MAKING EVENTS

Dorothy Dunbar Bromley of the New York World-Telegram says that, in her mind, the college boys and girls "aren't getting a fair break." "For years," she writes, "we've been accusing them of wasting their time and their parents' money, rah-rahing and petting. Now that large groups of them are beginning to think and talk seriously about such momentous subjects as war and peace, they are either slapped on the wrist by some college administrations or accused by some publicists of indulging in "emotional sprees".

We agree with Miss Bromley. But she doesn't go far enough. It has not only been our elders who have tried to hush us up when we try sincerely to express ourselves, but also many among us, who hold that every thing a collegian says is shrouded with juvenility and immaturity.

This newspaper, for instance, has been severely criticized for taking issue in any form. "It should be just a news sheet," say the hard-locks. Our answer, and that of an awakening American youth, is that every time we take issue we ARE making news. Put that in your antiquated boiler and smoke it while you rest.

SHOULDER ARMS

Another instance where collegians are bearing the brunt of administrative negativism is in the business of anti-war strikes.

The United States Supreme Court, in ruling adversely to the two California students who objected to R. O. T. C. training, conceded that the Constitution gives individuals "the right to entertain beliefs, to teach doctrines and to adhere to principles opposed to the theory of military training."

And college authorities are "cracking down" on the anti-war strikers, calling them sentimental and ignorant and putting it on the basis that such sentimentality and ignorance are "poor weapons" with which to fight Mars.

ESTHETIC CAROLINA

The current issue of the Literary Digest, giving us "Varied Glimpses of the Collegiate Mind," mentions how the "social trend of student thought" has crashed through at "esthetic Carolina." Conservative Harvard, pessimistic Columbia, and quiet Stanford are also featured.

R. W. Madry, University News Bureau, sent in much of the information upon which the view of Carolina was based. He showed the trend in bull-sessions. "Bull sessions," wrote Mr. Madry, "used to go in this order—1, sports; 2, sex; 3, religion; now they go—1, politics; 2, sports; 3, sex.

We hesitantly disagree with the latter. Sex still beats sports, for all our intellectual gains, and politics should be "social organization." Sports will be among the first three forever.

Climaxing the University Club's program next fall to aid in the orientation of green freshmen into the true Carolina spirit will be a prodigious smoker for the first-year class tentatively scheduled for the last day of Freshman Week.

Extensive plans for the affair were made by the University Club at its regular session last night.

A report by Secretary George MacFarland setting forth the part the club will take in the orientation activities next September prompted President of the Woman's Association Jane Ross to declare, "The Woman's Council is planning to come down early and will be glad to co-operate with orientation."

Annual Affair

With the backing of the co-eds assured, the club considered the proposal of President Julien Warren that "it's an annual affair for the University Club to put on a smoker for the freshmen."

The detailed program for the freshman smoker staged by the University Club this fall was presented and comments were made on financing the affair.

President Warren's statement that "the financial part is pretty hard to arrange," caused an outburst from Treasurer of

P. U. BOARD SAYS IT CAN'T FINANCE NEW PUBLICATION

Freshmen Win Fight Not to Pay Penalty for Late Payment of Yackety Yack Fee.

PRINTSHOP BOYS GET KEYS

Last hopes that the P. U. Board would take over the financial management of the proposed Foreign Policy League publication without a student vote fitfully glimmered and died when the board yesterday opined that it was not empowered to take such action.

The freshman class also won its fight for the ten per cent reduction in its Yackety Yack payment because the star witness for the board in its contention that the class was adequately apprised of the reduction deadline, was discovered to have been in error.

Invulnerable Case

As a result of the disintegration of its previously invulnerable case, the Publications Union boys decided that they would accept 90 per cent of the original figure, $135, plus 6 per cent interest from the date of the last deadline to the time of final payment.

Auditor Sherrill appeared and explained that his bonding and the monthly statements which the board had requested would both become realities next year.

Evans and Moore

Bill Evans and Bob Moore of the Orange Printshop were both voted a publications key for their excellent work on the DAILY TAR HEEL in excess of the labor which they are required to perform.

The proposed publication of the Policy League is being pushed by John Shultz and Joe Barnett, new president of the group.

Petition

If as many as 25 students desire, they may petition the president of the P. U. Board to call a meeting of the Publications Union (all students who receive the four campus publications) for the purpose of considering the establishment of the new magazine.

If two-thirds of those present agree, the question of the new publication will be put to a student vote. If passed there, the publication will be taken over entirely by the P. U. Board.

EHRINGHAUS WILL DELIVER DIPLOMAS

Josephus Daniels, University Alumnus and Ambassador to Mexico, Also to Be Here.

SENIORS TO HEAR GRAHAM

Chapel Hill, seat of liberalism in the South, will welcome one of the nation's foremost liberals when Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, first lady of the land, arrives to speak at commencement exercises this June.

Mrs. Roosevelt expects to arrive on Tuesday, June 11, and will deliver the commencement address that night in Kenan stadium. It is hoped that she will visit a session of the Institute of Government, which will be held here at that time.

Trio

Strong friendships will be renewed when Mrs. Roosevelt, President Graham and Josephus Daniels, ambassador to Mexico, meet during commencement week. Mrs. Roosevelt's acceptance was largely secured through the efforts of Graham and Daniels, both of whom have worked often with her in national affairs.

Another relationship may be found in the fact that President Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy under Wilson's administration, while Josephus Daniels was his chief. This is the first time in the history of the University that a woman has been asked to make the commencement address.

Daniels, an alumnus of Carolina and a member of the board of trustees, will also be visiting the campus during commencement week, after making the commencement speech at Wake Forest College.

The program of commencement day, Tuesday, will begin at 6:30 p. m. in the stadium with a concert by the University band. This will be followed by the
