BARNES INDUCTED BY UNION BOARD

Retiring and New Boards of Directors Plan New Wings To Graham Memorial.

The joint annual meeting of the old and new boards of directors of Graham Memorial was held Monday night in the banquet room of Graham Memorial at which the new director of the Union, Harper Barnes, was officially installed, to take effect August 1.

In the absence of Virgil Weathers, the new chairman of the board, Barnes officiated. It was decided by the board not to install furniture in the rooms of Graham Memorial that are used for private enterprises.

To Organize Programs

Predominant in the meeting was the discussion of future plans for the building. Plans were discussed for the finishing of the two wings that are yet to be built. It was also decided by the board that a plan for the unification of campus programs should be centralized in the building, with the director acting as chairman and assigning dates for various musical, dramatic and athletic programs, in order to prevent conflicts.

It was decided that members of both the old and the new boards of directors that are remaining in Chapel Hill this summer should have charge of the Graham Memorial administration during the summer months.

It is essential that both the old and new officers attend this meeting since the signatures of the latter are required for banking purposes. Reports for the current year, ending April 30, will be given to the old officers of each organization. Sherrill will also explain to the new men how the audit system functions.

TRABUE SPEAKS ON SOCIAL WORK

Declares Readjustment of Unemployed to Be Duty of Society, At Conference in Kansas.

Stating that the government could provide proper vocational guidance for one of its workers for the equivalent of the amount required to maintain a soldier ten days, Dr. M. R. Trabue, director of the Bureau of Educational Research of the University, yesterday addressed the National Conference of Social Work in Kansas City.

Dr. Trabue, whose address was entitled "Techniques in Readjusting the Unemployed to Industry," based his conclusions upon his recent experience as organizer of the adjustment service in New York and his connection with a similar bureau in Minnesota.

Blames Social Order

Continuing his discussion of unemployment, the speaker stated that any social order which permits its industrial system to throw laborers out of work in order to increase the operator's profits should be held completely responsible for the consequences.

As a suggestion for what should be done to prevent unemployment and the accompanying injustice, Trabue said that the state should keep its workers up-to-date by readjusting them to the changes in industry and by establishing a state organization which would guarantee greater social justice to its laboring class.

Discussing the technique of vocational readjustment, Trabue said, "The requirements of the job and the qualifications of the workers must be expressed in exactly the same scales and units, because the usual job analysis is made in terms of what is to be done rather than in the characteristics of the persons who do these things well."

The speaker also advised a modernizing of the classifications used by present vocational adjusters to designate the various occupations and the characteristics required by each, saying that the thousands of job titles that have been so long in use are in many cases confusing or absolutely meaningless.

WOMEN DEBATERS FAIL TO APPEAR

Contest Between Di and Woman's College Team Called Off By Greensboro Faculty.

The scheduled debate between the Di senate and the Speaker's club of the Woman's College of the University which was to have been held in the senate chamber last night was unexpectedly called off as a result of a communication received from Greensboro yesterday afternoon.

After the senate and a sizable number of interested persons had assembled, President Oettinger announced that he had received a letter stating that the Woman's College representation had been forbidden to come to Chapel Hill last night because of the approaching examinations, which will begin Saturday.

Senators Russell and Coffield, who composed the senate team, had very little to say regarding this turn of events. Russell's only remarks were, "I have nothing to say," while Coffield said, "I was quite disappointed when I learned that we were to be deprived of the privilege of debating the team from the Woman's College."

Favor Decision Debates

The calling off of the debate necessitated a change of program, so the senate passed on to a discussion of the bill: Resolved, that all University debates should be decision contests.

This bill was debated under the senate's plan of floor organization with senators Covington and Russell being floor leaders for the affirmative and negative, respectively. Under their leadership the debate moved rapidly to a climax which resulted in a favorable vote of 12-9.

Speaking for the affirmative were Senators Eddleman, Kendrick, Kahn, and Hunt. For the negative the speakers were Senators Russell, Weaver, Coffield, and Sarratt.

Human Skulls Stare Hollow-Eyed At Visitors To Weird Collection

Skull Cast Collection of Dr. J. B. Bullitt Begun Many Years Ago When He Was a Boy; Now Contains Many Skulls of Rare Value in Study of Prehistoric Times.

Monstrous and diminutive, of intelligent and of stupid appearance, anthropoid and human skulls stare in hollow-eyed inspiration of awe from the shelves of Dr. J. B. Bullitt's skull cast collection. Here is represented, as far as is known, each great step in the development of man, from the time of the Java "ape-man" to the different races of the world today.

Probably the oldest relics of which Dr. Bullitt has a cast is that of Pithecanthropus, or the Java "ape-man," as he is better known. This creature cannot be called ape, as his brain capacity is shown by the skull-cap to have been very much greater than any primate except man himself. Yet he ranks so far below later man that many hesitate to class him in the genus homo.

Ah, the Missing Link

Judging by his very scant remains and by the appearances of later types, Pithecanthropus resembles closely the imaginative portraits of the "missing link": bushy beetling brows; a head with hardly a forehead, suddenly receding above the heavily ridged brows; long, yellow teeth; a massive, underslung jaw jutting out from the

STUDENT LEAGUE DEFERS MEETING

Postpones Session Scheduled for Tonight in Order to Discover Opinion on Resolution.

The meeting of the Foreign Policy league which was scheduled for tonight has been postponed until the first part of next week, according to an announcement made yesterday by Agnew Bahnsen, chairman of the executive committee.

The meeting has been moved up in order to allow the league to contact more colleges and universities with reference to their taking action on the resolution which was prepared by the University group some two weeks ago with regard to the United States' attitude toward the disarmament conference to be held in Geneva, Switzerland, May 29.

This resolution, which is in the form of a petition to the President of the United States and the Secretary of State, has as its purpose to place before these high officials the opinions of the student body of the University of North Carolina as well as the combined views of colleges and universities throughout the south.

Sent to 36 Schools

The petition was sent to a group of 36 other schools for action immediately upon its being drawn up. Replies have been received already from the greater part of these schools, and in almost every case the outlook is exceptionally bright. Although a considerable influence might be exerted by those groups which have already been contacted, the league feels that no stone should be left unturned in increasing the effectiveness of its action.

It is more than probable that the University group will be the central force in collecting the joint resolutions of all those schools acting in conjunction

MUSICIANS OFFER CONCERT AT DUKE

University Glee Club and Salon Ensemble Make Second Appearance on Duke Campus.

Presenting the 97th concert since its founding in 1931, the Carolina Salon ensemble played in a joint program with the University Glee club in Duke University last night.

The musical program was given under the auspices of the Duke University Y. M. C. A. and was the last of a series of campus entertainments sponsored by the organization.

The concert was the second appearance of the Carolina Salon ensemble at Duke University. The presentation of the orchestra in the Woman's College at Duke was so well received that the men's campus asked to hear the musicians. Directed by Thor Johnson, senior in the musical school and founder of the orchestra, the Salon ensemble played three groups of selections.

Miller Directs Songs

Professor H. Grady Miller of the music department conducted the singing of the Glee club which rendered four sets of selections.

Hubert Liverman, pianist, played his own rendition of Mendelssohn's "Concerto in D Minor," opus 40, and was accompanied by the orchestra in a special subsidiary part arranged by Thor Johnson, conductor.

The orchestra played "Overture in D" by Gretry, "L'Arlesienne Suite number two" by Bizet, "Dornroeschen Waltz" from Tchaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty," "Procession of Caucasian Chiefs," by Ippolitow-Ivanow, and "Guitar Spieler" by Schytte.

The Glee club sang selections by Wagner, Bach, Gretschinoff, Mauder, and a group of Russian folk songs.

DANIELS REVIEWS AMERICAN POLICY IN LATIN STATES

Ambassador Gives Attitude of Aloofness as Cause of Unsatisfactory Relations.

TRACES MEXICAN REFORM

"Nations must mix to prosper," stated Josephus Daniels, United States ambassador to Mexico, in an address in Memorial hall yesterday sponsored by the University Foreign Policy league.

"Nations can no more live to themselves today than individuals can," said Mr. Daniels, reviewing how the United States tried to live to herself during the first part of this century.

Provincialism and nationalism are the causes of the recent depression, according to the Mexican ambassador.

"Nations can't sell to people unless they buy from them," said the speaker, telling how the United States has tried to act on the theory of trading at home to give every citizen a chance to get rich.

Talks on Mexico

Speaking on conditions in Mexico at the request of the Foreign Policy league, Mr. Daniels traced the development of democracy in the nations to the south and outlined their policies in relation to the United States.

"Mexico and Latin America feel today that a new dawn of national affairs has been born on this continent," said the ambassador, tracing the foreign policies of Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

South American states did not like the "big brother policy" advocated by Wilson, because nations don't like to be regarded as little brothers, according
