this political voice of the majority explained the organization fully explained the set-up and purposes of it. However, I shall briefly review here for the benefit of those who failed to read the article. The party was organized because certain members of the class of '39 realized that in order to rule itself they had to organize against a well-oiled political machine. The bucking of the machine resulted in success. The slogan, I believe, was the following: "Government of the freshmen, for the freshmen, and by the freshmen." There was no hard feeling against the old party and no "mud-slinging" by the new party. They merely called upon the class to govern themselves, and not be governed. I do the same now.

Twiddle? No!

Are we going to just sit by twiddling our thumbs while our class is dictated to by a few? If we work as separate groups for the same cause but without a definite leader, we shall only meet defeat from the political bloc. The few who have based their control on the fact that the majority of students "just aren't interested in politics" will continue to win. It will be another case of the best defeated because there was no teamwork. They heretofore based their power on the fact that no organization opposed them and there was no great interest in politics. Don't let it happen again! By joining the Students' Party you can carry out a majority rule and defeat the minority which has formerly held the sway of power. G. Z.

Glee Club Started Opera Star Cordon On Road To Success

Metropolitan Performer is Graduate of Class of '24; Nephew Of State's First Lady

Due credit must be given the University Glee club for the appearance of Norman Cordon in the Metropolitan Opera house.

The famous bass-baritone, nephew of Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus admits that it was during his University years, when he was soloist for the Glee club, that he "definitely decided upon a singing career."

A member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, Cordon graduated from college in 1924. He went immediately to New York City where he sang in musical comedies for two years. Radio work followed, and in 1933 he made his opera debut in Chicago with the Gallo Opera company. His debut at the Metropolitan last spring was in "Rigoletto." Very favorable comments followed this performance.

The 32-year-old singer still considers Washington, N. C., as his only home and is "still convinced that North Carolina is the greatest state in the Union."

Assembly Discusses Grading System Now In Use At University

Phi Men Also Vote Approval of Civil Service System

After discussing the question of the civil service system in preference to the spoils system, the Phi assembly voted last night 17-6 that the merit system is the better.

A heated argument arose when a bill was introduced, Resolved, That the present grading system of the University be abolished. With Representatives Martin, Dixon, Dudley, and Crowell leading the fight for a different evaluation of a student's knowledge, the question of a substitute for the system arose.

The representatives disagreed on this point, and voted that the bill be carried over until the next meeting.

Speaker Pro-Tem Drew Martin appointed Leighton Dudley and Julien Lane to investigate the system employed at the University of Chicago and report at the next meeting, when the bill will again be discussed.

Freshmen Hear Violin Recital By Dr. Swalin

Music Professor Gives Notes And Explanations

Giving historical notes and explanations as he went along, Dr. B. H. Swalin, accompanied by Mrs. Swalin, gave a violin recital in freshman assembly yesterday morning.

For his first number Professor Swalin chose "O Classate," by the Italian, Alessandro Scarlatti. After this piece, with its sustained, songful style, the violinist played the rather humorous and impressionistic "Minstrels," a composition by DeBussey faintly reminiscent of the American Negro "cake walk," the professor said. The next work was "La Pisanella," a composition with a rather radical harmonic scheme, by Pizetti, an Italian modernist.

Characterizing his last selection as a "bromide," Dr. Swalin closed his program with "Liebesfreud" (Love's Joy), an old waltz made over for the violin by Fritz Kreisler.

Philosophy Society In Search Of Name

Members Feel That Present Title Implies Restrictions

Feeling that its present name implies certain restrictions, the Faculty Philosophy of Science club is looking for a name that will more clearly designate its real purpose.

Organized last year by Dr. L. O. Katzoff in an effort to combat overspecialization in various fields of education, the club seeks to identify itself with the broader methods of education.

Suggestions are invited from all students and faculty members. Proposed names should be mailed or brought to either Dr. Katzoff or Dr. Stephen Emery in the Alumni building.

Statesman King Came To Campus In Early Youth

Illustrious Son of University Vice President of United States Under Pierce

One of the University's most illustrious sons, and one of the country's most capable statesmen, the late William Rufus King, came to Chapel Hill when he was but 12 years old.

After graduation he set up law practice in Fayetteville and was later elected to the state legislature. He moved to a farm in Alabama when his term expired and became one of the first senators from that state. His health failed him and he resigned, but was later appointed minister to France.

In the fall of 1853 he was chosen vice president of the United States under President Franklin K. Pierce, but sickness overtook him, and he died before entering on his duties.

About six years ago President Hoover signed a bill which provided for the erection of a monument to his memory to be built in Clinton, N. C., his birthplace.

Senate Has Debate On Intersectional Football Contests

Di Discusses Emphasis Now Being Placed on Sport

The Di senate last night discussed the bill, Resolved, That the University should not schedule intersectional football games.

President Steele led the defense of the bill by stating that the purpose of football has been greatly changed. In the beginning, he said, the object of football was to promote friendship with other schools as well as to give exercise to the players. He stated that this purpose has been lost in the present fight for national recognition.

Aim

A school is no longer recognized by its educational facilities but by its football team, according to Steele. He added that the aim of a school is either to advance education or to put out a good football team.

He argued that the purpose of a school is to advance education and concluded by saying that no institution had the right to ask players to go one thousand miles or more to play football when it meant missing classes. He said that it is just a case of the "tail wagging the dog."

Opposition

Senator Kendrick opposed the bill by stating that there was no reason why a school should not be good in both educational facilities and sports.

Senator Craig upheld the bill by saying that the football team tries to become nationally known and produce all-America players. He said that football is injurious to players because it brings bodily harm and a loss of study.

It was announced that initiation of new members will take place next Tuesday night.

Dr. Beale To Discuss Academic Freedom

Dr. H. K. Beale, University history professor, will open this year's program of the Southern Committee for People's Rights tomorrow at 8 o'clock in the basement of the Presbyterian church with a discussion of academic freedom in the United States.

show, and if anyone in Chapel Hill ever goes to picture shows, they will remember seeing this dog's sire in "Page Miss Glory."

Mrs. Tack has some interesting and appropriate names for her dogs. Of another Chihuahua she said, "I named this one Charlie Chaplin because he's as funny as any clown I ever saw. Look at the way he walks around on his hind legs and tries to attract your attention." Another one is named "Sticky" because "he is much too sweet."

Birds

When asked if she had ever been bitten by any of her dogs she replied, "Yes, one time. He's buried over there under that pear tree."

In Mrs. Tack's cottage three of the four rooms are lined completely with bird cages of canaries, lovebirds, and parakeets. This year she got 110 more canaries and the number is still increasing. She is especially proud of her white canaries and parakeets, and of her brilliant blue lovebirds.

Because of a number of other duties, Mrs. Tack has had to neglect her garden. Although last year she had 135 different varieties of roses and an iris field with other 500 different named varieties of iris, she does not expect to get them all again this year.

Carpenter

Mrs. Tack is a native of Northern New York, but came South in 1919 because she liked warm weather. Her first years were spent teaching in various North Carolina schools as she went from one place to the other looking for a desirable home. She finally decided on Chapel Hill because she "loves the University." The little house which she now occupies was first taken over to be used as a vacation retreat. One fall she was forced to give up teaching for a while and went there to recuperate from her illness. Trying her hand at carpentry she fixed up the place by herself, weather-boarded and painted the walls, sealed it in, and cut and framed the doors and windows.

Add this to her many other accomplishments and you have a jack-of-all-trades if there ever was one.

conditioning. These two years could be saved in a great many cases if the freshmen were required to take a course on How to Study. This course would present the most efficient and quickest ways to study as are outlined by modern psychologists and educators. Not all students study alike, it is true, but such a course would point the correct general way. Each individual could adapt it to his own personal method. The value of a method of study course is apparent. It should be seriously considered by faculty and administration when changes are being made in curricula. More tangible results would be realized and more real good accomplished by this one course than a dozen other less practical courses which are required of college freshmen.
