Niggli Drama On Maximilian Opens Tonight

Playmakers To Present New Mexican Play Three Times

Josephine Niggli's "The Fair God," a new Mexican play depicting a portion of the life of Emperor Maximilian, will be presented at the Playmaker theater for three nights beginning this evening at 8:30.

Playing before a set designed by Russell T. Smith, and in costumes designed and executed by Ora Mae Davis assisted by Eloise Banning, the cast includes Bedford Thurman as Emperor Maximilian; Nancy Schallert as Carlota, Empress of Mexico; Madeline Haynsworth as Marina, an Indian Girl; Ruth Smith, Harold Liskin, John Nickell, Norman Hurwitz, John Graff, Lubin Leggett, Douglas Langston, Patty Penn, Charles Maynard, and Dwight Brown.

Theme

The general theme of the play is expressed in one of Maximilian's speeches in the play. Speaking of his reason for staying in Mexico, he says: "I am here to rule a people—a country—not a conquered land. I don't want slaves for subjects. A throne rests on the love of a people, and not on its fear."

"The Fair God" is directed by Samuel Selden, associate and technical director of the Playmaker staff, while John Walker, graduate assistant, is stage manager for the production.

Jitney Troupe Presents Play

Comedy of 1840's Given On Student Series

Comic situations, which have been heightened to the point of absurdity by the passage of time, were pulled forth from their moth balls last night and enacted upon the stage of Memorial hall as the Jitney Players presented "London Assurance," the "greatest comedy hit of 1840."

Playing the part of Max Harkaway was Pen Harrison, former Playmaker and graduate of the class of '29. The Jitney Players include in their repertoire for this season a play written by Harrison, entitled "Adventures in Oz."

Change

Marjorie Jarecki played the part of Lady Gay Spanker, the fox hunting English woman. Alice Cheney, originally scheduled to play the part, was in New York on a booking trip.

The plot and counter-plot of last night's play had to do with youth sacrificed on the matrimonial altar to age in order to retrieve the family fortune.

Ethel Barrymore Colt played the part of the young girl about to be married off to a man old enough to be her father when she falls in love with the old man's son.

Crime et Chatiment

Tonight at 9:30 in the Carolina theater a showing of the French motion picture "Crime et Chatiment" will be presented.

The picture is based on the Russian novel of Dostoevsky and depicts conditions as they existed in imperial Russia. Music by Honegger accompanies the action.

Student Patronage Enables Cafeteria To Tender Special

Duke Discusses Quantity of Food Consumed by Carolina Students

Due to student patronage the University cafeteria is able to offer a special 25 cent meal today, announced Haywood Duke, manager, yesterday afternoon.

"Every day, except during holidays, we have fed between 1,800 and 2,400 in the University cafeteria since we began operating this fall," stated Duke.

"We use four steers each week, and 2,000 rolls per day. Besides the rolls we have about 500 biscuits for breakfast and use 75 loaves of bread," explained the manager when asked how such a large number was fed. "Potatoes are a staple food anywhere and the cafeteria uses a good deal of them, averaging 250 pounds every day."

Sophomore Picture

Yackety Yack pictures of the sophomore class will be taken tomorrow morning at 10:30 in front of Manning hall. All members of the class are requested to meet promptly at that time in order that there will be no delay.

Actress Colt Gets Shock As Lassies Make Faux Pas

Youngest Barrymore Runs Into Difficulty with Definition of Term "Actress"

Several weeks ago Ethel Barrymore Colt, who took the lead in last night's production of "London Assurance," had just finished a performance in the "Rivals." Many of the audience had had very little opportunity to see a play except those given by the local dramatic club.

After the performance the dramatic teacher asked Miss Colt to give a short talk for her group. The younger Barrymore consented. She did not take time to change her costume, but invited the would-be actresses and actors into her dressing room.

Questions

After talking about the theater and the stage for a few minutes she asked if anyone had any questions they would like to have answered. "I will be glad to answer them if I can."

There was a moment's embarrassed silence and then one of

Junior Budget To Be Offered

Orchestra To Play For Session At 10:30

President Rube Graham last night prayed that 50 per cent of his junior class will come to Memorial hall at 10:30 this morning to approve its annual budget.

Freddy Johnson's orchestra will play at the meeting until there is assembled the number of juniors required by the Student council to approve their class budget.

Enthusiasm over the novel plan to entice juniors to the session was running high over the campus yesterday.

Swing Class

Bud Hudson, president of the sophomore class, declared, "I believe the junior class is swing-minded enough to attend this meeting."

It was Hudson's class which recently was forced to hold three meetings before its budget was validated.

Niles Bond, whose senior class has met twice and still has an unapproved budget, said, "I rather believe the juniors will do it."

According to the council's ruling, no expenditures of the junior class will be possible until half of the class assembles and approves the budget.

Heard Talks Before Cosmopolitan Club

"We have nothing to lose and everything to gain by joining the League of Nations," said Alex Heard, of the League of Nations association, in the principal address before the meeting of the Cosmopolitan club Tuesday night.

After Heard's speech the meeting was thrown open to a general discussion of what the American attitude toward the League should be. Several of those present spoke both for and against America's entry.

The speaker of the evening and several other members of the League of Nations association were invited by the Cosmopolitan to attend the meeting, and Ernest Vanderburgh, of the N. L. A., was asked to lead the open forum on the topics discussed.

Revival Of Honors College Considered Possible By Hobbs

J. C. Russell Has Dictionary Printed By London Institute

University Professor's Book Published as Special Supplement to Historical Bulletin

"The Dictionary of Writers of Thirteenth Century England," by J. C. Russell, University professor in the department of history, has recently been published as a special supplement to the "Bulletin of the Institute of Historical Research," in London.

Professor Russell's book is the result of research which began in 1927, and included an examination of practically all of the printed materials and much of the unprinted sources of thirteenth century England.

Assistance

He was assisted in his study by a fellowship from the John Simon Guggenheim foundation, grants from the American Council of Learned Societies, and by the Smith fund of the University of North Carolina.

The book gives the biographies of the known writers of thirteenth century England. It is dedicated to Professor C. H. Haskins of Harvard university, with whom Professor Russell studied as a graduate student. He received his doctoral degree there in 1926 and taught at Colorado college and the New Mexico Normal university before coming here in 1931.

He repeated that today will be the last chance for his classmates to secure tickets.

Faculty Committee On Instruction Hears Student Group

To Offer Degrees

For three hours yesterday afternoon the faculty committee on instruction discussed with a group of representative students the possibility of reviving the Hibbard "Honors College," a program which would free a maximum of 50 above-average students from all regular academic requirements to carry on independent study in selected fields with the guidance of tutors.

Consideration of the Hibbard plan, drawn up in 1928 but never put into actual practice, followed a paper read by Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the school of arts and sciences, on what the University may do to provide special opportunities to students of superior ability.

Hobbs' Paper

A condensed statement of Dean Hobbs' paper appears on page two. Dean Hobbs, as chairman of the faculty committee on instruction, has been largely instrumental for bringing about the opportunity for students to discuss educational problems with his committee of deans.

The Hibbard Honors College plan would provide opportunities for students of exceptional ability to work independent of course, examination, attendance, and grade requirements to master a chosen field of study. The only requirement would be that in order to obtain a degree the student would have to pass a comprehensive examination in his senior year.

The Hibbard plan, Dean Hobbs said, had "never been formally killed."

Asked by Phi Beta Kappa Vice President Don Wetherbee whether the Hibbard plan would help solve the problem of providing incentive to students who really want an education, Dean Hobbs said: "I think it would."

Social Sciences

Especially in the division of the social sciences and humanities the liberal arts dean thought the plan could be offered for students to take.

"I personally would like to see some students do it," Dr. Hobbs stated. "I believe they would get a lot out of it, myself." Men who tried the program, he assured the committee, would get a lot out of it.

Self-education, the dean explained, is the best method of education.

Wetherbee asked if there was a possibility of the faculty's re-adopting the Hibbard plan.

"I don't know," was Dean Hobbs' answer. He said that if a group of students asked for the opportunity their petition would probably be granted if they were judged capable of self-directed study.

Administration

Dean Hobbs said he had already brought the plan before the Administrative board, but the attitude of that group was to concentrate first on the local honors courses in the various departments before experimenting with the more extensive Honors College set-up.
