

KIDNAPER FIGHTS AS JERSEY TRIES FOR EXTRADITION

Trapped into Admissions; Wife Attempts to Establish Alibi; Testimony Is Vague.

CONFESSES LYING TWICE

New York, Oct. 15.—(UP)—Richard Bruno Hauptmann, trapped time and time again into damaging admissions, fought with all the tenacity at his command against the efforts of New Jersey authorities to extradite him during a three hour questioning today before a packed court room.

The German immigrant, wanted by Jersey officials for trial on a charge of murder, was forced to admit that he had lied at least twice previously in his statements to police.

Hauptmann confessed that he had not told the true source of the money hidden in his garage and that he had placed its sum at an incorrect figure.

"Not Ladder Builder"

However, he stoutly denied that he had built the ladder used in the kidnaping, insisting that on the night of March 1, 1932, when the Lindbergh baby was stolen he had dined with his wife in the Bronx and then gone home with her.

He explained that the gold certificates were hidden in the garage because he feared arrest on a charge of hoarding, but neglected to give a satisfactory explanation of how they came into his hands.

The pistol was also secreted, he said, because he had no license to possess it.

Mrs. Hauptmann and another witness sought to corroborate Hauptmann's alibi but their testimonies were vague and established no defense.

Tomorrow New Jersey will begin to prepare witnesses who will show that Hauptmann was in the vicinity of the Lindbergh home on the night of the kidnaping.

Thomas R. Curran Says United Press Often Has Trouble Finding Right Man for Job.

By NELSON LANSDALE

"The best experience in the world for a would-be newspaper man," says Thomas R. Curran, general manager of the southern division of the United Press, "is to work on a small-town paper where you have to do practically everything but run the linotype machine. You write obituaries and news stories and editorials and advertising copy day in and day out, and you can't help learning a lot about the newspaper game."

Curran's visit to Chapel Hill bears no relation to the fact that the DAILY TAR HEEL has recently installed the UP service. His headquarters are in Atlanta, Georgia. He and Mrs. Curran spent the week-end here as the guests of Dr. W. Leon Wiley, of the romance language department, and Mrs. Wiley. Young, sandy-haired, sparsely-built and pleasantly energetic looking, the United Press official evidenced great interest in publications at the University, largely because, he explained, the majority of the men working with the UP have come up into the service from college papers.

Journalism as Major

It has often been asserted by newspaper men that they prefer to engage a man who has not majored in journalism in college, on the grounds that they have one system to unlearn and another to pick up. When asked about the UP's principle on this, Curran said: "I don't think it hurts. Whatever you have to unlearn after taking journalism in college is more than compensated for by the general idea you get of what makes the wheels go 'round on a newspaper."

Speaking of unemployment, as acute in the newspaper world as in any professional field, he said: "You hear a lot about unemployment, maybe, but it very often happens that the UP has trouble finding a man for a job. Not that there aren't lots of names in the files—there are plenty. It's just a case of many applicants and few men suited for the job."

And Curran wasn't speaking of high-salaried executive positions in his organization. "You see," he said, "promotions in the UP are always made from the bottom up—nobody is imported" (Continued on page two)

LIBRARY RECEIVES NEW COLLECTIONS

Dr. J. G. deR. Hamilton of History Department Gathers Southern Material.

Hundreds of thousands of books, pamphlets, diaries, and letters, donated by individuals from all parts of the south, are pouring into the University library.

Most of these documents are acquired by the Dr. J. G. deRouillac Hamilton of the department of history, who makes frequent trips in this and neighboring states in search of them. Dr. Hamilton is directing an unique and important undertaking intended to throw a new light upon the history of the south and even to rewrite it in parts.

This undertaking is the extensive gathering together of material pertaining to southern history. At the present time the task of classifying the mass of material is being pushed forward by the University with the aid of government relief funds. Mrs. Lyman A. Cotten is in charge of this work.

Pettigrew Collection

So far, only thirteen groups of papers have been completely classified. Of these the Pettigrew collection is the most valuable. Beginning with a will dated 1685, one of the oldest North Carolina wills in existence, and containing letters written as late as 1931, this collection comprises more than 10,000 documents.

Several hundred letters written by members of the Pettigrew family while students at the University show that college life in the 1790's was not far removed from (Continued on page two)

NO WORD HEARD IN STOLL KIDNAP

"Zero Hour" Passes; Family Fear Woman Is Abandoned as No Message Is Received.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 15.—(UP)—The zero hour set by the kidnapers of Mrs. Berry V. Stoll passed late today apparently without word from the victim or the kidnaper.

The ransom note received by relatives threatened death to the victim "unless you get in touch with us in five days." The five days ended at 4:20 o'clock this afternoon.

Relatives have repeatedly denied that any word has been received from her abductor. A mysterious telephone conversation was reported Thursday between Berry V. Stoll and some anonymous person. After a few words were exchanged, the conversation was abruptly terminated.

The family of the kidnaped woman has apparently taken every possible step to facilitate contact with the abductor. All telephone wires and roads to the estate have been kept cleared and all federal officers and other police have been withdrawn.

When no word had been received at the end of the time limit today, the relatives' fears that Mrs. Stoll had been abandoned in some lonely spot received partial confirmation.

Committee Favors Student-Faculty Day

The Student Welfare board, in session yesterday afternoon, expressed itself in favor of the proposed student-faculty day as presented by Agnew Bahnson and J. D. Winslow.

The board favored the general idea of having a day set aside for the jamboree and appointed a committee, consisting of Bahnson, Winslow, and Albert Ellis, to draw up a written tentative program which is to be further considered by the board.

The group will meet in special session Thursday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock to consider the committee's program. The measure will be passed on to the faculty after Thursday's meeting with or without the board's approval. The faculty is to be the final authority on the matter.

Communism, Fascism Are Biggest Threats

Dr. E. M. Carroll Discusses Rise and History of Movements; Metzenthin Argues.

Speaking on the character and history of the crisis facing liberalism today, Dr. E. M. Carroll of Duke University addressed a joint meeting of the Y. M. C. A. cabinets last night in Gerrard hall.

"The greatest threats to liberalism today are communism and fascism," Dr. Carroll stated, tracing the rise of these two rival political institutions.

The common principle of communism and fascism is the concentrating of social organization for certain prescribed aims, he said.

Nationalism

"The underlying motive of communism and fascism states is the strengthening of the authority of power in the nation, rather than the improving of the social conditions of the state."

Dr. Carroll discussed the rise and history of communism and fascism, especially in Germany and Italy, and told of their victories over liberalism. "The world war precipitated forces against liberalism which were already in operation at the beginning of the conflict," he stated.

"Liberalism has two distinct advantages over its two rivals. Our institutions based upon freedom have the facility of a peaceful transfer of power from one political group to another without a revolution; and liberalism is founded upon the sovereignty of the people."

Clean House

Freedom needs a housecleaning, according to the Duke professor, who said that liberalism has to have the ability to adjust itself to the new problems of the future.

"Freedom must profit by the past mistakes of its enemies," he (Continued on page two)

COMMITTEE GIVES DECORATING PLAN FOR HOMECOMING

Fraternities to Decorate Around "Beat Kentucky" Theme.

The Homecoming Day committee of the University club yesterday announced the arrangement for the decoration of fraternities for Homecoming.

The decorations are to be built about the general theme of "Beat Kentucky." This plan of a general theme was decided upon so that there might be a definite basis of comparison for the judges in making their selection of the best decorations.

The decorations, which are not to cost above $15, must be completed by 10:00 o'clock Saturday morning, and will be judged between 10:00 and 12:00 o'clock.

The judges will base their decision mainly on the originality displayed, but the artistic merit will also be considered.

A silver loving cup is to be awarded the fraternity which, in the opinion of the judges, has the best decorations. This cup, on display in the window of Stetson "D," will become the permanent possession of the fraternity which wins it three consecutive times. It was won last year by Sigma Nu.
