The backfield functioned as a well-drilled unit, showing drive on the running plays, and using power to score in every case. Little passing was done, and each of the three touchdowns which came as a result of the Carolina offense was made on power plays.

Meighan, fullback, scored once by intercepting a pass and running the length of the field, and Megson scored the other with his blocked punt.

Soufas handled the kicking in a capable manner, and Radmon threw the passes. Bryant and Sapp went in at ends for a short while, Mulhern subbed at tackle, and Gianakos played a good game at guard while he was in.
