South building. There are still a large number of individuals in school this quarter who have not received their marks.

Grades were sent out to the parents of University scholars last Monday, but individuals in school this period will have no way to find out what they made on their courses during the winter unless they see the registrar.

About one-third of all students attending Columbia University are receiving scholarships.

Educational Committee Recognizes Ten Qualified Graduate Divisions

Half-Score of Departments of University Graduate School Judged Capable of Preparing Candidates for Doctor's Degree by Group Under Authority of National Council.

It was learned yesterday that ten departments of the University graduate school have been recognized as qualified to prepare candidates for the doctor's degree by a committee acting under the authority of the American Council of Education.

The department of sociology was the only department to receive special distinction by being marked "distinguished" by the committee. There were only five sociology departments in the United States to receive such qualification.

The other departments that were marked qualified are those of botany, chemistry, education, English, political science, psychology, romance languages, zoology, and classics.

First Such Survey

The list, which was compiled by a special committee on graduate instruction, was based on the first nation-wide survey ever made of the graduate schools known to be offering work for the doctorate. This report will appear in the April issue of the Educational Record.

More than 2,000 experts collaborated on the report, the inquiry being carried on for more than a year under the chairmanship of Raymond M. Hayes, president of Iowa State College. The special committee was appointed by the Educational Council in October, 1932.

Although neither complete nor free from mistakes according to the authors, the report is presented by the committee as a reliable guide, as far as it goes, to the judgment of a large group of our leading scholars relative to American graduate work.

Scholars Judge

The method used in the inquiry was to submit to scholars in each field of knowledge—whose names were supplied by the National Learned Society in that field—the names of all institutions offering work for the doctorate in their specialty.

Each of the scholars was requested to check those institutions that in his judgment had an adequate staff and equipment to prepare candidates for the doctorate and to designate by a star the departments of highest rank, roughly twenty per cent.

A majority of each separate "jury," that is those judging in any field, was required to place the name of an institution on the qualified list and also among those further distinguished to place a star beside the name on the separate classifications.

long double and went to third on McCarn's infield out. Then with Bullard laying down a neat bunt on a hit and run play Starke crossed the plate.

Carolina went ahead in the sixth inning as a result of Bullard's single, a stolen base, and a double by Pendergraft.

Winners Take Lead

The winners took the lead in the seventh frame with two runs and put the game on ice in the eighth with two more, as a result of three bingles, a triple by Gaylord, right fielder, and several poor plays by the Tar Baby defense.

Carolina put on a short rally in the last of the ninth, counting one tally on singles by Rainey and Dickens and a passed ball. However, the game ended a few minutes later when Dickens went out trying to steal third.

Pendergraft, catcher, was the only man on the Tar Baby team to collect two hits, one of these going for a double. Gaylord was the big gun for Roanoke Rapids, getting a single besides his triple. Dickens, shortstop, led the play of the fielders with three putouts and two assists.
