"Browsing Room" Plans Meet Set-Back; No Room Available

R. B. Downs, University Librarian, Heartily Endorses Idea But Says That There Is at Present No Free Space; Matter of Expense Also Obstacle; Advocates Not Discouraged.

While the controversy about the location of the proposed browsing room in the library rages in the column provided by the DAILY TAR HEEL for the expression of campus opinion, R. B. Downs, University librarian, comes out with a statement.

"The browsing room should logically be a part of the University library. I want students to associate not only required reading but also reading for pleasure with the library. Such a room could be most efficiently administered under the library roof."

Cold Water

Practical-minded Librarian Downs proceeded to throw what browsing room enthusiasts may consider a dash of cold water on the plan.

"At present," he said, "every suitable room is filled to capacity with other books and until additional space can be provided there is no space free. Another

LINDY DENOUNCES HERR HAUPTMANN FOR KIDNAP HOAX

Bereaved Colonel Testifies Defendant Is Man Who Collected Ransom Money.

HAUPTMANN UNDISTURBED

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 4.—(UP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh stared into the eyes of Bruno Hauptmann today and swore he was the man who collected $50,000 as the price for the life and safety of a child that was already dead.

It was the most damaging testimony offered so far against the prisoner, but if Hauptmann realized that he didn't show it. All spectators in the hot, little New Jersey courtroom seemed more interested in the testimony than did the man whose life hung in the balance, and who sat all day with arms folded and a blank look molded on his face.

Identified Voice

Lindbergh further testified that he recognized Hauptmann's voice as that of the man who took the ransom.

Defense Attorney Edward J. Reilly, in cross examination, revealed the line of defense that will be followed.

He will try to prove either, first that somebody slipped in the front door of the Lindbergh home and carried the child down stairs and out the front, ignoring the fact that a ladder was found outside the nursery window, or attempt to prove, second, that somebody handed the baby out of the crib, and that neither Hauptmann nor anybody else actually entered the room after climbing the ladder; that instead they stayed outside and received the baby from someone inside of the nursery.

The American flying ace was excused in the middle of the afternoon. The last witness of the day was Mrs. Elsie Whately, widow of the Lindbergh butler, who denied her husband was a philanderer and recounted events of the kidnaping day.

Court was adjourned until 10 a. m. Monday.

The recent appointment of six new Kenan professors at the University is a major event of this University year. The appointments have met with wide approval, most enthusiastic among those who are intimately acquainted with the members of the faculty as teachers and scholars.

The new appointments are as follows: John F. Dashiell, head of the psychology department; William M. Dey, head of the Romance language department; Gustave A. Harrer, professor of Latin; Edgar W. Knight, professor of education; George Coffin Taylor, professor of English; and Erich W. Zimmermann, of the department of economics and commerce.

The Kenan Professorship Endowment and Reserve Fund, which made the appointments possible, was established at the University in 1916 by the will of the late Mrs. Mary Lilly Kenan Bingham, in memory of her father, William R. Kenan, and her uncles, James G. Kenan and Thomas S. Kenan.

Professor Dashiell, a teacher of unusual powers, eminent among American psychologists and one of the recognized leaders of the Gestalt school, is the Dean Bradshaw outlined, in the absence of President Mullis, a plan that will make the members of the executive council the "antennae" to whom the freshmen may individually suggest the types of programs that they prefer.

Sub-Committee Suggested

He suggested that President Mullis appoint a sub-committee from the executive committee which will assist Dean Bradshaw in the actual arrangement of the programs.

During freshman assembly, Dean Bradshaw announced that, during the winter quarter, freshmen will be required to assemble only on Mondays and Fridays, except when special sessions are necessary. The deans of various schools, he announced, may still call meetings
