

WESTERN POWERS OPPOSE JAPAN'S PARITY DEMANDS

United States and England Believe Japan Will Offer More Conciliatory Proposals.

ELSE WILL END PARLEY

London, Oct. 26.—(UP)—England and the United States today formed a united front against Japan's naval equality demands in the session of the naval parleys now in progress here.

It is believed that the two English speaking countries are ready to break off the preliminary naval conversations if the Japanese adhere rigidly to their present stand.

The only hope for the success of the naval conversations appeared to lie in the belief that the Japanese are prepared to produce alternative proposals more conciliatory.

Building Race Feared

These naval conversations are among the delegates from Great Britain, the United States, and Japan. They are supposed to pave the way for the 1935 naval conference. Indications are that the parley will turn into a free-for-all building race.

The Japanese delegates to the conference indicated strong terms at the opening session such as the recognition of essential preliminary negotiations for the new naval agreement with the United States and England.

The high hopes stated by the delegates from the various countries in their talks at the opening session for the successful termination of the conference were largely upset by the vast differences in the respective programs of the countries.

Japan threatened at the opening session of the conference to abrogate the Washington naval treaty of 1922, and also demanded that the powers recognize her equal right to protect her national security.

Members Found Immune May Break Fever Quarantine.

Members of the local chapter of Phi Delta Theta were tested yesterday afternoon by Drs. Hedgpeth and Berryhill of the University infirmary with special serum rushed by air mail from Atlanta.

The test was given to detect susceptibility to scarlet fever. The fraternity men have been confined since Thursday following the development of scarlet fever by one of the members.

Results of yesterday's tests will be known late this afternoon. Those men who register non-susceptible will be allowed to break quarantine.

The University administration has made special arrangements for the Phi Deltas to listen in on today's football game over a special system utilizing the Kenan amplifiers and the telephone line.

Sick List

The following students were confined in the infirmary yesterday: David Lewis, Charlie Hudson, George O'Hanlon, Jean McKay, Margaret Siceloff, Carl Peiffer, J. A. Blum, J. I. Munyan, and A. M. Page.

NEGRO IS TAKEN AND HID BY MOB

Father to Deal with Girl's Alleged Murderer, Says Alabama Mob That Took Negro.

Mariana, Florida, Oct. 26.—(UP)—The mob which today seized the Negro accused of assaulting and murdering a white woman tonight played hide and seek with officers of the law.

The Negro, Claude Neal, 23, was arrested last week on charges of assaulting and beating to death 20-year-old Lola Cannidy, who was feeding hogs on her father's farm 10 miles from here.

"Whatever He Desires"

Reports said that the mob planned to tie Neal to a stake and let the girl's father do "whatever he desires."

The Negro was spirited from the jail in Mariana to a jail in Brewton, Alabama, in order to escape mobs.

Today a hundred armed men forced open the cell in Brewton and took the Negro.

Robot Mutilated Before Assembly

Radium Screams Hatred for Men And Lust for Power.

An impromptu skit representative of "R. U. R." was presented by part of the cast of this opening Playmakers' production yesterday at freshman assembly. In order to prove to a girl that Radium, his robot, was only a machine, Dr. Gall cut off Radium's hand.

After the doctor's exit, Radium expressed hatred for men, saying that he would like to "divide Gall into three parts."

The playlet ended by the robot's shouting that he wanted "power! power! power!" and, kneeling, that "Allah is almighty! Allah is almighty!"

Connor, First National Archivist, Records U.S. History In The Making

Former University Kenan Professor Is in Charge of Hundreds of Priceless Documents Dating from Revolution; Articles Are Filed in Special Government Building.

Dr. R. D. W. Connor, former professor of history at the University, as the first national Archivist of the United States, will have complete charge of the records of our history in the making since this country was a tottering little nation newly freed from the yoke of Great Britain.

In Washington, D. C., at the apex of a triangle of government office buildings which would have put the Roman Forum to shame, his office facing on "the most beautiful street in the world," the former University professor will have in his care documents ranging in importance from the Emancipation Proclamation and the Kellogg Pact to a receipt for an old army payroll.

Carefully Protected

The thousands of priceless documents will be protected from light and too much dryness and careless exposure by every safeguard the government, working hand in hand with science, can devise for their preservation.

It will thus be possible for future generations as well as our own to view a letter from Stephen Decatur ("My country right or wrong, but always my country") which tells of a treaty made with Algerian pirates, John Adams' notification of his election to the Presidency, together with a draft of his inaugural address, records, diaries, log-books, treaties with every nation on earth, and even Great Britain's recent notification that she would be unable to meet her debt payment.

The declaration of America's entry into the World War cannot, for instance, begin to compare in glamor with the velvet box which holds the treaty between England and the United States at the conclusion of the War of the Revolution. Bound in velvet, decorated in gold, the parchment is trimmed with a red and gold cord and tassel, on the end of which is a silver box containing the great seal of England, and a beeswax reproduction of the personal seal of George III.

Decorated Treaty

Even the Kellogg Pact, bound in green morocco decorated with gold, tied with a red ribbon and a gold cord, and bearing names and seals of the fifteen signatory countries, cannot compare in interest with the letters of Louis XVI of France to President Washington. Louis XVI wrote to Washington as to a personal friend, telling him of the death of the dauphin, the birth of a princess, or a royal marriage. Another letter from France of a slightly later date carries the slogan: "Liberte, Egalite, ou la Mort," and the name of Robespierre.

GERMAN CHURCH RESISTS NAZISM

August Jaeger, Nazi Lay Counsellor, Resigns from Church Government of Mueller.

Berlin, Oct. 26.—(UP)—Opponents of the Nazification of the German evangelical church won a preliminary victory tonight with the resignation of August Jaeger, Nazi lay counsellor, from the church government of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller.

Jaeger's activities as assistant to the Reichsbishop and as extremist in the move to remodel the church along Nazi lines have led to serious internal dissension which is believed to have embarrassed the Reich government.

Conflict with Hitler

The Nazi government's program in regard to the church has long been a source of trouble, and this preliminary victory follows a dramatic crisis yesterday that led to an almost open break between Adolf Hitler and the Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller.

This is believed to indicate an early withdrawal of the Hitler government from church affairs.

"R. U. R."

Karl Capek's "R. U. R.", first Playmakers' production of the current season, will be presented in the third performance at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Playmakers theatre.

Directed by Earl A. Slocum, the Music department's 17-piece Carolina Concert orchestra will furnish music for the program. Rebellion against their inventors by Rossum's Universal Robots and man's struggle to perpetuate human life is the theme of the drama, a social satire.

Exposition Day Approved By Departmental Heads

Leon Kaplan and J. O. Jordan have been selected by Professors McKie, Olsen, and Woodhouse, who acted as judges at the try-outs last Tuesday, to debate against the team from Oxford University here Wednesday. Winthrop Durfee was named alternate.

WOODHOUSE ASKS PEACE EDUCATION

Professor Points to Present Rampant Nationalism as Possible Cause of War.

The records of history show that intense nationalism, when misused, has always led to war, Edward J. Woodhouse, professor of history and government, told the Chapel Hill Rotary club in an address Thursday night.

Professor Woodhouse does not agree with those who believe that man will always be a fighting race, but thinks that the dangers of war, particularly those dangers resulting from the type of nationalism rampant in some countries now, may be diminished through education for peace.

"The way to tone down nationalism to a sensible point," he said, "is to combine it with other peoples' nationalism, to consider their points of view. We should discourage smug Americanism, the belief held by some that we can do no wrong. We should combine with the British and French in efforts to promote peace."

The professor of government pointed out the proof afforded by history of the fact that war has always done more harm than good.

Service for Dr. Tayloe

Memorial Will Be Conducted Between Halves Today.

A brief, simple memorial service for Dr. David T. Tayloe, Jr., whose death occurred recently at his home in Washington, is to be held here between halves of the Carolina-State football game today.

Dr. Tayloe is regarded as one of the greatest football players Carolina has produced. He played on the varsity for four years, 1912, 1913, 1914, and 1915, being captain of the team in 1914 and 1915.

Plans for the service have been arranged by Robert B. House, administrative dean of the University, who was a classmate of Dr. Tayloe.

Members of the four football teams on which Dr. Tayloe played have been asked to gather at the Carolina players' bench after the first half when the service will be held. The group will walk to the middle of the field where a citation will be read over the amplifying system.

DATE DEFINITELY SET IN FEBRUARY

Celebration Will Present First Exhibition of University Intellectual Program.

22 DIVISIONS TO EXHIBIT

At a joint meeting of the special student committee and University departmental heads yesterday afternoon, the date for the first annual student-faculty day was set for the week of February 19-22.

The exact day in the week mentioned will be decided upon by a joint committee consisting of the student committee and a special group appointed by Dean House from the faculty.

The combined group, after deliberation, decided definitely on extensive plans for an exposition on this day embracing the departments of the University, their functions, accomplishments, workings, and administration.

The date originally set for the affair was November 7, but was tentatively decided upon in order to effect some basis for the development of plans.

This will mark the first all-University function presenting a complete exhibition of the intellectual program as embraced in the curriculum, administration, and student life.

Lawyers Recommend

A recommendation from the law school favoring some date in the future which would not interfere with the workings of that department was the first action which resulted in the creation of the new date. This statement expressed the desire that the law school and other professional divisions be exempt from participating in the day if it were to be held this quarter, due to interference in the regular work schedule.

Accordingly, discussion on a suitable day was begun. In order to make arrangements for the exposition, which will require an immense amount of work in preparation, the departmental heads decided that a date must be chosen which allowed ample time for this work.

Consider Legislature

Considering the expediency of holding the exposition during the legislative session in Raleigh, so that members of that group could attend, it was further agreed that some time during the winter quarter would be suitable.

Another point was the fact that Washington's birthday, recently omitted from regular University holidays, should be regarded and with these considerations, the group decided upon the week prior to this day.

A motion was passed asking all departments to begin plans immediately for the exposition, to decide upon methods of presenting the workings of each division as exhibits.

The exposition will not only serve the purpose originally presented of bringing a closer faculty-student relationships, but will also present to the students and the public an exhibition of the entire institutional program.

Outline Approved

A tentative outline was presented as drawn up by the student committee setting forth the entire program for the day. It
