HOBBS DISCUSSES NEW STUDY PLAN

Liberal Arts Head Explains Causes for Changes in Curriculum to Di Senate.

Outlining briefly the situation which has led to changes in curricula at the University, Dean A. W. Hobbs of the college of liberal arts spoke to the Di senate last Tuesday night.

Hobbs stated that the University had been going along with a curriculum which had been fixed by old classical traditions but which had not produced the desired results.

Stagnant Methods

Stating that the effort at the present time is to bring the college courses into line with the modern world, the liberal arts school head pointed out that the world has been changing at an accelerated rate while educational methods have been standing still.

The new curriculum, whose central idea is to make unity between high school preparation and the first two years of college, lays emphasis on the three essentials of a college course, language, science, and history or social science, according to Hobbs.

Dean Hobbs pointed out special changes in curricula and said that the new changes would start affecting the first-year men next fall.

"Breeches" Bible Best-Known Item In Library Collection Of Rarities

Many Volumes from Earliest Printing Presses Found in Hanes Collection Which Also Contains Ancient Babylonian Clay Tablets; Famous Autographs Recently Acquired.

"Although the 'Breeches' Bible is far better known, we have several books in the library which are doubtless more valuable," said R. B. Downs. The "Breeches" Bible, it will be recalled, was ordered burned by Queen Elizabeth, England's dubiously moral virgin queen. In a chapter of Genesis, one of the verses reads, "And they made themselves breeches of fig leaves," a statement which offended the maidenly sense of decency of the queen. All copies available were heaped in a pile in London and were burned. A few copies somehow were saved, of which, the library owns one.

The nucleus of the rare books of the library is the Hanes Collection, founded by the Hanes family of Winston Salem. This collection was made for the purpose of the study of the development of the book.

The Hanes Collection contains about 530 volumes of incunabula, which is considered large. Incunabula is the name given to books printed during the first fifty years after the invention of the printing press. There are books in the library which were issues from such famous presses as those of Ratdolt, Jensen, and Aldus of Venice; Koberger of Nuremberg, and Wendelin of Speyer. One of the most interesting and valuable books is the Nuremberg Chronicle, a history of the world until 1493. It is remarkable for the fine quality of the paper on which it is printed, and for the

CAMPUS LEADERS TO BE INSTALLED NEXT WEDNESDAY

Harper Barnes and Virgil Weathers Will Make Addresses.

Students recently elected to campus positions will be inducted into office in a special ceremony in Memorial hall next Wednesday, it was announced yesterday by Harper Barnes.

Publication officials, class officers, and other new campus leaders will be officially installed into office.

Barnes, the outgoing student body president, will make his farewell address; and Virgil Weathers, the new student head, in assuming office will make his maiden speech to individuals in the University.

Dr. Frank Porter Graham, president of the Greater University of North Carolina, is scheduled to talk, but his appearance is not as yet definite.

JUDICIAL POWER GIVEN TO COUNCIL

Students Vote, 172-32, to Give Group Right to Settle Disputes on Campus.

Power was given the Student council to make rulings over all disputed acts of campus officers and student committees, subject to referendum of the student body, as a result of a special election held yesterday at Graham Memorial in which 204 votes were cast.

One hundred and seventy-two students cast their ballots for the plan of centralizing power in University student government, and 32 were against the proposal.

The vote yesterday gives the Student council the power to settle disputes and make rulings on arguments that arise among student committees and other student bodies on the campus, and the right to legislate on disputed actions of student officials. The student body, however, will have veto power over the council's ruling.

Barnes' Plan

The centralization plan is the result of suggestions made by Harper Barnes, president of the student body, and members on the present Student council. In the past the council has made rulings on student disputes on the campus, but has not been authorized officially to do so.

The proposal on the ballots read as follows and individuals registered whether they approved or disapproved of it:

"In case of a dispute as to the action of any student officer or the governing board of any student activity, the Student council shall make a definite ruling subject to referendum of the student body."

The plan to reorganize the Student Activities committee was not voted upon yesterday, because of matters being cleared up in regard to electing student members on the board.

Co-eds Elect Nelson And Taylor in Run-off

TRABUESUGGESTS CURE FOR CRIME AT MEETING HERE

Offers Vocational Guidance as Crime Solution Before Education Conference.

BRADSHAW ALSO SPEAKS

Vocational guidance was offered yesterday by Dr. Marion R. Trabue, noted authority in educational research, as a solution for many of the problems of crime.

"If we can find out what an individual can do best and enjoy doing at the same time and then connect him with that job, however menial it may be, he shall be going a long way toward solving many of our social problems; and yet that is but the ultimate goal of vocational guidance," Dr. Trabue, director of the bureau of Educational Research of the University department of education, asserted in an address before the Southern Regional conference on Vocational Guidance and Education being held here this week under the auspices of the National Occupational conference.

Over 100 Present

More than 100 leaders in education and industry, representing 17 southern states and several northern and western states, are in attendance.

Dr. Trabue, who a year ago completed a two-year stabilization research study in unemployment for the University of Minnesota that attracted nationwide favorable comment, told the conference that "the values of vocational testing and guidance programs, which are intended to determine the occupation for which an individual is best fitted and help him adjust himself, are already widely recognized by leaders in industry and education throughout the country."

Dr. Donald G. Paterson, professor of psychology in the University of Minnesota, another speaker on yesterday's program, pictured the need of a bureau of standards to co-ordinate various educational testing programs. Vocational testing has lagged behind intelligence testing but it will continue to improve in the light of improved methods being obtained through research, he said.

Reports of Progress

Reports on the progress of vocational guidance were made at group meetings by representatives from West Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Virginia, Louisiana and North Carolina.

Paul S. Achilles, managing director of the Psychological Corporation of New York, presided at yesterday's session.

Speakers at last night's session, presided over by H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools, Atlanta, Ga., were: Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, who told of the organization of student personnel work in the colleges, and Dr. Richard D. Allen, assistant superintendent of schools, Providence, R. I., who discussed the organization of guidance work in the secondary schools.
