Woodhouse Indicates World Danger Spots

Rev. Joseph Fletcher of Raleigh Reveals Racket of Munition Manufacturers.

AUDIENCE OF 150 PRESENT

The students' anti-war conference opened its series of two meetings last night in Gerrard hall, hearing Dean Elbert Russell of Duke, Professor E. J. Woodhouse of the University, and the Rev. Joseph Fletcher of Raleigh.

Bill Levitt, permanent chairman of the conference, opened the meeting before an audience of about 150. Harper Barnes, director of Graham Memorial, was elected temporary chairman, and had charge of the program last night.

Russell Speaks
"The greatest danger to the peace of the world lies in the Near East," said Dean Russell, head of the department of religion at Duke. "Japan is the primary menace."

Dr. Russell spoke of the need of Manchukuo, not as a reservoir for surplus population, but as a new source of raw materials to furnish Japanese factories. "When Japan was refused an immigration quota to the United States," Dean Russell continued, "her pride was hurt." The people of that country felt that they were regarded as unfit for citizenship as Americans, the visitor said.

"The Japanese debt is 500 million yen a year. This is absorbed by the merchants. How long they will continue to absorb it, I do not know."

Danger to China
In conclusion Dean Russell said that the only danger in

COUNCILORS STOP DORM SOLICITING

Inter-Dormitory Council Asks Co-operation in Move Against Potential Thieves.

Believing petty thefts on the campus are caused by solicitors going from room to room, the Inter-dormitory council Wednesday night resolved to forbid soliciting of any kind in the dormitories.

The immediate cause of the resolution was the recent apprehension in Old East of a shoeshine boy's attempting to steal some money. Subsequently he confessed the previous theft of $4. Other thefts this year, the council suspects, had a similar origin.

Asks Inspectors' Help
Dormitory councilors are to enforce a ruling already in effect which prohibits all types of soliciting. At the same time, the Inter-dormitory council will send letters to the various dormitory inspectors asking co-operation and pledging theirs in return.

At the same meeting the council passed a unanimous resolution in support of the Red Cross drive on the campus. It passed another resolution, to be delivered in writing, asking P. L. Burch of the buildings department to install glass-enclosed bulletin boards in the dormitories.

The council will meet again next Wednesday, before the Duke game.

PUBLICATION FEE SET FOR ALUMNI

P. U. Board Gives Former Students Special Rate for University Publications.

The Publications Union board gave its approval yesterday to a project to increase the circulation of the four campus publications by soliciting subscriptions from alumni of the University.

The plan, which was presented by Agnew Bahnson, business manager of the Yackety Yack, calls for subscription rates obtained by adding one-third as a commission for the solicitor to the actual cost of printing and mailing the publications subscribed to.

Students to Work
Students will be appointed to take subscriptions in their home towns during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays at the 25 per cent commission made possible by adding one-third to the cost of printing.

An increased circulation of the publications among the alumni will aid the alumni office in its work and also the business managers in securing better terms with national advertisers.

Yearbook Rates
Alumni rates for the Yackety Yack alone will be $3.50. The rate for all the publications together has not yet been worked out but will be obtained by adding the commission to the actual cost.

A proposal was also made at the meeting to set a flat rate for life subscriptions to the DAILY TAR HEEL, and a study will be made to see if such subscriptions are practicable.

FRESHMEN HEAR FIRST AID TALKS

Principles and Methods of Artificial Respiration Demonstrated Yesterday.

Freshmen were given a demonstration of artificial respiration yesterday morning in an assembly program sponsored by the American Red Cross.

Harry F. Comer, vice-chairman of the local relief organization, was introduced by Dean F. F. Bradshaw, who presided over the meeting, and told how the Red Cross functioned.

An outline of artificial resuscitation and the principles behind methods of life restoration were given by Lee Grier of the law school.

Has Many Uses

"Artificial respiration is useful not only in drowning cases, but also in cases of asphyxiation by gas or electric shocks," Grier said. "The breathing center becomes paralyzed following electric shock and no oxygen enters the lungs. The respiration administered forces out any foreign elements and gives the lungs a chance to function properly. This resuscitation method is valuable because one never knows when he may be able to help in saving a life," he concluded.

Ellis Fysal, assisted by three other students, then demonstrated the operation of artificial respiration. A show of hands proved that the majority of the class had had previous instruction in the process.

Dr. O. T. Brinkley, pastor of the First Baptist church, conducted the devotionals.
