PLAY PRESERVES ISLAND CULTURE

McMullan Drama Is on Bill of Three to Be Presented by Playmakers Tomorrow.

Playing the role of Cottie in her own original drama, "Cottie Mourns," which will be presented on the bill of New Carolina plays by the Carolina Playmakers tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, Miss Patsy McMullan, versatile Playmaker, will be attempting to preserve the local color that is fast vanishing from Ocracoke Island off the sound of North Carolina.

Passing People

The island of "bankers," as the fisher folk of Ocracoke are called, are falling prey, according to Miss McMullan, to a thin, cheap, "paste-board" civilization that is pouring in on them from the inland of our state.

With the inrush of the new people, the "bankers" and their old Elizabethan Devonshire accent, their simple, hardy ways of making a living on the "banks" are fast disappearing.

"Cottie Mourns" is Miss McMullan's third drama. The folk-comedy was presented on a Playmakers experimental bill last year in which production were featured Mildred McMullan and Robert Barrett who will play their same roles in tomorrow night's performance.

Wilton Mason and the author herself complete the cast.

SENATE APPROVES QUARTER SYSTEM

Motion Requiring Pro or Con Statement Before Taking Rostrum Is Defeated.

A listless discussion on the University quarter system was turned into a highly hilarious harangue last night as the Di Senate returned to new business to debate a motion requiring each Senator to state his view on the bill under consideration before speaking from the rostrum.

It was following the vote on the quarter system bill that Senator Kind proposed that each member of the Senate be required to state whether he favored or opposed the bill he was about to discuss before actually debating on the question.

Defeated

After numerous speeches by the senators on Kind's proposal, the bill was defeated almost unanimously.

The bill, Resolved, that the quarter system should be continued at the University of North Carolina, was unanimously approved.

Members of the society discussing the bill were Senators Kind, Howell, Stein, McKee, and Weaver.

By a vote of nine to eight the proposal, Resolved, that continued appropriations for relief are harmful to the future of the working classes, was defeated.

Senator Blackwell led the affirmative on the question and was assisted by Dacy, Yeatman, and McKee. Senators Fletcher, Kendrick, and Rawls rallied around Floor-Leader Eagles, who headed the negative forces.

The next session of the Senate will be an executive session. President Lee announced that every member would be required to attend and that reports are expected to be submitted by the chairmen of all Senate committees.

Richard B. Harrison Bemoans Difficulty of One Night Stands And Day Coaches.

PLAY GROSSES $3,000,000

New York, Feb. 26.—(UP)—De Lawd sat in a room in Harlem recently, his fingers folded over his bulging vest, and talked about his troubles just like a mortal.

"De Lawd never knew de trouble I had," said Richard B. Harrison, shaking his long white locks mournfully. "One night stands! Day coaches! Auditoriums! My, oh my!"

The 70-year-old Negro actor came in off the road only to begin his fifth year in the role of "De Lawd" in Marc Connelly's amazing play, "The Green Pastures," which has grossed more than $3,000,000 since Broadway managements refused to handle it, played at Baltimore to its 1652nd audience recently.

One Night Stands

"Ninety-three one-night stands in the last year," said Harrison, again shaking his head so highlights danced on his high forehead, round nose, and gold-rimmed spectacles. "The good Lord never had to put up with one night stands and day coaches."

Then he threw back his head and the round contours of his face took on a beaming expression.

"But we enjoyed it all. Oh, how we enjoyed it. Folks were so fine to us. And we all came home healthy."

De Lawd patted his ample midsection.

He sat in an arm chair in a

RUSSELL SPEAKS AT BULL'S HEAD

Biographer Advises Students to Serve Hard Apprenticeship For Literary Success.

Yearning to write cannot alone produce a work of literary value, Professor Phillips Russell, teacher of the creative writing course, told an audience at the Bull's Head Bookshop yesterday afternoon. His subject was "Preventive Writing."

"I think there should be one writing course to give the student a knowledge of his working tools and another to 'prevent' him from writing," said the noted biographer. "By that I mean that he should be 'prevented' from writing until he has served his apprenticeship in the craft."

Professor Russell told the audience that he is continually receiving manuscripts from would-be authors who ask for criticism. "In almost every case I know before I open their letters that their compositions are not worth reading," he said. "They have not served what is often a hard apprenticeship, and they have only the desire to become authors."

His main purpose in teaching creative writing is to familiarize the students with the essentials of composition, he said. "Any writer must have form for one thing," said Professor Russell. "Too many amateurs think they can squeeze writing out of themselves, like toothpaste from a tube."

THEILADE COMES HERE NEXT WEEK

Danish-Japanese Dancer to Appear on Student Entertainment Series Wednesday.

Nini Theilade, Danish-Japanese dancer who during her first American tour last season was pronounced to be the logical successor to the great Anna Pavlowa, will give a performance here next Wednesday on the student entertainment series.

Mlle. Theilade was first launched on her career five years ago by Pavlowa, and later attracted international attention as premiere danseuse in four of Max Reinhardt's European productions.

Royalty

Born in Java, Nini Theilade on her mother's side is of royal heritage. Her great-grandmother was the daughter of the Sultan of Java. Her father is a Danish journalist.

When she was nine years old Nini was brought to Denmark by her parents. Here she attended Asta Mollerup's ballet school. It was evident from the start that she had exceptional talent, so later she was taken to Paris to study under Madame Egorowa, who had formerly been first ballerina of the St. Petersburg ballet under the Czar. It was there that Anna Pavlowa saw her dance. So impressed was the great Russian that she turned to her companion and said:

"This child is the future. I am the present. People talk of me now. Later they will talk as much of her."

Pavlowa arranged for Mlle. Theilade's debut at The Hague in 1929, an appearance followed by a long tour of Germany, Switzerland, Holland and Scandinavia—and the subsequent engagements with Max Reinhardt. The Reinhardt productions in which she appeared included "Hoffmann's Erzählungen," "Die Schoene Helena," "Jedermann" and "Der Studententanz."

Last year she made her first visit to the United States, creating such an impression that arrangements were immediately made for a return tour.

Congress Deadlocked

Washington, Feb. 26.—(UP)—Congressional activity came to a standstill today under an armed truce between New Dealers and oppositionists over the work-relief bill and the proposed NRA investigation.

The NRA faces two Senate investigations, both aimed at examining the charges that the recovery administration has fostered monopoly and price-fixing.

Labor got encouragement today on a bill slipped into the Senate by Senator James F. Byrnes (Dem., S. C.), which would make it a felony to transport strike breakers in interstate commerce.

NEW DEAL UPHELD BY PHI ASSEMBLY

Also Favors Bill Providing for Optional Attendance for All University Classes.

Members of the Phi Assembly fled to the first floor of New East to hold their meeting last night after the lights in their familiar portrait-paneled penthouse failed to function.

After a rather lengthy discussion, the assemblymen registered a large majority vote in favor of the bill, Resolved, that the Phi assembly favors the New Deal.

Representative Drew Martin, speaking against the bill that provided optional attendance for all classes at the University, sought to impress upon the minds of the assemblymen the alleged inferiority of the southern student and the southern university. The credence of his listeners was not sufficient, however, and the representative voted in favor of optional attendance.

Debate on the Hill bill for the repeal of the 18th amendment in this state was cut short by lack of time and was tabled until next meeting.

Members of the assembly are asked by Treasurer Francis Fairley to make arrangements for the payment of dues.

Francis Fairley Made Secretary-Treasurer

Plans to Invite Many Outstanding Figures in Politics and Social Work to Meetings.

TO INVITE LONG IN MARCH

At the initial meeting of the executive committee of the Political Union, Robert Smithwick, former speaker of the Phi, was elected chairman of the Union and Francis Fairley, who served as reading clerk for the Assembly and who is now treasurer of that group, secretary-treasurer.

The committee, made up of Robert Smithwick, Francis Fairley, Nick Read, Phil Kind, and Betty Durham, passed on a resolution that the secretary invite Huey Long to speak before the Union in March.

To Be in Raleigh

Huey is expected to speak to the legislature in Raleigh next month and the committee has hopes that he will come to Chapel Hill.

It was also decided that the secretary write President Roosevelt, asking him to stop over at Chapel Hill on one of his trips to Warm Springs, Ga., to speak under the Union's auspices before the University.

A number of prominent people were selected to be invited to appear before the Union. Among these were Margaret Sanger, J. Edgar Hoover, Donald Richberg, Hugh Johnson, Henry Wallace, and Cordell Hull.

The committee approved a suggestion that the Political Union sponsor an open forum, or a supper, featuring one of the speakers coming here in the Human Relations Institute, March 31-April 5. The speaker was not decided upon, however, as all speaking engagements of the Human Relations Institute are not definitely settled as yet.

A proposal advocating a small assessment on each member of the Union was not accepted. The financial problem will be worked out at another meeting, the present expenses being taken care of by individual contributions to the secretary.

Economics Seminar Hears Carl Snyder

The economics seminar at its meeting last evening had as its speaker, Carl Snyder, statistician of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York who spoke on "The Mechanism of Economic Growth and Expansion."

He said that the financial status of the nation was dependent upon the savings and investments of the people. There has been no increase in the nation's wealth during the last five years for the first time in history, and during the last five years the savings of the nation as a whole have been nil.

Contrary to opinion, the one who is most beneficial to society and gives the greatest material advance as a whole to the nation is not the spender, but the miser or saver. As investments and savings decrease, the country's wealth likewise decreases.

Faculty Meeting

There will be a meeting of the general faculty in Bingham hall this afternoon at 4 o'clock, Dean R. B. House announced yesterday.
