You Tell Me

It seems to be a moot question whether the Tar Heels were just trying to coast along behind a verra nice two touchdown lead last Saturday or whether they were obviously outplayed.

Whatever the idea was, it was apparent that that lead was none too safe. Duck bumps predominated in our own little corner of the stands when Comrades Dickens, Sneed and Wood out rubber-legged the famed Colgate's Jaeger and insisted on tearing off hefty gains.

Anyhow, it was a very large day as far as the scoreboard was concerned. That big black piece of wood was the only thing that was score bored, though.

A Sorry State

A rather wry look came over Coach Hunk Anderson's gentle features when it was announced during the Carolina-Tennessee game that Davidson was holding the mighty Middle team 7-7. It was a kind of now-will-you-believe-me look.

If Coach Hunk doesn't pull a rabbit or something out of his 'Pack he will be a leading member for the honorary presidency of the Future Forgotten Man (Continued on last page)

YANKEES BEATEN BY SCHUMACHER TO SAVE GIANTS

Giants Score In Tenth To Get 5-4 Win In Fifth Game

Behind the erratic but brilliant hurling of Hal Schumacher, the New York Giants clung tenaciously to their glimmering championship hopes yesterday afternoon by emerging 5-4 victors over the New York Yanks in a breath-taking tenning fracas before 45,000 fans at the Yankee stadium.

A towering fly, deep to Joe DiMaggio in center, from the bat of Manager Bill Terry in the tenth inning, sent Joe Moore scampering home from third with the winning run—the run that kept the Giants in the series.

Hal Schumacher, shelled from the mound in his debut in the second game, assumed the Herculean task and struggled through the ten innings, damaged by spotty fielding and his own frequent bursts of wildness, but startling the crowd with just as frequent bursts of pitching genius as he subdued the bristling Yankees time after time with men cluttering the bases.

The Giant conquest makes the series stand at 3-2 with the Yanks in the van. The series will be continued today at the Polo Grounds with the probable starters as Fred Fitzsimmons and Lefty Gomez.

FRESHMEN PLAY FIRST STRINGERS

Fetzer, Skidmore Scout N. Y. U., Maryland

The first string gridders were given a day of rest yesterday and took things pretty easy.

The feature of the afternoon session was a scrimmage between one of the blue teams and the freshman aggregation.

The frosh got off to a flying start when a blue team fumble rolled over the goal line on the first play of the game, and a speedy freshman fell on it for a touchdown. From that time on, however, the freshmen had no opportunity to score, and were able to make practically no gains through the regulars.

Varsity Comes Back

The upperclassmen got going and gained consistently, the frosh being able to stop only one of their drives. The blue team scored three touchdowns, and Charlie McIver accounted for two extra points.

Randy Cooner did some flashy running against the freshmen, scoring two of the touchdowns. Wally Dunham accounted for the other score, while Jack Kraynick also looked very good carrying the ball.

Coach Skidmore, who scouted the N. Y. U. game Saturday, reported that the Violet looked plenty good in spite of the top-heavy score against them. A few breaks on passes gave Ohio State her first scores, and when N. Y. U. loosened up toward the last in a desperate attempt to pull out of it, she gave her opponents some breaks. However, Ohio State did not maintain any long drives against the New York club.

The Tar Heels' next opponents, Maryland, still undefeated and going strong, look plenty big, and plenty good. Coach Bob Fetzer scouted them Saturday.

Football Ushers

Those who worked the Carolina-Tennessee game, report to F. W. Ferguson, Emerson stadium, 10:30 a. m. today and tomorrow. Bring badges.

YEARLINGS READY FOR FIRST BATTLE

Frosh Gridders To Meet Deaclets Friday

Coach Skidmore's freshman gridders began their final week of preparations for Friday's game with Wake Forest by taking on a varsity squad in a lengthy scrimmage session. Two teams of frosh held the varsity team to three touchdowns while they scored one themselves as a result of a fumble.

The starting line-up for the Tar Babies was as follows: ends, Vaillancourt and Taylor; tackles, Hubbard and Mulhearn; guards, Bonner and Smith; center, Carlton; backs, Soufas, Meighan, Brantley and Radmon.

The Wake Forest freshmen are to be played in Wake Forest next Friday, and yesterday's workout helped considerably to show the coaches the worth of their candidates, as well as to polish the defense under fire.

The Baby Deacons are an unknown quantity at this time, but Skidmore's charges are pointing to a victory, and they certainly look to be in good condition for the game.

Pick 'Em Contest

The Daily Tar Heel football Pick 'Em Contest will appear in a new form tomorrow in conjunction with local advertisers. The same prizes, two passes to the Carolina theater for first and one for second and third respectively, will be offered to the students guessing the greatest number of winners.

Only members of the Daily Tar Heel sport staff are ineligible.

Car Drivers

Student car drivers who want to take passengers to the N. Y. U. game are requested to meet John Macphee tomorrow night at 9:30 in the Y. M. C. A. lobby.

Kenfield Announces Fall Tennis Tilts To Start Next Week

Freshmen, Non-Letter Upperclassmen Eligible to Play

The annual fall net tournaments for freshmen and upperclassmen will get under way next Tuesday, according to a statement issued by Coach Kenfield.

All first year men are invited to participate in the tournament and all upperclassmen who are non-lettermen are eligible for match play.

Anyone desirous of entering these tournaments should hand his name in on a piece of paper, stating whether he is a freshman or upperclassman, to Edwin Jeffress, manager of the tennis (Continued on last page)

Close Battles Feature Intramural Games Yesterday

Dekes in 6-0 Win

With the teams settling down to some real football, the second week of play in the intramural football league came to a close yesterday afternoon with close games featuring the play.

The expert toe of Bob Gardiner provided the necessary conversion to give St. Anthony hall a 7-6 win over Theta Chi. Both teams waged a furious battle with the victors pushing over their tally in the first half and Gardiner provided them with the winning extra point.

Theta Chi came back in the second chapter to ring up a tally when Hockett went over for the score but they failed to add the vital point and lost out after a tough battle.

Parker and Wright Score

Scoring once in each period, Lewis dormitory successfully withstood every Everett challenge to come out on the long end of a 13-0 score. Parker and Wright did the six-point scoring (Continued on last page)
