

KINGFISH SEES FOOTBALL STAR ELECTED SOLON

Huey Also Provides for Debt Moratorium in Accomplishments of Week-end.

MASS MEETING AT L. S. U.

Baton Rouge, Nov. 10.—(UP)—Huey Long today arranged to abolish all old debts in Louisiana for the period of a two-year moratorium.

The Kingfish planned to crack his whip over the heads of his legislators and assemble them immediately to make his proposal law.

"Poor people need relief and I'm goin' to give it to 'em," quoth Huey. "All they have to do is prove they can't pay their debts, and we'll give 'em reprieves."

Mickal For Senate

In the meantime, he called a mass meeting of "all able-bodied, red-blooded, unterrified voters of East Baton Rouge parish," and induced them to elect Abe Mickal, Louisiana State football player, to the state senate.

Mickal's home is not in Louisiana, but in McComb, Mississippi, but that didn't matter to the gridiron-enthusiast, Kingfish.

A mass meeting was held in the Greek theatre on the L. S. U. campus immediately following the broadcast of the Louisiana State-George Washington game. About 600 students and town-folk attended and cheered. All of them voted unanimously for Mickal by raising their hands in response to the Kingfish's loud-mouthed commands.

When the election was over, Long announced that "Senator" Mickal would take his seat when the legislature convenes in special session Monday night.

Seventeen Jones Boys Think Band Leader Is Grandest Guy In World

Musicians Overlook Various Individual Accomplishments in Admiration for Isham Jones; to Play Here Friday, Saturday.

When you talk to any of the 17 human elements which compose the Isham Jones ensemble, you notice a certain unanimous feeling of loyal solidarity. The boys believe that "Ish" is the grandest guy in the world to work for and seem proud of being parts of the Isham Jones orchestra than of any special accomplishments they may possess as individual artists.

To toot their own horns for them, briefly: Maynard Mansfield is spoken of by those who know as one of the keenest tenor sax players in the country; John "Sax" Langsford is the tallest one of his trade in the United States, unless some newcomer wishes to challenge his title—he's six-foot-ten; George Thaw, the hot trumpet player, is a graduate of Harvard.

Versatility

The busiest man in the outfit would seem to be Eddie Stone, who used to play football for Wabash and Purdue, and who

"Stirring Drama"

"In 'Roll Sweet Chariot,'" according to Brooks Atkinson, dramatic critic of the New York Times, "Mr. Green tried to imprison the whole saga of the Negro race in America and to adumbrate his faith in the Negro future." Atkinson, in his lengthy article on the play for the Times, called Green's play a "stirring drama."

Green is an alumnus of the University and an associate professor of philosophy here. For the past year he has been on a leave of absence from the University writing scenarios for Hollywood movie producers. He has written the screen plays for several outstanding film successes including "Voltaire," "Doctor Bull," "Cabin in the Cotton," and for the forthcoming "Anthony Adverse."

Stage Work

Green's most famous work to date has been done on the American stage. His "In Abraham's Bosom" was a Pulitzer prize winner several years ago. Other successes include "The House of Connelly," "The Cabin in the Cotton" and recently "Roll Sweet Chariot." His "House of Connelly" was filmed under the name of "Carolina."

JAMES STEPHENS WILL READ TODAY

Noted Irish Poet to Read Selections from His Works Today in Graham Memorial.

James Stephens, famous Irish poet, novelist and critic, will read selections from his outstanding literary works at 4:30 o'clock today in Graham Memorial.

He will lecture on "The Irish Renaissance" at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night in Gerrard hall.

Little Known Here

Stephens, though rated among the greatest modern literary figures, is personally little known in America and his tour will bring him closer to Americans. Though until recently he confined his writings to his beloved Ireland, his latest works show the effects of English and American travels.

Among the most famous of Stephens' writings is "The Crock of Gold," which early found favor with American readers.

Since "The Crock of Gold," other of the Irishman's works which have received distinctive recognition include "Deidre," "In the Land of Youth," "Etched in Moonlight," "Little Things," and "Green Branches." Several publications of Stephens' collected verse have appeared.

As an interesting conversationalist Stephens is said to be unequalled.

Love Of Dogs Lures Irish Poet-Novelist To America

"Sort of Honorary Dog Myself," Says James Stephens, Who Should Be Pleased with Chapel Hill Canidae.

James Stephens, the noted Irish poet and philosopher, who will read his poetry this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in Graham Memorial, and who will lecture in Gerrard hall Tuesday evening on "The Irish Renaissance," will come to Chapel Hill from Columbia, S. C., where he has been lecturing this week.

A great lover of dogs, it is probable that the author of "The Crock of Gold" will find himself in congenial company on the campus and on the streets where, muzzled and unmuzzled, grizzled and frizzled, dogs have free reign.

When Stephens' publishers, the American Book Company, tried to persuade him to come to this country, he was slow about deciding until he heard that a fancier over here had a number of especially fine Eskimo dogs. Mr. Stephens is especially fond of Eskimo dogs, and wrote at once that he would come.

When he disembarked from the steamer in New York the usual newspaper reporters were on hand to ask him what he expected to find in America on his first visit. Mr. Stephens gave the reporters, expecting a statement on our tall buildings, our machinery, or our folk-lore and our jazz, rather a shock. "The reason I came to America," he said, "is to see some dogs." He told them of his fondness for dogs. "You see," he added, "I'm a sort of honorary dog myself."

Not only an Irishman and an honorary dog, Mr. Stephens is a novelist and poet, the author of "The Crock of Gold" and "Deidre." "The Crock of Gold" won the Polignac Prize in 1912, and "Deidre" won the Tailltean Gold Medal. For a while Stephens was a lawyer, only to become a poet and an Irish patriot, deeply versed in Gaelic art and literature. He speaks, reads, and writes the ancient tongue of Ireland.
