DORMITORY ACTION

It is very gratifying to see that the new edition of the Dormitory Council will attempt to get at the bottom of the dormitory situation upon which we have been harping for some time.

We don't want the dormitoryites to think we're trying to cram something down their throats. We're not. Every stand that we have taken concerning dormitories has resulted from investigations which dormitory men themselves have conducted.

The new members of the council decided upon two points, one of which was to take up where the DAILY TAR HEEL's agitation left off. The other was to reduce the dormitory disturbances.

We have not purposely tried to derogate the efforts of the administration in the Everett experiment, but have consistently pointed out that, in practice, the plan has not been the success that was anticipated. But that is not the important point: the essence of the Everett results is that there are certain phases of the plan which necessarily must be revised and there are other phases which must be continued and pressed more strenuously.

Dean Bradshaw hit the nail on the head when he said: "The University has decided that the only way to fill the dormitories is by making improvements rather than by compulsion." That is exactly what Mr. Rogerson's energetic department is setting about to do, to improve. And it is obligatory that the dormitoryites carry their share of the burden in the improvement drive by suggesting, co-operating, and helping to work out plans and methods.

With the support of the administration and student opinion through these columns, the dormitory men can render a great service in working for dormitory betterment.

MORE MOTIONS

The action of the Dormitory Council wasn't the only thing pleasing to the editors which happened Thursday.

When the faculty, after quite a session, voted to appoint a committee to work out in full a class-extension plan in co-operation with a student committee, our efforts toward establishing some sort of similar plan seemed to have borne some fruit.

In fact, the results of the faculty consideration were better than we anticipated. Numerous faculty members had objections to our proposal, objections ranging from over-crowded schedules to over-scheduled crowds. We knew that there would be many revisions and we still think there will, but we didn't anticipate any definite action, for the simple reason that it was asking a lot to expect any more than discussion at the first gathering.

We hope that Dean House will see to it that the committees are immediately appointed, so that a plan can be worked out in detail and revised thoroughly before the spring session ends. And we repeat that our hearts are not set absolutely on the particular plan which Prof. Wiley drew up and we sponsored. Basically, however, it should be drawn up to embrace the same functions and carry out the same purposes.

We believe that there are too many distinguished members of our faculty whose abilities and learning have not been utilized half enough. By "utilized" we mean served up to the advantage of our students and other members of the faculty. That is one reason for our hearty approbation and sponsorship of class-extension as part of our curricular set-up.

The other is that students in most instances have little opportunity for branching out into allied fields, despite the fact that our curriculum is broad and allows quite a bit of academic freedom. Let's lead the horses to water and more of it.

Now YOU'RE Talking

Because of limited space, the DAILY TAR HEEL in the future will accept no letters for publication which are more than 200 words long.

PAGE MR. SMITH

To the Editor,
DAILY TAR HEEL:
I hate to write nasty letters as much as you hate to get them; but it's not my fault that Earl Wolslagel's column has to be followed up every week with a correction of his misrepresentations of the truth.

Our pal Earl didn't answer Don Pope's letter; the truth is that he either misunderstood or garbled its meaning, as anybody with half an eye could see from yesterday's column, in which Earl interpreted Don's letter as simply an attack on the much-mentioned E. Carrington Smith. It wasn't anything like that. Don was protesting against an instance of unfairness shown the Playmakers, and he cited the DAILY TAR HEEL's policy on Smith's theatre publicity by way of what seemed to the campus at large a pretty telling contrast. Earl or anybody else can re-read Don's letter and see that what I have just said is the truth.

Now, I want to negotiate a bargain with Earl, and I want the campus to know about it. I'll give Earl Wolslagel a list of thirty new ways to call a Playmaker a pansy, with four new psychological insults—not involving inversion—five second-hand puns—the sort he favors—and a subscription to HECTIC HOLLYWOOD thrown in, on condition that his column quits talking about E. Carrington Smith as a super-super-impresario. Nobody called Mr. S. a black rogue, and nobody bears him any malice; we're just a trifle weary of hearing him touted by Earl at the expense of the Playmakers and the English language. Maybe he's tired of reading stuff about himself. Do we trade? Now you talk—turkey.

BUCC IN PORT

The Buccaneer Puts Into Port
So the Swaggering Buc is back again

Welcome him, boys, he's a darn good guy.
He likes his fun, but he doesn't pun;
He may not be rough, but he's a darn good guy.

Last fall they kicked him off the wharf
For getting drunk and raising hell.
He nearly tore down the school
And half the state as well.

That old Buc could dish more dirt
Than Ballyhoo itself.
But the P. U. Board put his muzzle on,
Placing him gently on the shelf.

He's come back now with top hat and spats
And promises to be subtle and sly.
This time we'll have a good comic
Or know the reason why.

EARTH-QUAKES

By JOHN SCHULZ

God save the king! And don't forget the Queen. King George pressed a button the other day and a huge bonfire streaked toward heaven in Hyde Park, where everybody, on Sundays, talks about everything. This was the signal for the lighting of over 2,000 fires over all of England—to say nothing of thousands more in that great empire upon which the sun never sets. London itself looks like a garden in bloom, with flowers and gay-colored ribbons festooning even the poorest streets. Why all the excitement? It's nothing less than the celebration of the 25th year in the reign of George the Fifth—perhaps the most beloved monarch the old isle has ever had. George, moderate and respected, is personally the thin thread by which the far-flung British dominions are held together. He's so popular that even the Nazis are telling the world of his German origin. And America is as enthusiastic in its praise as the rest. It's a long time since Bunker Hill!

There are doubtless many who approve of the trouble Mussolini's men are meeting in Africa. The Italians are finding something more than Niggers to fight in their proposed conquest of the Land of Sheba. Malaria, heat and drought are taking their toll of the Roman legions. In other words, Mussolini is really getting somewhere in his search for a place under the SUN. And when the summer rains blow away next September, he is likely to find that an Abyssinian in the bush is worth three Italians in the open.

Not that the "WHITE MAN'S BURDEN" is resting so easily upon us at present. Over 60 lives were lost in a revolt near Manila last week. And they weren't all rebels, either. The leader of the revolting Sakdalist party was careful to be in Japan, where he is reported to be getting much sympathy, at least, from the largest political organization in the Volcanic Isles. Acting governor of the Philippines Hayden, however, said that he had no suspicions of Japan being directly involved in the plot. Manuel Quezon, president of the islands' senate and now in the United States blames the trouble on the terrible economic conditions brought about by recent American tariffs on Philippine goods. These tariffs were brought about by our decision to give the islands their long-sought-for independence. Looks like we get into trouble over there whether we stay in or get out.

France and Russia have agreed on quick aid in case of peril. If the nations keep on signing these mutual-assistance pacts we can be sure that everybody will be in the next war. . . . Venizelos, exiled leader of the late-lamented Greek revolt, has been given a death sentence in Athens. Wouldn't mind one myself if I were in Paris like the old gentleman. . . . Mt. Ararat, Armenia, has been rumbling with volcanic activity. Imagine Noah's surprise if it had rumbled when he set the Ark down there. . . . Twenty years after, Captain Karl Scherb, who was on the submarine which sunk the Lusitania, says that only 30,000 lives were lost in the German effort to retaliate upon the Allies' "hunger blockade" which caused the death of 800,000 persons in the Fatherland. Looks as if the Germans did get the worst of it. . . . Brazilian artillery broke up a mud-flow which was about to demolish a
