(Continued from page three) tie the score in the sixth. Little with a double and a single and McNeill with three singles accounted for the bulk of the winning score.

S. A. E. on Top

S. A. E. had a comparatively easy time in defeating Pi Kappa Alpha by a 10-1 score to become the second team of the playoffs. Scott again turned in a creditable performance for the winners, setting the Pikas down in order until the final frame when he yielded the lone tally.

S. A. E. went right to work on hurler Yount to compile a six run lead in the first three frames and increased the lead with four more in the final chapter.

Three timely hits by Sid Theil and the fine hurling of Sid Gordon enabled Alpha Epsilon to complete their schedule with a lone defeat as A. E. defeated Phi Gam by a 6-5 count.

Phi Gam assumed an early 3-0 lead in the first inning when they tallied three runs on A. E. errors but the deficit was wiped out in the third when Theil sent across the tying runs. Another run in the fourth and two more in the sixth enabled A. E. to offset a two run last inning rally on the part of Phi Gam.

Librarians

Among the other members of the University faculty in attendance were Dr. Frank Graham who delivered two addresses and Dr. A. R. Newsome who was toastmaster at the dinner given in honor of Dr. Wilson Tuesday night.

Dr. Archibald Henderson spoke to the section for library work with children on "From Dream to Reality," in which he told of the influence of his childhood reading on his career. Mr. Downs spoke on Dr. Wilson's career as librarian here and also to the University library extension service division and the College and Reference Section.

There was also a meeting of the University of North Carolina library school alumni association Thursday night, at which Dr. Graham, Dr. Wilson, and Mr. Coney, formerly assistant librarian at the University library, were present. All members of the library school faculty and 65 alumni of this school were present at this dinner meeting.

Miss Nelle Roberson, from this library, was chairman of the University Library Extension Service Round Table discussion group and Miss Elizabeth Thompson, head of the library catalogue department here was a consultant in that field.

Wilson

(Continued from first page) "We need a little more formality here, not as much as they have at Virginia, for they have carried it to the extreme there. And here we have erred too far in the other direction," stated Dr. Wilson.

He also disapproves of the Senior Week regalia sweat shirts and says that they are a sign of mental weakness. Dr. Wilson said he did not believe that we should wear coats in hot weather as is done at Virginia, because they are too uncomfortable; and he bore out his belief in his own dress—a white shirt with sleeves rolled to the elbows, and a tie . . .

"What we need is a little more formality. Let's be comfortable but with some attention to aesthetics and good taste," he said as he concluded his plea for a change in the campus dress.

SENIOR SHOW

Members of the senior class will be treated to a free show Saturday night by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theater. The show will begin at 11 p. m. Seniors must wear their regalia in order to gain admittance.

GERMAN MOVIE

William Tell, the last of a series of German movies for this scholastic year will be shown at the Carolina Theater tonight at 11 o'clock.

The German department strongly recommends that all German students attend.

Quill Quips

"I dare you to identify yourself!" challenged Major (Enemy) Booker.

"This is the janitor, suh . . ." came Rothschild's final effort. 'Till Death Do Us

Someone says the janitor around at the S. A. E. house got married Thursday night and invited all the brothers. Frank Willingham and all the rest of the Cigmer Alfer Epsilon boys dolled up and attended the fellow's ceremony.

Rigid Registrar T. J. Wilson is very painstaking in seeking out entrance credits of students in an effort to keep the standards of the University high.

In fact, he is so exacting, say some of his friends, that his idea of the perfect University is one whose standards are so strict that it will admit no students.

No Place to Go

We knew the Old East light who, Saturday night of Junior-Seniors, had climbed into his patent leathers and black silk Sox and very little else . . . His dressing-for-the-occasion suddenly came to a halt when a rapid search of his wardrobe revealed that he had lost his tuxedo, and the prompting of a neighbor reminded him that it was 11 o'clock, the dance was almost over, and that, besides, he didn't have a bid!

Woodward

(Continued from first page) children. At an early age he began to draw. On finishing high school he had to go to work instead of to an art school, as he had hoped he might.

He soon gave up his first job of weighing coal for one at the Chickering Piano Factory, where he transferred varnish from large vats into smaller ones. One day he was called away from his work and on returning he found a vat had tipped and several hundred gallons of varnish were seeping into the machinery. This convinced Woodward that he was not cut out to be a piano manufacturer.

His next job was that of messenger for a bond broker. About this time he was writing poetry; the verses were written at night in his room and polished next day at spare moments. One morning after making the rounds of several business houses he was called into the office of the head of the firm.

Asked where he had been that morning, he enumerated each place in order, among them the National Bank. "So you went to the National Bank? Do you remember leaving . . . ?" Before the boss could finish Woodward burst out, "My God! The wallet!" While polishing some verses in the lobby of the bank he had laid down and left a wallet containing sixteen thousand dollars in bonds. It was now evident to Woodward that he was not going to be a business man; the bond brokers agreed and even his family were convinced, so with the help of one of his brothers he entered the Eric Pape School of Art in Boston.

Always independent, he was constantly in conflict with his teachers and after a year he entered the School of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, where he stayed about a year. He next studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. He spent two years in the army during the World War and in 1919 his work began to gain recognition. In spite of the fact that he is most noted for his marines, Woodward maintains that from the start he wanted to be a portraitist and may yet become one.

French Club Offers Crime-Packed Drama On Playmaker Stage

Players Present "La Porteuse De Pain" Thursday Night

The Playmakers theater adopted the air of a typical French theater Thursday night when the French Club presented "La Porteuse de Pain."

Usherettes, speaking only French, paraded up and down the aisles, demanding tips, selling programs and bonbons, and extracting nickels and dimes from the audience in every conceivable fashion.

The play consisted of a one murder on the stage, two attempted assassinations, one death by hemorrhage, and various plots of blackmail, libel, bribery and larceny. The audience hissed the villain and applauded when virtue finally triumphed.

Assembly Will Elect New Officers Tonight

Social to Be Held in Graham Memorial After Meeting

Speaker Winthrop Durfee announced yesterday that elections of officers for the coming year will be held tonight at the weekly meeting of Phi Assembly at 7:15 in New West.

Speaker, debate council representative, treasurer, ways and means committee chairman, speaker pro-tem, assistant treasurer, sergeant at arms, and reading clerk are the positions to be filled.

After the meeting the annual social will be held in Graham Memorial.

Senate Will Initiate New Members Tonight

Senators Will Discuss Engineering Question and Immigration

An initiation program for all new members of the Di Senate will take place tonight at the weekly meeting in New West at 7:15.

Two bills slated to be brought up for discussion are: Resolved, That the Di Senate go on record as approving the faculty action in regard to submitting the engineering school question to the trustees; and Resolved, That the United States should rigidly restrict immigration for the next five years.

Experimentals Canceled

The last bill of experimental plays, which was to be given next week, has been canceled, it was announced yesterday by Frank Durham, director of the bill.

COUNCIL PARTY

The Freshman Friendship Council will go to Sparrow's Pool Thursday afternoon for a swimming party and hamburger fry. The council will leave the Y.M.C.A. at 4:30. Those members desiring to go are requested to see either Joe Darracott, Jim Joyner, George Nethercutt, or Randy Reese by Thursday.

ART LECTURE TONIGHT

This evening at 8 o'clock in Page auditorium at Duke University, Lorado Taft will give a lecture on "American Sculpture and Sculptors." Registration for next fall, which will begin next week, will also be explained at the meeting. Advisers will be in the following buildings: Mr. Emery, Di Senate hall, New West; Mr. Hill, Memorial hall; Mr. Mackie, 206 Phillips hall; Mr. Russell, Phi society hall, New East; Mr. Spruill 111 Murphey hall; Mr. Totten, Davie hall; and Mr. Wiley, 103 Bingham hall.

Correspondence

(Continued from page two) As one also interested in adult education, I protest against a janitor's* being exposed to the influence of the DAILY TAR HEEL office.

*Footnote: I capitalized the possessive "S" in the faint hope that next time, the DAILY TAR HEEL's editors will recognize a gerund when they see one coming down the middle of the road with its tail up.

JOHN M. BOOKER.

English Major

(Continued from page two) For the major meeting requirements for high school English teaching, Chaucer and Shakespeare, American literature, one or more period courses in English literature, advanced composition, public speaking and oral interpretation of literature on the required program. A course in English language also is strongly recommended. The new provision for honors students just adopted by the Humanities Division gives large opportunity for wide electives to superior individuals.

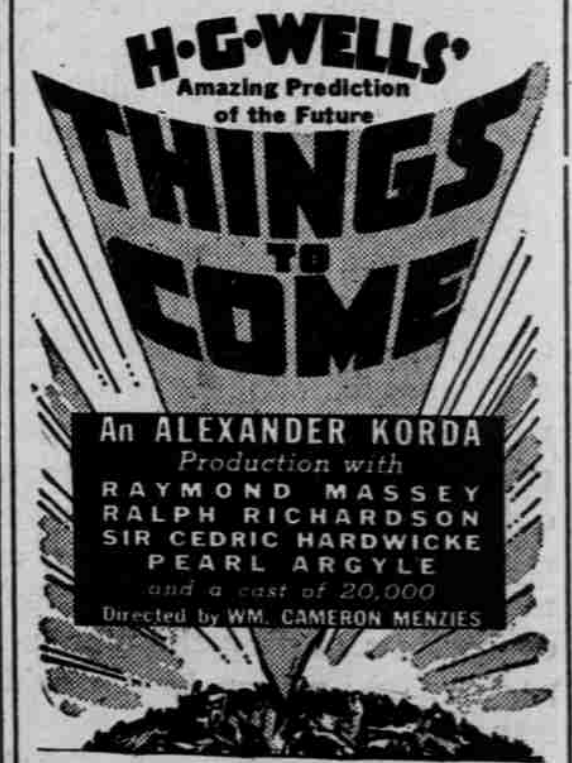

A. I. E. E. Meeting

Dean Miller and J. B. Carne will speak at the final meeting of the A. I. E. E. tonight at 7:15 in 214 Phillips hall.

President A. C. McCall urges all members to be in attendance.
