

TWO WITNESSES CLINCH CHARGES AGAINST GERMAN

Identify Hauptmann as Man Who Handed Condon Note to Taxicab Driver.

"LIAR," SAYS HAUPTMANN

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 8.—(UP)—Something snapped inside of Bruno Hauptmann today, and suddenly he sat up and began a fight for his life.

It was just in time, as the state had brought two men to the witness stand and had them swear Hauptmann had committed two damning acts.

First, he drove a green automobile along the road to the Lindbergh house on the day the baby was kidnaped, and, second, that 11 days later he handed a note addressed to J. F. Condon, kidnap go-between, to a taxicab driver.

Calls Witness Liar

Hauptmann, calling one witness a liar, classed another as crazy; but neither judge nor jury heard him. It was the first time Hauptmann had shown the slightest interest in what was said by witnesses.

Minor morning witnesses identified ladders in the courtroom in connection with the case.

The last witness of the day was Al Reich, former "Adonis of the prize ring," who through a love of outdoor and indoor sports became a close friend of Dr. Condon. After telling of accompanying Condon on the rendezvous at the cemetery with the extortioner, he was dismissed, to be called back to the stand tomorrow.

Five or six witnesses from the Morgan Bank, including one of the partners of the famous House of Morgan, will testify, Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., announced tonight. Their testimony will be concerned with the delivery of $70,000 in ransom money to Lindbergh, and the checking of the serial numbers.

STATE SYMPHONY TO CHANGE BASE

Will Present First Concert in Raleigh January 15.

Raleigh, Jan. 8.—The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra will move its headquarters to Raleigh January 14 and will play its first concert here at the City Memorial Auditorium Tuesday night, January 15.

The orchestra, the only state symphony in existence, has been making its headquarters at Winston-Salem since September and has played concerts throughout western and central North Carolina.

The first concert to be given here, which will inaugurate a series of weekly performances, will be a standard symphony and will feature George Gershwin's famous "Rhapsody in Blue."

Since the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra was placed on a permanent basis last May, three cities have been used as a base from which the orchestra went to various cities throughout the state to carry the symphony music to the public. Chapel Hill was the first. Last summer the orchestra moved to Asheville where it remained until September when it transferred its headquarters to Winston-Salem. Raleigh is the fourth

"I'm A Good Boy," Says Haywood; But Chapel Hill Isn't Quite Certain

"Imagine my surprise," said Haywood Weeks yesterday, "when I heard that a warrant was about to be issued against the Student Co-operative stores for violation of the law."

The DAILY TAR HEEL reporter tried hard to imagine, but he is no good at it, no better, in fact, than he is at mumbly-peg, or conundrums.

"Look at me," plead Haywood. "Don't I look like a good boy?"

Then he had to explain. Haywood said that the low-down on all the eye-brow raising was that he heard his step-child, the Co-op, was not in compliance with a North Carolina statute requiring every business house not operating under the name of the owners or else. Else pay the owners or lese. Else pay $50 or spend 30 days like a bird in a guilty cage.

Scrams—to Hillsboro

Now, Haywood is a good boy. Haywood is conscientious. He scrambled to Hillsboro last Friday and immediately filed the names of the Co-op directors with the clerk of the superior court of Orange county. Clerk Nixon, who is also a conscientious fellow, scratched his head and remarked that it was the first case of its kind he remembered in his three terms, come Michaelmas.

SOLONS INACTIVE; WAITING FOR F.D.R.

House Marks Time with Investigation in One-Hour Session; Senate Declares Recess.

Washington, Jan. 8.—(UP)—A four-day-old 74th Congress, faced with finding work for 3,500,000 unemployed and other tremendous tasks, found itself with virtually nothing to do today, so the House started an investigation.

Roosevelt's practice of sending only one piece of legislation at a time caused the delay. With the first item on the schedule, a social security plan for enactment, he is expected to transmit a message on the subject late this week, putting the law makers to work in earnest.

Discuss World Court

While the Senate recessed, its foreign affairs committee met to discuss a resolution for American adherence to the World Court.

The House, which expected to take up the $750,000,000 independent office bill, the first departmental appropriation measure of the session, was delayed by the fact that the appropriations committee wasn't completed until today.

Consequently, the House confined itself to a one-hour session during which it launched the first investigation of the new Congress, an inquiry into the real estate bond holders protective committees. The House also received several bills of resolution.

The Senate is in recess until Thursday.

Yale Professor Praises University Architecture

Dr. E. V. Meeks, Dean of Yale School of Architecture, Says Best Characteristic of Our Buildings Lies in Harmony of Colors; Disappointed in Gothic Structures at Duke University.

By J. E. POINDEXTER

"I was greatly disappointed in the architectural effectiveness of Duke University because its Gothic buildings are not in harmony with its natural setting," said Dr. E. V. Meeks, dean of the school of architecture and director of the Yale art gallery. Dr. Meeks visited Chapel Hill Monday and lectured under the auspices of the Southern Art Society on "Trends in Modern Architecture."

Asked if he favored any special type of buildings for college constructions, Dr. Meeks declared that he did not. "There is only one condition that I make," he remarked; "the buildings must have a native appropriateness. For example I should not like to see a Gothic cathedral standing in the midst of a pine forest. Such a setting calls for Georgian or some other style of building design native to the south."

Harmony

Dr. Meeks was unbounded in his enthusiasm for the sound architectural qualities of the University buildings. He pointed out that the best characteristic of our buildings as a group lies in their pleasing harmony of color. He offered as a cause of this condition the fact that locally produced sand, clay, and stone were used in the construction of the older buildings, all of which blend in a variety of tawny shades.

Jeffersonian Trend

He declared that the architectural trend of the campus dates from about 1830. It owes its origin to Thomas Jefferson and other amateur architects of the period, who based their designs on classical lines. The Playmakers theatre with its Jeffersonian corn capitals and simplicity of line is the best local example of this trend.

Someone laughed and asked Dr. Meeks to criticize the Morehead-Patterson tower. The laugh turned to a dry grin when Dr. Meeks replied, "It's very good, I think. Of course, it's built on a small scale; if it were a third larger it would be better." "What about the fool's cap on the top?" he was asked. "That's all right, too," continued Dr. Meeks. "The trouble with you fellows is that you are too close to the University to criticize it fairly. You can rest assured that your bell tower is better than the majority of such structures."

Most of Dr. Meeks' criticism was directed at the library.

University Club To Circulate Petitions For New Bus Schedule

Organization Adopts New Sales Campaign

Group Arranges Schedule for Welcoming Visiting Athletic Teams During Quarter.

Forty petitions were distributed to University Club men, representing every campus dormitory and fraternity, yesterday afternoon to be circulated for the signatures of all students interested in the establishment of a new bus line by the Atlantic Greyhound Lines through Chapel Hill.

The petitions will be collected next Tuesday and forwarded to the North Carolina Utilities Commission, which body will hold a hearing January 22 on the Greyhound line's proposal for a new route from Greensboro to Raleigh via Chapel Hill. If the commission grants a certificate of operation, the new service will begin immediately.

Speedier Transportation

The new bus service will provide a much speedier trip to both of the main points and connecting centers on either end of the new line. The Greensboro-Raleigh route is the only unlinked distance of any importance in the Atlantic Greyhound's southern system, and if the privilege of connection is granted, will afford direct connections for all parts of the country.

As proposed, four buses will be east- and west-bound daily, the rates being considerably cheaper than those now charged and the trips negotiated in much less time.

Students are especially requested by the student committee in charge of the petition-signing to avoid duplication of signatures or fictitious names.

Other business of the University Club meeting yesterday, after petitions had been distributed, included the arrangement of the club schedule for visiting team welcomes during the winter quarter and the adoption of a sales campaign presented by Agnew Bahnson.

Jack Pool, president of the senior class, yesterday announced the appointment of Billy Pitt as chairman of a trophy committee.

The action of the committee will consist of gathering all University athletic trophies and other awards, and arranging them in an attractive display in Graham Memorial.

The collection will be made in hopes that it will lead to a permanent trophy room. According to Pool, at present the awards are scattered all over the campus with no permanent display. The exhibit in Graham Memorial will be the first time that all the trophies have been displayed together.
