'Bunk' Premiere Hailed As Stunt Night's Feature

Francis Fairley Seen as Hope of Senior's Stunt Program For Wednesday Night

By PETE IVEY

"Not one hair of Lady Agatha's head shall be touched," asseverated Francis Fairley, erstwhile president of the student body and now hero of the senior class mellow-drama.

Fairley, who is the white hope of the stunt night program next Wednesday night in Memorial hall, takes the part of Sir Gerald in the one-act performance of "Bunk." His heart-throb in the play is Hazel Mae Beacham, who has the part of Lady Agatha Allrope.

Jack Clare, alleged dastard of the performance, is contriving ways and means to hound Lady Agatha. Clare, as Baron Badness, has not yet reached a supreme degree of proficiency in twirling his mustache, but his heh-heh-hehing ability is unsurpassed within the corporate limits of Chapel Hill.

The executive committee of the club which is customarily formed at this time will be appointed by the new president in the near future.

Criteria For Selecting Fleece Men Explained

Honorary Society Members Discuss Qualifications for Election Into Fleece

The throngs of undergraduates, faculty members and townspeople who have filled Memorial hall in the past to witness the annual tapping rites of the Order of the Golden Fleece have done so with mixed prognostications as to whom would be chosen for membership into the ranking honorary society.

Although the Fleece has long been recognized as the most coveted honor which a student can receive, little information regarding the criteria which the order sets up as a basis for its annual judgment has been known on the campus. Each year outstanding campusites are chosen and in many instances these students are holding at the time, or have held, important campus offices.

For this reason, it has been commonly assumed that the Fleece has "tapped the office" instead of the man. Campus predictions often include all the holders of the key positions in campus affairs.

Qualities

Previous tapping ceremonies, however, have shown this common belief to be ill-founded. There have been many Fleece choices who have not been office-holders of the first rank. They have been recognized at tapping for their sterling qualities of leadership, for their typification of the highest type of Carolina student, for their innate personality and character.

The process of considering men for Fleece begins early in the year. Current spring elections play no determining part in the order's choices. Only as the election might testify in itself to the outstanding quality of a subsequent Fleece initiate, through a popular victory at the polls, is the spring voting activ-

Senior Engineer Carne Employed By Bell Company

Southern Bell Telephone, Telegraph Company Selects Jack
Carne for Position

Jack B. Carne, senior in electrical engineering, received word by letter Wednesday night that out of 11 applicants from the University he has been selected by the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company to work in their construction and maintenance department.

Carne's position came as a result of an interview with Kendall Weisiger, educational director of the Bell Company, who visited the University April 18 to contact likely graduates in electrical engineering. Weisiger, in Carne's opinion, was very particular in his requirements, in that he first announced that he was interested in employing no "Yankees," no one with any physical deficiency, or anyone too tall or too short.

Eliminations

As a result of this last requirement, Ernie Eutsler, past president of AIEE, was eliminated.

These requirements left only three of the original 11 candidates. Of these three, Carne was selected. Modestly, Jack Carne said, "I guess I was the best physical specimen."

Carne was the only man tapped this year by Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity. Jack, hailing from Asheville, intends to report for work July 1, after taking a month's vacation in his home town, following his graduation in June. Carne declared, "I want one last vacation before embarking on the hard seas of the business world."

Carne said that the appointment came as a total surprise.

New books, rare copies, and new and used text books will be sold and a circulating library will be operated in connection with the store. O'Flaherty and Abernethy went to Greensboro yesterday to supervise the renovating of the building which will be used.

Fairley Makes Correction

Jack D. Smith, not Melvin B. Smith, will be one of the two Student Council hold-over members for the coming year, according to a correction made yesterday by Francis Fairley.

Jimmy Craighill was also named by the council, in addition to Jack Smith, as a 1936-37 hold-over member.
