• The Graduates

Except for the graduates, every school in the University has a representative on the Student Council.

Last week the council considered giving the graduate school representation but rejected the proposal "until those interested graduates should perfect an organization and then petition the council for recognition." For the graduates, in addition to being the only school without an agent on the Student Council, are the only unorganized class of Carolina students on the campus.

With an enrollment of only 66 flesh-carvers, the medical school is entitled to one representative on the Student Council. Pharmacy and law, each with 102 students, have their councilors. Yet the graduate school with 211 members, more than law and pharmacy combined, remains detached from student government. To close the door to these 211 members of the student body and leave them out in the rain is not conducive to the best campus government.

A graduate representative would add to the Student Council another mature mind. To bring the graduate school in more direct contact with student government, too, is right in line with the purpose of the class-council proposal of the honor committee. Giving the graduates a councilor might increase their interest in campus government.

Whenever the graduates organize themselves, the Student Council is willing to find a seat on the Student Council for a graduate school representative. So it is up to the graduates to get organized.

• Third Floor Back

At the beginning of each quarter residents of Chapel Hill dress up their vacant rooms to the best of their ability and temptingly beckon to prospective renters. They point out the advantages of living in quiet, well heated, clean rooms with a homey atmosphere. Many students anxious to get away from the clamor and interruptions found in the dormitories sign up for these rooms.

The quietness usually remains, but as cold weather arrives inadequate heating facilities expose students to the dangers of colds. Also many rooms are not kept up to the standards as when the renters first saw them. Undesirable sanitary conditions often exist. As for the homey, friendly atmosphere, that also often disappears once students are signed up.

The yearly influx of new students tends to counteract the loss of dissatisfied renters, giving new, uninitiated customers.

With the approach of the fall quarter and its new students arriving on the campus this "racket" needs a thorough investigation.

It is to the interest of students, as prospective renters; to the administration, which has dormitories to rent; and to the Y. M. C. A., which recommends the rooms to the students, to establish certain standards for rooms advertised for rent on the campus and see that these standards are maintained.—R.T.P.

• Cheating

With the increase of comparative grading of quizzes and exams in the various departments of the University, students should realize that cheating is no longer a matter between the cheater and the instructor, but that it affects the grades of the classes as a whole. One man's cheating on an exam can lower the grades of everyone in the class who does not make a grade as high as the cheater.

Therefore students should overcome their repugnance at the idea of reporting a fellow student for violation of the honor system.

Reporting

One of the principal factors which cause many students to hesitate at reporting what they think is a case of cheating is that they had rather not report a matter of such vital importance when there is a chance that they may be mistaken. However if the students feel that they can report a case to the instructor, and that the instructor will take it merely as a case of suspicious evidence until he has positive proof and then will take the matter before the Student Council, this hesitancy can be overcome.

The instructor should explain to his class members that on seeing anything which has the appearance of cheating, if they will report the case to him, he will then check up when he grades the papers to see if there is any documentary evidence to support such a belief. Upon finding such evidence he will report the matter to the Student Council.

Such a system would have two beneficial results. It would not only overcome the hesitancy of students to report cases of cheating, but would act as a check on cheating. The knowledge that students will not hesitate to report cheating is the best means of putting a check on the racket.
A STUDENT.

Dr. Smith has done much concert and solo work since he has been in Chapel Hill.

Accomplished

Lytt Gardner was being initiated into Sigma Delta fraternity last year when, on being asked to state his qualifications for fraternity membership, he enthusiastically declared (said someone), "I made the freshman class and Grimes dormitory..."

No Roll Call

The Phi Delt pulled a "steak fry" on us Friday night after the dance. Leader Bob Page and date Sue Southerland arrived on the camping grounds shortly before the rest of the party was due. Wearily the two sat down to wait beneath the trees and early morning moon.

Morpheus stole upon them and sweet sleep was theirs, period...

The Phi Delta Theta house party came on the scene, romped and reveled,—steak frying... Then finally like the Arabs they softly folded their tents and silently "stole away into the night."

Early dawn woke our Hansel and Gretel. Page and date rubbed their eyes and gazed about. The steak fry had come and gone far in the dim past...

Please

An opportune story comes from Mangum dormitory. The three high school graduates had each picked different schools when they left home. One went to State, one to Duke, and one, to Carolina.

At Christmas time the three "college men" gathered around the fire to swap "frosh" experiences.

Spoke the Duke man, a short stumpy little fellow with a prominent forehead and resolute chin: "The boys at Duke certainly are swell. They like my size so they have been calling me 'Little Napoleon'."

Replied the State boy, a dark fellow with plenty of beard for a freshman: "Up at State one week I let my beard grow long and all the State boys now call me Santa Claus..."

"That's nothing," boasted the Carolina frosh, "I hadn't been in Chapel Hill a week when, one day, I was walking on the lawn and somebody yelled out 'Jesus Christ' get off that grass!"

Einstein, too

The phone jangled in Old East and Storekeeper Franklin Brown called Sophomore Bob Perkins. The call was for him.

Soft-voiced Nell Booker was on the other end of the line: Did Bob have a date for the Friday night dance. No? Well Nell had a guest. Would Bob be so kind as to be her escort? Why, of course, Bob would be delighted...

Morganton Bob called at Dr. Booker's home, grabbed his blind date's arm and whisked her off to the dance.

Onto the dance floor he took Nell's friend. He danced with her a moment. Someone broke... Bob sought other girls for a number or two, and then he decided he'd better show Nell's friend a little attention. He turned to break on her, and lo! He didn't remember her face...

Bemuddled, poor Bob took a half-hour to find someone who could tell him whom he brought to the dance!

The New Generation

Van Wyck Webb

By MAC SMITH

It takes a hot spring afternoon, scotch-and-sodas, and a "good ole rockin' chair" to bring out the ecstatic qualities in Amiable "Tough Boy" Van Wyck Hoke Webb, campus socialite, football star, and next president of the Athletic Association.

Royal high mogul and chief bull in every bull session concerning his beloved football or the features and failings of womankind, "Rooky" successfully abstains from heavy duty. Last summer he decided to seek the solitude of summer school to work off a few extra-tough courses so that his last days at Carolina, he's a senior now, wouldn't be pressing. In the peace of the wooded hills, in the heat of a blazing summer sun when everybody had to stay here and study on account of the meningitis epidemic quarantine, Scholar Webb managed to swing an "I" on one of the two courses he was taking.

Enjoys It

But Van enjoyed it. He enjoys everything. He's adept at scrap bookkeeping, and his clippings are filled with accounts of the doings on the field and on the dance floor of one Van Webb of Raleigh, N. C.

Two years "Rooky" worked out hard with the football squads, but it was only early last season, in the Maryland game at Baltimore, that the fellow got a real chance to hold down a varsity guard post. He came through nicely and Snavelly groomed him for the Number One place in that position throughout the remainder of the season.

Coming Back

He's coming back to Carolina next fall, ostensibly as a graduate student in economics, but in reality as a dark horse candidate for All American honors, declare enthusiastic S. A. E. fraternity brothers.

Violently opposed to the Graham plan which in his words "defeats the end of Carolina athletics," the football player is anxious to get a line on the new head coach, Raymond Wolf, expected in town tomorrow.

Van doesn't live at the S. A. E. house, but down at Mrs. Fred Patterson's, favorite rooming place of law students and "particularites." Likes to show off his "tuffidity," but really the fellow's got the heart of a lamb, and his campus-wide popularity has largely been built around the focal point of a milkshake at Pritchard-Lloyd's. He is an authority on new phonograph records, and he likes almost anything that's a la Benny Goodman.

Activities: varsity guard, new president of the Athletic Association, dance committeeman, member of Monogram Club, Gorgon's Head, S. A. E. fraternity.

Y. W. C. A. WILL NOT MEET

The Y. W. C. A. will not hold a regular meeting tomorrow night, but all of the members are urged to attend Dr. Clark M. Eichelberger's lecture at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Dr. Eichelberger is director of the League of Nations Association of America and is the main speaker for the Institute meeting here this weekend.
