Trustee Committee Will Meet To Discuss New Building Plans

Graham And Woollen To Make Report On Project

First official consideration of the University's pending gymnasium, swimming pool, and dormitory for women will take place this afternoon when the executive committee of the school's board of trustees meets in Raleigh.

President Frank P. Graham and Controller C. T. Woollen will attend the meeting to present a report of financial plans for the new buildings.

Stipulations

In announcing the project's approval on October 24, the Public Works administration stipulated that it would provide $283,090, or 45 per cent of the total cost, to be matched by $346,000 of the University's funds.

Controller Woollen has been arranging the University's portion of the funds since that time.

A further stipulation of the P.W.A. was that construction of the buildings be begun by January 11.

The executive committee which meets this afternoon will review progress thus far made on the project.

The next general meeting of the entire board of trustees is scheduled for January.

UNION TO OFFER CONCERT SUNDAY

David Bennett To Lead Salon Ensemble

The Carolina Salon ensemble will present a program including modern American music in Graham Memorial Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. This concert is another in the series of Sunday afternoon concerts to which the public and student body are invited.

David Bennett will conduct the program, and Miss Katherine Kinnard, new member of the faculty of the music department, will be soloist. The highlight of the program will be the cello solos of Miss Kinnard, who is to play Rachmaninoff's "In the Silence of the Night," and Grieg's "Intermezzo."

Modern American music is to feature the concert. "The Manhattan Serenade," by Lewis Alder, "The American Bolero" by Nacio Herb Brown, and the "Song of the Bayou," by Rube Bloom are among the modern selections to be played. The rest of the program will include Schubert's "Rosamunde Overture."

The ensemble is made up of Carolina students. David Bennett, the conductor, has studied conducting with Lamar Stringfield and has been connected with the North Carolina symphony orchestra for the past few years.

Graduate Women's Club To Give Dance

Fun and frolic will begin for the Graduate Women's club when it has its first of a series of dances tonight from 9 to 12, at Archer house.

Dorothy Seay, chairman of the social committee, stated that invitations are being sent out, but due to the incorrectness of the list, it is possible that some names have been omitted. All graduate men and women are cordially invited.

Seniors

Dean A. W. Hobbs announced yesterday that seniors of the school of arts and sciences who expect to graduate next June must fill out applications for a diploma some time during the next week.

Seniors of that school whose names begin with A, B, C, or D must call by 203 South building some time today to make their applications. Schedule for other students will be announced daily.

ASU To Broadcast Program Of Peace On Station WDNC

Rev. Stewart will Give Main Speech On Program

Carrying out their program of peace, the American Student union will sponsor a broadcast from WDNC at Durham at 11:15 Wednesday morning.

Rev. Donald Stewart, pastor of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian church, will make a talk on peace in the 15 minutes allowed the union for the program. Jack Frink, president of the A.S.U., will introduce the speaker and tell briefly of the national A.S.U. campaign against war.

Being unable to secure the chapel hour on Armistice Day, the union curtailed its program to the broadcast. Plans are in the offing for an open forum and panel debate on war next week.

FRESHMAN CLASS ASKS FOR VOICE IN COUNCIL WORK

Demand Representation At Forum Led By John Parker

The freshmen reared up on their hind legs in chapel yesterday morning and demanded a representative on the Student council. In an open forum conducted by John Parker, president of the student body, the first year men freely expressed their opinion that freshmen should have representation in student government.

One first year man said that he didn't believe the freshmen should be allowed to govern themselves. After a reply had been made to that assertion, John Parker was asked just what the Student council did do for the freshmen. "The Student council," he said, "administers the honor system, and further regulates the conduct of the student body, both in relation to our own school and to other schools."

"Keep up the interest that you have shown," was Parker's parting admonition to the class as the lively session ended.

Memento Is Presented in the Form of An Orange and Black Leather Bound Biography

Mrs. George Howe, widow of the late classical scholar and former dean of the college of liberal arts, has just received a memorial from her husband's Princeton classmates of the class of '97.

The memorial, bound in the class colors of orange and black, is in the form of a biography, entirely done by hand in old English lettering. Before being presented to Mrs. Howe, the leather bound book was sent to every corner of the country and signed by Dr. Howe's former class chums.

Career

Dr. Howe devoted his entire academic career to service at the University here, where he achieved notable success. Upon graduation from Princeton he studied at Oxford and the American School of Classical art in Rome. He received the degree of Ph. D. in 1903 from the University of Halle. In the autumn of that year he joined the faculty here.

In his chosen field the noted educator worthily carried on the traditions of his maternal uncle, Woodrow Wilson, with whom he lived during undergraduate days.

Author

Dr. Howe was a frequent contributor to educational magazines and a classical author of note.

Overwork accentuated a heart difficulty of some years' standing and made it desirable for

Alumni Office Has Wild Bear On Sale For Nominal Price

Son of University Captures Bruin in Eastern Carolina; Wants Animal Tamed

Any student wishing to pay $20 for a nice 100-pound bear should get in touch with the Alumni office as soon as possible. The alumnus offering the bear for sale says that it was caught in an Eastern Carolina county, is in good condition, and could be tamed in a short while, if anyone is willing to try.

Not Surprising

An offer of this sort is not surprising to the Alumni office; in fact, it is rather familiar. Not long ago there came a request for a picture of the tombstone of an old Negro janitor in the colored cemetery. Someone else requested a handful of mimosa seed with which to grow trees like those seen around Chapel Hill.

Numerous requests are made for addresses of former students. The other day a G-man asked permission to see the data on file about a former student. To date, however, only one bear has been offered for sale, although last year an alumnus in Texas shipped a ram to be used as a mascot for the football team.

James K. Polk Quickly Became Outstanding Leader On Campus

Former United States President Entered University as Sophomore in 1815

Former President of the United States James K. Polk entered the University as "just another student" in 1815, but soon distinguished himself in campus activities and among his fellows as a "leader and scholar destined some day to become one of the University's most outstanding alumni."

Entering the University as a sophomore in 1815, Polk refused to synchronize his habits with the traditional campus routine. He walked six miles a day to avoid eating with the "ingrates," he called them, who dined in Commons hall, the ancestor of Haywood Duke's Swain. Students considered him a "recluse."

Di Episode

Polk evaded the supposedly compulsory participation in the Dialectic society the first year, but returned his junior year to become one of the society's most fierce and brilliant members. He was elected president of the or-

"Times" Book Fair Materials Received By University Press

Local Unit will Participate in In Country-Wide Exhibition

Receipt of booklets, correspondence and pertinent data in regard to the New York Times National Book fair, in which it will participate, has just been acknowledged by the University Press.

The fair, running November 5-12, inclusive, will show exhibitions of the major publishing companies in the country as well as those of universities. In accord to their large space allotment on the second floor of Radio City, the co-operative exhibit of the university presses intends to be one of the largest.

In addition to the booths of publishers, the fair will have on hand a miniature paper making machine, along with the original Franklin press, and an ancient Chinese printing machine. These will be in operation as well as modern book manufacturing machinery.

Investigation Of Class Executive Groups Causes Ruling

Effective At Once

The Student council acted Wednesday night to put a check on class officers who in past years have had full control of expenditure of class dues without legal sanction of a majority of the class they represent.

Under a new ruling set up by the council, a meeting of 50 per cent of each class will be necessary each year to approve a class budget before any money may be spent by its treasurer.

The ruling followed an investigation by the council into unauthorized expenditures of class funds by members of executive committees.

Infraction

It was discovered that an orchestra has already contracted with the executive committee of the sophomore class for a class dance, without authorization of the class's majority.

Under the council's new regulation, such expenditures as these will only be legal if approved in a budget by half the class.

The Student Audit board, upon which all class checks are drawn, will be required by the council to decline payment of illegally contracted debts.

Effective Now

WOMAN'S SOCIETY PLANS EXTENSION

New Chapters Sought By A. K. G.

Starting a program of expansion into other women's colleges in the state, Alpha Kappa Gamma made arrangements for contacting schools likely to be interested at a meeting yesterday afternoon.

Eliza Rose and Margaret Jordan were appointed to write various schools as to the advisability of establishing a chapter of Alpha Kappa Gamma in these places.

Recognition

Anita DeMonseigle and Ruth Crowell were appointed to investigate the possibility of University coeds being admitted into the American Association of University Women. For several years the administration and interested townspeople have tried to secure this recognition for the coeds with no success.

The next meeting of Alpha Kappa Gamma will be held Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Woman's association room of Graham Memorial.

Ushers Wanted

Approximately 100 more ushers will be needed for the Carolina-Duke football game. Students desiring to work are asked to report to F. W. Ferguson, Emerson stadium, Monday afternoon between 1:30 and 4:30 p. m. It will be necessary to bring passbooks.

Those already notified by mail should also report at that time and bring their passbooks.
