Dark Violets...

Glancing through that fine Communist organ, the Daily Worker, the other day in search of some juicy subversive doctrine and stuff in order to be able to keep up a conversation when rubbing elbows with the "masses," I ran across a rather enlightening story about football of yesteryear.

Couple this with the fact that Ed Williams, star fullback of this year's N. Y. U. team, will not play football for the Violets today, according to Head Coach Mal Stevens, and therein lies food, or something, for thought.

Back in the days when showman Chick Meehan was making the world N. Y. U. conscious, he had a brilliant Negro lineman named Dave Meyers, who later became a still more brilliant quarterback.

The Violets had Georgia on the slate that year and when the Southerners invaded New York they dug up some Jim Crow clause in their contract and refused to play unless Meyers was kept out of the game. Meehan protested hotly, but with several thousand football fans set to see the contest and an adamant bunch of Bulldogs refusing to play ball, he was forced to announce that Meyers was to be held down the bench "with an injured shoulder."

Jumping at a chance to 'crusade,' the Student's League, for Industrial Democracy, forerunner of the present American Student's union, issued their ever faithful leaflet, made speeches, and got excited in general in leading a movement to oust Meehan on charges of anti-Negro discrimination.

Of course, the blatherings of the would-be crusaders were taken as such—yea, even as now—and the Mighty Meehan continued to guide the grid destinies of the New Yorkers.

The Time Has Come...

"...to speak of many things," but football is the most pertinent. At the risk of sticking up an already battered neck, we look for Syracuse to down Cornell's Big Red today when the two teams mix it up in their ancient rivalry. Yeah, I know, Baldwin Wallace beat Syracuse 19-7 last week. So what?

Maybe references to the ASU have made me slightly revolutionary but don't be too surprised if the Violets give the Tar Heels a mighty tough game this afternoon. The New Yorkers are underrated and have the psychological advantage where the Big City is concerned.

We tend to like Georgia Tech and think that State will get the number of Furman's House of Magic in their nightcap.

Tulane-Colgate ought to tie up.

The Wake Forest Baby Deacons, once defeated this season, play hosts to the Tar Babies this afternoon at Wake Forest. The kickoff is slated for 2:30.

Coach Skidmore's squad leaves at noon today for the first test of the season with 31 men making the trip. The outlook for a win is very favorable since Carolina frosh will put a heavy and fast team on the field, and since Duke tripped the

Ditt, Burnette Have Highest Percentages For Ground Gaining

Hutchins, Little, Watson Rank In Ball-Carrying Role

Art Ditt, big Tar Heel fullback, is leading his teammates in the matter of ground gaining so far this season. Ditt has lugged the leather 21 times for a total gain of 121 yards, a percentage of 5.6 per try.

There's a spirited battle going on between Ditt and Jim Hutchins, veteran senior, for the starting fullback post. Hutchins, hero of the 1934 Duke contest and all-Southern and all-South last season, has been getting the starting call so far.

Ditt turned in the best offensive performance of any of his teammates against Maryland, carrying the oval 68 yards on 10 attempts for a percentage of 6.8. He scored both of Carolina's touchdowns.

Mettle

Ditt has proven his mettle on defense, too. When the big Tar Heel line gives way, Ditt throws his 200 pounds against the runner and usually stops him. He is a vicious tackler and a hard blocker. He runs interference beautifully and paves the way for many of the Tar Heel gains.

Hutchins has carried the ball 30 times for 79 yards, an average of 2.6.

Tom Burnette, the Tarboro boy, excels at kicking but he has shown rapid improvement in the ball-carrying role, gaining a total of 121 yards in 25 tries... or 4.8 per try this season.

George Watson, sophomore star, has run 82 yards in 21 tries for an average of 3.9. Quarterback Crowell Little's percentage is 3.1 for 63 yards gained in 20 attempts.

State Will Attempt To Trounce Furman In Raleigh Tonight

Berlinski will Probably be In Game for Wolfpack

Coach Hunk Anderson will try to remove himself from the well known spot tonight when his seemingly toothless Wolfpack tries to stop the Purple Hurricane of Furman on Riddick field.

The Tech team has had more than their share of trouble in getting started, bowing to Davidson, Wake Forest and Manhattan on successive weekends after unimpressively beating Elon in their opener. The 'Pack was handicapped by the temporary loss of Eddie Berlinski because of injuries, but he should be in condition to be in the lineup tonight.

Bad Luck

They made a good showing last week against Manhattan on Ebbets field, but were put down when Bardes' 103-yard touchdown trip was called back after he had stepped offsidelines on the 26-yard line.

They looked better than they have so far this season and made determined stands time and time again against the Jaspers.

Furman will be hampered by the weather if yesterday's rain continues to prevail since they rely mainly on a brilliant aerial attack. They held Wofford and

General

Coach Mal Stevens is basing a goodly share of his hopes on Senior Quarterback Mike Stelmach in the meeting between the Violets and the Tar Heels in Yankee stadium this afternoon. He is a clever passer and a good kicker.

Citadel scoreless but fell before the onslaught of Georgia's Bulldogs 13-0. Coach Dizzy McLeod has been polishing up his House of Magic with this game in view and built up a powerful attack around Captain Bob King, all-America hopeful, George Maddox, June Scott, and Joe Jenkins.

With the double intention of avenging the drubbing the basketball team received at the Violets' hands last winter and of showing loyal Gothamites southern football as she is played, the North Carolina football team entrained last night to meet the N. Y. U. gridders in Yankee stadium this afternoon.

The Tar Heel team, with three very tasty victories over Wake Forest, Tennessee and Maryland under its capable belt, will present a strong forward wall and a group of hard running backs playing polished, orthodox football against the University Heights lads.

Not So Bad

Though the New Yorkers were seemingly blasted by the Ohio State team a couple weeks back, statistics of that game and of the game against P. M. C. last Saturday show the Violets to be an adept versatile crew.

With the rains that swept the East yesterday threatening to continue today, the Tar Heels, after their exhibition of wet weather football against the Terrible Terps last week, are favored to outrush their opponents.

The Violets have been preparing a defense against the Tar Heel offensive as portrayed by their scrub team, but as Coach Ray Wolf has kept several things besides his arm up his sleeve for three weeks, Yankee scouts have not been able to glean much information. They do know that Burnette is a powerful punter, that he has made six out of six conversions, that Hutchins and Ditt are both scrappers, and that Dashiell, Little and Watson are tricky runners.

However, Tennessee knew that and Maryland knew that.

Injuries

Coach Mal Stevens is a little worried about his lack of reserve material to put on the field today

Local Boy

Pride of Durhamites and mainstay of the Duke backfield, Elmore "Honey" Hackney will be counted on plenty to stave off the Golden Tornado in Duke stadium this afternoon.

His sensational running and passing have put him in the limelight for possible all-America honors.

The kick-off is slated for 2:30.

JACKETS, DEVILS TO CLASH TODAY IN DUKE STADIUM

30,000 People Expected To Attend Biggest Game In South

One of the outstanding games in the country will take place in Duke stadium this afternoon when the two leading teams of the South, Duke and Georgia Tech, meet at 2:30.

About 30,000 people are expected to view the kickoff and leading sports writers of Dixie, disunited in their predictions, will be on hand to write word pictures of the game that will go a long way in establishing the leading contender for the Pasadena game on New Year's Day.

Conditions

The Blue Devils are fit to a man and will work Captain Ace Parker, Durham's Honey Hackney and fullback Tipton to the utmost. The Techs on the other hand have reported injuries to Lindsey, Cushing, Morgan, Jordan and Captain Fitzsimmons. Coach Bill Alexander is also worried about the condition of Dutch Konemann, backfield mainstay, who was put to bed early Thursday with a bad throat.

However, with such backs as Appleby, Collins, and Hays, the Golden Tornado is set to go places in a hurry.

Records

After rolling up scores of 55-0 against Presbyterian, 58-0 against Sewanee, and 34-0 against Kentucky, the Techs are not going to let the Devils carry that ball very far without having to fight every yard of the way.

The Blue Devils have been impressive in their defeats of Davidson, Colgate, South Carolina
