INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY

Campusites are probably conscious of the fact that Student-Faculty Day will rear its lovely head next month and publicity directed toward making them interested to the point of activity in helping to work out the plans is all that is needed.

One thing is very obvious at every meeting of the joint student-faculty committee and in the work of all the sub-committees. That is, no matter how perfect a skeleton you set up for a day of this kind, the affair simply is a flop unless all elements enter into the spirit of the thing.

In other words, every student and every faculty member are as much responsible for the success or failure of Student-Faculty Day as the group of hard-working committeemen getting things arranged. The faculty's greatest responsibility is that of circulation, of going into the dormitories and the fraternities, and of meeting students and seeing how they live and what they think and do.

The students' greatest responsibility lies in cordiality. To be good hosts, to make the meetings of themselves and their faculty guests worth remembering, is their duty. All that the plans of the committee can do is arrange for student-faculty contacts in the environment of pleasant Chapel Hill.

The rest is up to the participants.

SELF-MANAGEMENT

The arrangements which the dormitory councils have made for the administration of student social fees are truly representative of student self-government. As a matter of fact, the whole plan which has made the administration of these fees by each dormitory possible has been one of the more obvious manifestations of true student management of campus affairs.

It is significant that the plan for social fees was inaugurated, pressed and made possible by the students themselves. The administration then recognized the student demands and acted as collection agency, thereby insuring positive income. Now the students are taking over the proceeds of the collection and voting by individual dormitory to what uses the social fees will be put.

Very few, if any, campuses in this country would have allowed such an activity, simply because such affairs have always been carried on by the administrations. Not only did the local administration agree to help by collecting fees here, but it also suggested methods for realizing such funds.

Significant also is the fact that the purposes for which these funds will be put have occupied the attention of the University for many years, the lack of funds restricting any amelioration of dormitory social conditions. Now the students have gone ahead and assumed the responsibility on their own shoulders.

MONEY FOR THE TRIP

The announcement that Carolina has been chosen by the N. S. F. A. to represent the Federation in a debate with Cambridge calls for additional praise of debating as a University student activity. We say additional because the revivification of debating last spring was itself a remarkable development.

The announcement also is the occasion for some people—ourselves included—to withdraw doubts expressed last spring that the Debate Council needed its student fees totaling around $1,300. Nothing specific is known yet, but it appears that the Council will have to supplement the funds which the N. S. F. A. will contribute towards paying the trip expenses.

Without the 50 cents which every student yearly contributes to debating, it would probably be necessary for the team which Carolina will send across seas to dig the expense money from its own pockets or to suffer the unpleasant experience of begging it from the students and student organizations.

BOOK LARNIN'

GEORGE BUTLER

Sometime ago a student at Columbia stepped into the lime-light when he instituted a "waking-up" service for fellow undergraduates in his dormitory. His methods, none too subtle, included yanking the covers off the customer or spraying his head with ice-water. Now the "waker-upper" is back with a new scheme which promises almost immediate success. The new method involves a phial of ammonium chloride, previously treated with sodium hydroxide to obtain the gas. A few whiffs of this and the patient is wide awake; it never fails and is reported to "clear the head immediately."

The University of Pittsburgh has been blacklisted by the American Association of College Professors. 12,000 members of the Association are henceforth prohibited from teaching on Pitt's faculty. The most obvious reasons for this action are: The career of "Iron Chancellor" Brown with his academic suppression; members of the faculty are never hired for more than a single year at a time, and notice of retention is not issued until late in the spring; the discharge of several professors because of their liberal teachings. Pitt is notorious in its professionalized athletic program. The University is supported by the state, mostly by Pittsburgh steel magnates. Governor Earls announced that unless reforms were instituted the State funds would be shut off.

This week's award for plain speaking goes to Professor Ernest Lauer of Northwestern University, who got up on his feet before assembled students and castigated campus intellectuals who flinch at real action.

Said he: "We need fight. Students should be willing to go to any extreme—even to getting kicked out of school—if they actually believe in something."

District Festival

The district festivals will probably last for one day and night, Mrs. Fussler said, and will be similar to the annual festival in Chapel Hill. Asheville, Charlotte Seaboard, and Fayetteville or Wilmington are probable locations of the district events.

A new contest for full length plays has been included this year. Manuscripts of long plays will be submitted under the same regulations as short plays but only one play from those submitted will be selected for production at the festival.

Now YOU'RE Talking

PROBATION PETITIONS

To the editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

The DAILY TAR HEEL was in error in directing students to bring petitions to me about probation and other penalties that may grow out of the weather situation as it was at the time of the University opening for the winter quarter. Students should take up all matters of academic probation with their respective deans. In this particular case they should simply present evidence that weather conditions caused their delay.

In advance of any student movement about this matter at all, this office and the deans of the University had already agreed to waive technicalities in this emergency situation.

Please publish this in your column, because as a result of your former notice I am receiving petitions from students who ought to be in consultation with their academic deans.

R. B. HOUSE,
Dean of Administration.

SO CORRECTED

To the editor,
The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Upon reading yesterday's DAILY TAR HEEL my roommate suffered a nervous breakdown and will undoubtedly remain in this state of mental instability until the DAILY TAR HEEL makes it known to the student body at large—especially to those who read the first page—that there has been a mistake made.

This all seems very vague and so an explanation is in order. My roommate is one, Morton Feldman, and the devilish cause of his present gnawing sickness is an article which appeared in yesterday morning's paper listing the names of those in the cast of the present Carolina Playmaker production. Ordinarily this would be one of the few articles that are daily overlooked, but something in it caught my roommate's eye, and he thereupon collapsed uttering screams of intense soulful torture, more horrifying than I have ever seen in any stark tragic drama.

When I noticed the cause of his hysteria, I, too, shuddered and looked at him in a queer way. It was when I threatened to move out that he fell humbly to his knees and confessed that the DAILY TAR HEEL had made an ignoble error by printing his name in the list of Playmakers. However, it was not until he confessed that he was a disciple of the renowned Doctor Peter Ivey, Playmakeritus medico, that I decided a correction should be made somewhere along the line.

We bear no ill will towards the Playmakers, some of whom are perfectly normal, but we would appreciate it if you would print this literary correction, so that one Morton Feldman may once more venture forth with a clear conscience and the thought that he is no different than anyone else.

committee. Preliminary probing of laboratory assessments have already been begun by Student Assistant Weaver, with the cooperation of Dr. H. D. Crockford, chemistry professor.

The study, wrote Pool and Bradshaw, grows out of the request of the administration for complete information on the subject of the student fees.

Policy Meeting

The information that is procured will be submitted to the faculty as a basis for discussing the general policy involved in the administration of fees.

This extensive inquiry into student fees will supersede the ambitious program of work for the quarter, recently planned by the Student Advisory Committee. Included on the committee's agenda had been investigations of (1) the book exchange, a project started last quarter; (2) Graham Memorial; (3) the administration of the advisory system in dormitories; (4) the need of the infirmary for a kitchen; and (5) laboratory fees.

ledge is mental phenomena." "Knowledge is restricted to quiet mental data," and further "innate knowledge is an indescribable something capable of transcending sensations," the Cornell graduate told the philosophers.

Following the custom of the newly-formed organization, an open forum discussion was held at the close of the evening's talk. Fred H. Sides, president, began the heated discussion when he asked the speaker to explain his previous statement "therefore be just as dogmatic about mind as about matter."

Further meetings of this organization will be held in 209 Graham Memorial every other Thursday night and will be open to all interested students. The purpose of the undergraduate Philosophy Club is to serve as a medium for arranging general discussions on topics of interest to everyone.

Interviews

bove scholarship, and participation in extra-curricular activities is considered important.

Turnbull has already visited Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt and plans to go to Duke tomorrow. He is holding the interviews earlier than usual this year as last season, when the interviews were held in April, it was found that many of the outstanding seniors had already accepted positions which had been opened by improved business conditions.

Commenting upon the Carolina applicants Turnbull said, "The students I have interviewed on the University of North Carolina campus have impressed me with their qualifications and seriousness. It has been a long while since I have had the pleasure of talking to such a fine lot of enthusiastic seniors."

Sum Given Library

The University library has received a gift of $250 from A. B. Andrews, of Raleigh. This sum will be added to the Andrews library fund which has been building up over a period of years. The fund is used principally for the purchase of books in the field of North Carolina and Southern history.

Haverford College in Pennsylvania was a beneficiary of the bequest of $50,000, according to the recently filed will of Mrs. Emma R. Comly of Philadelphia.
