Annual Tapping Of Tau Beta Pi To Have Mulder As Main Speaker

Law School Professor Will Address Engineering Students In Phillips Tonight

J. E. Mulder of the law school faculty will be the featured speaker at the annual fall tapping of Tau Beta Pi tonight in 206 Phillips hall at 7:30.

Since students tapped into Tau Beta Pi come from the mechanical, civil, electrical and chemical engineering departments, the chapters of the different branches are holding a joint meeting for the occasion.

Dr. Mulder's address will be on the subject of law cases which have involved engineers and engineering projects, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Election to membership in Tau Beta Pi, national honorary engineering fraternity, is considered the highest honor obtainable in the engineering school. Outstanding scholarship, while a fundamental requirement for admission, is not the sole criterion. Selection is based on breadth of interest both inside and outside of engineering, adaptability, activity and above all, integrity.

Tau Beta Pi was founded at Lehigh University in 1885 by the late E. H. Higginson, Jr. Its purposes and objects are "to mark in a fitting manner those

Coach Robert Fetzter Makes Talk Before Freshmen Yesterday

Spirit of Sportsmanship Theme of Speech

"The world of today needs the spirit of sportsmanship," said Coach Bob Fetzter in freshman assembly yesterday morning. "Not only is it needed for the game of life, but also to learn the joy of play that develops health, self-control, tolerance, character, and leadership."

After stating that "sportsmanship" defies definition, Mr. Fetzter said that some of the essentials were the "Golden Rule applied to athletic participation and observation, that it insures fair play, and that it is that fragrance that characterizes real

Film Will Be Attraction All Day Wednesday

"Der Hauptmann von Koepe-nick," a German motion picture, will be brought to the Carolina theater by the German department Wednesday.

Along with the German picture will be shown "Stage Struck" with Joan Blondell. This double feature will be shown at the regular hours, changing last year's method of showing the foreign film at midnight.

Military Satire

"Der Hauptmann von Koepe-nick" is a military satire poking fun at the German respect of uniforms. It tells how a cobbler and an ex-convict put on cap-tains' uniforms and managed to get the mayor of Koepe-nick into such a state of docility that he gave them the city treasury.

This is based on a true incident which took place in Koepe-nick in 1906. The film was photographed in 1932 shortly before Hitler came into power.

Display At Library

Shows Books Banned In Maay Countries

"Adventures of Tom Sawyer" Was Formerly Proscribed In Brooklyn

Dubbed as "trash" and banned by the public libraries of Brooklyn and Concord, "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" is now on exhibition in the University library as a part of a display of banned books.

Among the other books in the collection is "An American Tragedy," banned in Boston in 1930 but used as required reading for Harvard students just across the Charles river. It was banned in 1933 in Germany and in 1935 in the United States, though it is receivable through the mails.

China

"Alice in Wonderland," one of America's childhood classics, was banned in China in 1931, the reason given being that "animals should not use human language and it is disastrous to put animals and humans on the same level."

N. C. Congressman Says Deficit Of Nation Is Investment

On CPU Program

The Carolina Political union last night presented Representative Frank Hancock as the principal speaker in a student forum which presented the campaign issues to the Young Democratic club of the University. Less than 200, many of whom were Republican in sympathy, were present.

Hancock, representative from the fifth district and ranking member of the currency committee of the house, outlined the accomplishments of the New Deal.

Defines New Deal

After defining the New Deal as "the early stage of the final effort to throw off the shackles of high finance," he proceeded to list the regulation of securities markets, the attempts to provide for more equitable distribution of wealth, provisions for personal security, and the extension of the effort to decentralize industry as manifestations of this ideal.

Hancock cited the abolition of dire poverty, the creation of equal economic opportunity, and the elimination of concentration of wealth as New Deal objectives in the process of fulfillment. He defended the present government deficit as a positive good, claiming that it was an investment which fostered recent increases in per capita income and wealth in the United States.

Republicans

"I have no faith in Republican leadership," he went on to say. "I will vote for a man who is worthy of the past, a student of the foreign situation, a keen eco-

Daniels Will Issue October Edition Of Magazine Tomorrow

Articles on Consolidation, Self- Help to be Featured

Jim Daniels will bring out his first issue of the Carolina Magazine for the current year tomorrow. The October issue, slightly satirical in vein, has some high spots well worth reading.

Stuart Rabb's drama "Green Masters," a parody on "Green Pastures," is a clever piece of not-too-bitter satire on consolidation and Gordon Mull's "C. C. C. Agglomerata" is an article on life in the Civilian Conservation Corps from the standpoint of a young man who spent two enlistments in the organization.

George Stoney contributes a policy article about self-help students in which he attacks the present conditions under which some 500 students are forced to work and live. "Helpless on a Hilltop" is an appeal for a protective association for self-help students and a disclosure of some of the conditions under which they work.

Randy Reece writes a timely story on a fraternity rushee called "Come out to Dinner." Nick Read does an article on Mexico as he saw it last summer, and Pete Ivey bows to the public in the role of a lexicographer. Pete explains plain and fancy profanity.

The poetic attempts in this issue are "Perversity," by "William Woodson," and "Beantown Symphony" by Ralph Miller.
