I SEE... By the PAPERS

By IRA SARASOHN

Many are the tales told about William Randolph Hearst and his fight against the radical elements on the campuses of the nation. The latest and by far the most amusing is his ultimatum that the name of Stanford University should not be mentioned in any of the papers, news services, magazines and other propaganda means controlled by his interests.

The reason for Stanford University being ostracized is the fact that during the summer session there, a professor from Teachers' College of Columbia University will give a lecture at Stanford. Since said professor is known to express radical thoughts, Hearst is penalizing Stanford for inviting him.

Soon after the issuing of the ultimatum, Stanford had a baseball game of major proportions with another California school. The story of the game had to be carried on the Hearst controlled I. N. S. and the way it was written was as amusing as the ultimatum. In the lead paragraph of the story the sports writer went to great extremes to avoid mentioning Stanford. His substitute was not the common nick name of the school, but was very similar to the following: "One of California's larger colleges in the vicinity of Palo Alto—"

It's a wonder that with our many radical professors—not to speak of the many radical speakers that have been invited here—that the name of the University of North Carolina has not been banned from the Hearst press. It won't surprise us someday to pick up our New York Evening Journal, some Saturday in the fall and learn that "One of the divisions of the Greater University of North Carolina located at Chapel Hill beat the Duke football team 31-0 before a crowd of 60,000 people." Did we hear somebody say that there is no fear of that? What do you mean beating Duke or not being mentioned by name in the Hearst paper?

Baseball annals have always been full of quick success stories, but one of the most fiction-like that we even heard of was told in our home-town paper, the Newark Evening News of last Saturday. It concerned a boy of 15 years of age playing on a Parochial school nine.

At first he was a substitute outfielder, but when the coach began looking for new pitchers he saw prospects in the youth and soon gave him a chance as a twirler. In the first game that the boy ever pitched he won

CAROLINA FACES TOUGH FOOTBALL LIST NEXT YEAR

Three Nationally Known Teams Have Been Added to Tar Heel Program for Next Season

Coach Wolf's football team is due to play the toughest schedule ever made up for a Tar Heel squad next year. In addition to the three nationally known teams played last year, two newcomers, equally as well known, have been added.

The customary "breathers" are sadly lacking; those that the team does play come at the tail end of the season, when South Carolina and Virginia are met in the last two games.

Wake Forest
The first game to be played is against Wake Forest. Not so very strong, but always a hard assignment for the opening game.

The week after, the Vols from Tennessee, aching for revenge, come tearing into Chapel Hill. Tennessee annually puts out a top-notch team. With Neyland back at the helm conditions will perk up surprisingly at the Knoxville school.

Following this game occurs a slight breather against Maryland—very slight. Maryland has never been a team to be brushed aside lightly.

N. Y. U.
Then, on October 17, the Tar Heels take a trip up to New York City to play N. Y. U. No need to mention the headaches Coach Wolf will receive in doping out plays for that game. Last year N. Y. U. went right up to the final game of the season undefeated.

The Tar Heels will just about be recovering from this encounter when they'll have to travel again, this time to New Orleans where they are to play Tulane University.

Coming back to Chapel Hill on October 31, the Wolfmen meet up with the State Wolfpack. Traditionally a hard fought affair, this year's game should be no exception.

Davidson
Then comes the affair with Davidson, followed by The Game. Scheduled for Chapel Hill, the Duke game will have a little more than is ordinarily attached to it—revenge, for instance.

To wind up the season, the Tar Heels travel away, meeting South Carolina and Virginia.

Thus, between September 26 and November 26, the Tar Heel gridmen will play a hard ten-game schedule against some of the best teams in the country.

Athletic Equipment

All students who have athletic equipment are requested to turn it in at Emerson stadium today between the hours of 9 a. m. and 12 m. and from 1 to 5 p. m.

Ruffinites Dominate Mural Honorary Baseball Groups

All-Campus, All-Dormitory, All-Fraternity Teams Picked from Stars of Recent Games

Six Ruffinites dominated the selections for all-campus players in the intramural playground ball, made yesterday by the all-campus board consisting of Bill McCachren, Jim McCachren, and Andy Bershak with the assistance of Director Herman Schnell.

Paul Kaveny and Bill Thompson, battery for the all-campus title-holders, Ruffin, were unanimously selected for the hurling and receiving positions on the all-campus team. Four other members of the championship Ruffin team filled third base, short, centerfield, second base, and left field respectively. Pete Shaw copped the keystone berth, Lonnie Dill was named guardian of the hot corner, Bill Sawyer took down the short centerfield berth, and Joe Derrickson was

Scott, S. A. E. twirler, who was beaten in the championship clash with Ruffin was named as the other first string pitcher. To complete the infield of the strong mythical combination Emmet Joyce, first sacker for the Monograms, and Jimmie Leak, the Beta short stop, were chosen. Vic Shalom of Alpha Epsilon and Jimmie McNeill of the Betas were named as the other two patrollers of the outer garden.

Shalom, star Alpha Epsilon outfielder, kept his team in the race for the fraternity title by his consistent work at the plate and his great speed in the field. Jim McNeill carried the bulwark of the Betas defense during the course of the regular season and was worthy of all-campus rating. The infield shows a bunch of snappy fielders, Shaw, Leak, Dill, and Joyce

The all-dormitory and all-fraternity teams, of which two were picked, found Alpha Epsilon, and Beta Theta Pi leading with four positions each. Mosier, Phi Delta Theta, and Bost, Sigma Nu, were added as first team hurlers in the Greek league while D'Ascensio of Mangum and one-hit fame, and Mullis of Old West were named for the dormitory team. The remaining positions fell to the lot of such stars as Buck (Monograms), Harris (S. A. E.), Allen (S. A. E.), and Howe (Sigma Nu).

TRACKSTERS SET TO END MURALS THIS AFTERNOON

Finals of Intramural Track Meet at Fetzer Field Today Will Close Season

With many of the constituents of the largest intramural track field ever entered eliminated, the finals of the intramural track meet will be run off this afternoon at Fetzer stadium. The pole vault, high jump and shot put will start at 3:30 while the first running event, the 60-yd. dash, will go off at 4 o'clock.

Ben Gunn, Old West dormitory, who was clocked in 11 flat, in the 100-yd. dash, in the trials Monday afternoon, was credited with the fastest time of the day and is one of the favorites to take the final.

Hundred
Expected to give Gunn a great deal of trouble in the century are Vic Shalom, Alpha Epsilon sprinter, and Sam Sutherland,
