To Help Something Better Grow

Philosophy Of Life

(SHERWOOD EDDY)

... Religion at its best is the whole man seeking the whole of life. . . . It is the highest loyalty to the supremely worthwhile, to the best there is for all mankind. . . .

• Momentous

Assistant Controller Rogerson, business head of the University at Chapel Hill, has been doing a beautiful piece of organizing the business administration in the last several years, and all along he's taken the student body into his confidence. Through the Student Assistant, who is now Fred Weaver, and the three fellows on the Student Advisory committee Rogerson has counted the campus pulse. Improvements, changes, student complaints are all checked against these student representatives. General harmony between students and the business side of the University has thus been promoted. . . .

New curriculums, new departments, new teachers have brought many changes to the other side of the University—the actual educating organization, the part of the University which ostensibly provoked our coming to Chapel Hill. In none of these changes has effective student opinion been voiced. In none of the everyday relations between students and the work of the faculty is there a single student agency to which the administration can turn for advice or investigation . . . nor to which the students can look for representation of their immediate feelings. A new Student Advisory committee to serve Dean House, paralleling the present one serving Mr. Rogerson, is no uncertain necessity.—J. M. S.

• Of the Students, By the . . .

Tonight the debate squad, which sent representatives to England last year, meets for the first time this quarter. It is probable that they will again continue their practice of debating, without decisions, out-of-state schools, with Wake Forest usually as the only exception.

In order to promote student interest in debates, in order to force the participants to debate instead of declaiming or giving after-dinner speeches, in order to promote relations with our neighboring schools, the debate squad this year might easily follow the practice of undertaking debates with State and Duke, with a decision to be rendered on them.

This is a suggestion proposed by a debater here. Since students are forced to pay for debating in their fees, it is time that something was done which would make debating interesting to them. Let's stop having the ludicrous spectacle of four men debating before a large audience of 10 (including the debate squad).—E. L. K.

WHERE ARE THE FRESHMEN?

To the Editor,
 The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Are the freshmen going to sit idly by, twiddling their thumbs while they are left out in the cold on the vital question of ruling their life here at college? Is the class of 1940 going to be run by upperclassmen in every way? Maybe not in the questions that pertain solely to the class itself, but it appears so in every other way. There's plenty of basis for this statement, too.

Each dormitory held the election of its officers recently. That election is somewhat similar to the election of officials in a city when compared to the political set-up of the University. In many instances these dormitories are composed of 50 per cent or better freshmen. Reasons for this are obvious. Many upperclassmen reside in fraternities or other such places. Despite this majority of new men who are residents in the dorms I ask you where are their representatives in the Interdormitory government? Many dormitories have none. In others there may be one or two. Which leaves the upperclassmen to rule as they see fit.

If my memory serves me correctly, freshmen were asked to take full part in the politics of the campus. The reason given for this was that the freshmen will be governed by the ruling power as much as the upperclassmen. If the upperclassmen are put on the nominating committees who in turn select only upperclassmen for the offices, where do the freshmen come in? What are you going to do about it, "underdogs"?

ONE OF YOU.

NOTE

To the Editor,
 The DAILY TAR HEEL:

Every time I hear this story, by way of the DAILY TAR HEEL, about my getting into the wrong apartment two years ago, it has become more exaggerated, more absurd, sillier and less complimentary. I earnestly hope the TAR HEEL has exhausted the imaginary possibilities of this fable.

I am growing weary and thoroughly disgusted with all this ballyhoo about my working hours. I don't work any more than other University employees. Mrs. Lanier has not told any one that I work "24 hours plus."

EDWIN S. LANIER.

THE RED HERRING AGAIN

Mr. Roosevelt seems to be considerably worried by political enemies who associate him with the Communist party. In his speech at Syracuse Monday he took a healthy swing at Republican propaganda using this "false issue."

Communism is a term not easily defined. The Communist party, however, is a very definite but small organization in this country. This party has on numerous occasions supported Mr. Roosevelt. Many non-partisan observers claim that the Communists are supporting the President for re-election.

But Mr. Roosevelt cannot help that. Perhaps no one regrets such support more than he. It is unfortunate that Republicans must stoop to dragging the "red herring." Such tactics can only injure the G. O. P. with intelligent voters. Whether there are any intelligent voters extant is a mooted question.

WHEN the class of 1917 was at college, a long distance telephone call took (on the average) more than ten minutes to be put through.

This time has been whittled down gradually, so that now the connection is made in an average of 1.4 minutes—nine out of ten of them while you hold the line.

But this is only one phase of the relentless effort to improve. Your service is better today because voice transmission is clearer—interruptions and errors less frequent than ever before.

America demands fast but sure telephone service—and gets it.

College men and women find after 7 P. M. a convenient time for long distance calling. Moreover, most rates are lowest then.
