literature. I am glad that the day has come when dramatics can be studied and enjoyed as the old Elizabethans did."

The 100 slides shown traced the history of his work in North Dakota to scenes from last year's production of Paul Green's "The Enchanted Maze," in Memorial hall. Dr. Koch came to Chapel Hill in 1918 from the University of North Dakota.

Before the lecture, the staff members of the dramatic art department were introduced to the perspective Playmakers. Koch expressed his regret that Paul Green could not be there. Professor Green is in New York at present collaborating with a Viennese composer on a play to be written with music.

Junior, Senior Pictures

Seniors and juniors whose last names begin with A, B, C, or D, are urged to have their Yackety-Yack photographs made at Wooten-Moulton before Wednesday night.

The photographers report that upperclassmen have been postponing this necessity, and in order for organization to be maintained it is urgent that the above schedule be followed.

trustees be forced to take next? If they reduce the professors' salaries, Carolina University is apt to be not worth the entering. If they raise tuition they will cut out the poor man's children, and this, as the world knows, is not according to the wishes of President Graham.

Facing the Results

If the taxpayer remains adamant, then we must, of necessity, face the results. If the school of education must be located beyond the radius of many students' desires, then it seems that this must be. If the Carolina engineering school must be moved to where it is invisible, then it seems that this must be.

But if any students whatever remain in Carolina University, it is essential that these students be freed from abnormal surroundings approaching the monastical conditions of the Dark Ages. It is normal and therefore happy for men and women to be together and work together throughout their lives, and, if the findings of psychologists and psychiatrists count for anything, we know that the abnormal conditions of many men and few women, gathered together, or the reciprocal ratio, bring sorrow and ruin.

To The Powers

If the powers that be over our "Greater University" have no faith in the discoveries of psychologists, then we wonder why teachers of psychology are permitted to consume the time of our students. If these authorities over our university do have faith in psychological discoveries concerning the disasters resulting from segregating the sexes or from bringing about an overwhelming ratio of the two, then we wonder how these men can presume to defy the laws of God and nature and risk the consequences of abnormal conditions forced upon our youth.

If Carolina must curtail her efforts to a smaller number of students, this is regrettable; but, at least, let those students (whether their number is small or great) be given normal surroundings. May the trustees find some other way of limiting enrollment, but let Carolina be entirely coeducational.

and calories as Lulu Hunt Peters or Child's restaurants. Chicken, rice, and peas is no longer synonymous with Sunday. In that respect, every day is a Sunday in this bright new eating place.

Students have caught something of the change, and a quiet undertone of conversation has replaced raucous shouting and voluminous banging. Gone are the knives poking in midair or rib. Instead reign comfort, quietude, and a more than fair chance to go through a quarter without paying a visit to the infirmary for digestive ailments.

No, this is not Swain hall. This is the University Dining Hall cafeteria—speaking both theoretically and practically.—Erika Zimmermann in the Chapel Hill Weekly.

Ewald To Lecture

Professor P. P. Ewald, of the University of Stuttgart, Germany, will lecture at Duke university tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. in room 117 of the physics building on "Properties of Crystals for Light and for X-Rays." University faculty members and graduate students in the sciences are invited to attend.

Dorm Elections

Interdormitory President Albert Ellis urges all dormitory residents to take part in the election Wednesday of the dormitory council and other officers who have not yet been selected.

The election will take place in the respective dormitory stores from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. unless other arrangements have been made with the head of the Interdormitory council. The nominations will be made by committees appointed by the president of the respective dormitories. The counselors will be voted on only by the members of the floor on which they reside.

Dramatic Group

10 o'clock, will be officially opened by the president, W. R. Wunsch, of Black Mountain college. The program includes a brief talk on "Marionettes in the Classroom," by William Bost and his players from Salisbury; a few remarks about Broadway and the summer theaters, by Harry Davis, who was technical director of the Island theater this summer in Nantucket, Mass.; a discussion of the new drama courses in the high schools; and a demonstration in directing, tentatively planned as an instructional demonstration, using the play "Red Carnations," by A. T. West and a group of his Duke players.

Dr. Koch will speak on "The Pageant of Education," introducing John W. Parker, production manager for the pageant and Harrington-Russell, directors of the final pageant to be given in Raleigh in April.

The Saturday evening session will be given over to entertainment, demonstrations and productions from theater groups. Plans are being made for presentations from the Raleigh little theater, the Elizabethan Players from Manteo, and the Charlotte little theater and the Negro Children's theater at Raleigh.
