Phantoms Meet Duke In Durham Tonight

Campus Votes Split In CPU Judicial Poll Federal Revision Plan Faces Opposition At University

The second day's returns of the Carolina Political union poll to discover opinion regarding President Roosevelt's recent judicial proposal yielded 15 votes in favor of the plan and 15 against it with two voters undecided.

Fifteen students voted in favor of the plan and 14 against it, with 2 indecisions. Only one faculty vote was cast yesterday and that was against the proposal. Nine persons voting against the proposal were Roosevelt supporters.

Class Hours

Eighty-three classes were still favored over classes at 8 o'clock—23 votes being cast yesterday for 8:30's and only 4 for 8 o'clock classes.

The poll is being held in the "Y" by the Carolina Political union. All students, faculty members and townspeople are urged by the union to go to the "Y" sometime during the remainder of the week and cast their votes.

The purpose of the poll is to find out student and faculty opinion on the judicial proposal made recently by President Roosevelt to revise the membership of the Supreme court of the United States and "inject some new blood" into it.

Utility Expert Talks Tonight

Bauer To Hold Forum On City Problem

Dr. John Bauer, nationally recognized expert in the field of public utility regulation, will conduct an open forum on aspects of municipal ownership in room 103 Bingham hall tonight at 8 o'clock.

At one time a member of the Princeton university faculty, Dr. Bauer has been director of the American public utilities bureau in New York since 1925. He has been financial and rate adviser to the city of New York almost continuously for the past ten years.

Rate Expert

He has testified as rate expert before numerous commissions and courts, and has been consultant to many governmental bodies and other public groups. Author of several books and magazine articles on public utilities, he was recently chosen editor of the public utilities department of the National Municipal Review and editorial consultant to Public Management.

Although this forum has been arranged primarily for students of economics, government and electrical engineering, the general public is invited to attend.

Going To Harvard?

John C. Baker of the Harvard graduate school of business administration will be in Dean Carroll's office in Bingham hall March 5 to interview students contemplating an education at Harvard.

Trustees To Hear Greek Plea For Lower Electricity Rates

Ruling By Dean House Says Present Rate Fair and Just Petition Planned

Henry Clark, president of the Interfraternity council, yesterday announced his intention to appeal to the University's board of trustees to consider his petition for a reduction in fraternity electricity rates.

Since last December Clark has petitioned the administration for reduction of charges from the present commercial rate to the community's residence rate, but earlier this month received a ruling by Dean House that present rates are just and will not be changed.

Summary

A summary of Clark's objections as recently presented to the administration follows:

"The fraternities . . . feeling that the present commercial electric rates being charged are unjust, ask for a shift to charges

Spring Quarter Registration Set For March 3-13

Procedure To Be Same; More Efficient System to Be Attempted

Spring quarter registration for all students will last from March 3 through March 13 it was decided yesterday at a meeting of the registrations committee.

Students can get copies of the spring quarter class schedule any time at the office of Ben Husbands, associate registrar, 101 South building.

Procedure will be the same as previously, with students first getting their registration permit, choosing their course with their dean or adviser, and securing class cards and paying their bills.

Student Describes Scenes In Flood-Stricken Valley

Louisville Offers Pathetic View To Bullins; Waters 11 Miles From Normal Banks

BY JIMMY SVERTSEN

"There must have been a great deal of sickness because nearly all of the traffic was ambulances," said Ellis Bullins yesterday in describing the scenes he viewed on a recent trip to St. Louis by way of Louisville.

"The Ohio had gone down a good bit when I was there," he explained, "but conditions were so bad that I was held up two hours and a half in Louisville. Evidently the railroad officials thought the trestle across the river was in bad shape," Bullins said, "because we were transferred from the train to a bus to be carried across the river."

Destruction

"Louisville offered a pathetic view with the waters backed up across the town 11 miles from the natural banks of the Ohio and many beautiful homes where the water had subsided presented a sad picture of complete ruin."

"I shuddered when I thought of what this destruction meant to the many home owners," he said, "because these homes represented to many of them everything they had made during a lifetime." He described the sight as "pathetic."

"Going through Illinois," said Bullins, "the entire railroad track was covered with water from the Wabash river. When I looked it seemed that instead of riding on a train I was on a ship at sea."

"I was talking to the conductor as we rode along," said Bullins, "when he suddenly pointed to a distant house, surrounded by seven feet of water, saying that it was his home."

Bullins, first vice-president of the North Carolina Methodist student conference, was on his way to attend a meeting of the conference executives when he was caught in the flood area.

Israel Speaks On Democracy

Purim Festival Group Meets At Inn

"The greatest contribution of the Jewish people to the world has been the courage to defy uniformity in the midst of a definite trend toward it," said Rabbi Edward Israel last night to an audience of over 150 students, faculty, and townspeople who came to hear him speak in the Carolina inn on "What Must the Jew do for the Future of American Democracy."

The speaker from Baltimore was introduced to the congregation by Rabbi Bernard Zeiger as "one of the country's leading advocates of social justice."

Background

The tall, deep-voiced Jewish leader began his address by going into the background of the Jewish people and their problems. He brought them up into the 19th century where he said that the world had had its golden age of civilization. The rabbi said that the leaders of that era of democratic nationalism insisted upon maintaining the dignity of minority groups, and that it is only on such a basis that democracy can hope to survive.

Rabbi Israel closed his address by saying, "We can pay the Jewish debt to America by Jewish courage which has become synonymous with American courage."

Following the speaker's address an open discussion of problems confronting the Jewish people was held.

Beust To New Orleans

Miss Nora Beust of the school of library science is spending the week in New Orleans where she is attending the meeting of the National Educational association.

John W. Parker

John W. Parker, extension instructor in dramatic art and secretary of the Carolina Dramatic association whose play, "Sleep on, Lemuel" will be presented at the Playmaker Theater tonight at 8:30.

Md. Senator To Come Here

Millard Tydings Is To Speak Wednesday

Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.) last night wired his acceptance to a Carolina Political Union invitation to speak here at chapel period next Wednesday morning.

According to Frank McGlinn, president of the C. P. U., the democratic leader will schedule his appearance here with a visit to Raleigh.

Senator Tydings consistently has opposed President Roosevelt's court reform program which is now the center of discussion in Washington. Yesterday, on the floor of the senate, Tydings announced that he would oppose the reform proposals, making a total of 33 senators who oppose the reorganization plan.

Opera Singer Possesses Unusual Presence Of Mind

Helen Jepson, Who Sings Here Monday, Believes in Always Telling the Truth

According to anecdotes that have grown around the Metropolitan's new star, Helen Jepson, who sings here Monday night on the student entertainment series, she appears to have a presence of mind that surmounts unexpected obstacles.

One of her formulas appears to be the art of telling the exact truth.

Cops

Miss Jepson loves to drive a car, and drive it fast. One morning she was driving into New York to work with her coach and accompanist on an opera role.

"Hey, there," yelled a traffic cop as he drew alongside her car.

"Good morning. Fine weather, isn't it?" she retorted amiably.

"Yes, and a fine speed, too," he grumbled.

"Only forty-two miles, look at the speedometer," she answered calmly.

Looking surprised that she had not begun a furious argument she was handed a ticket, the cop saying glumly, "I hope

Tournament, Big Five Spots Dependent On Crucial Game

Tar Heel Staff

The Daily Tar Heel staff nomination for editor will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in 214 Graham Memorial. All members of the editorial staff of the paper are asked to attend, but only those members will be permitted to vote.

New Dramatic Production To Open Tonight

Four Plays Are 48th Bill To Be Given By Playmakers

Four plays of the American scene written by students in Dr. F. H. Koch's courses in Playwriting will be presented tonight, tomorrow night, and Saturday at 8:30 in the Playmaker Theater.

Comedy

"Sleep On, Lemuel," a comedy of a negro wake, by John W. Parker will be the first play of the bill in a setting designed by Don Watters and lighted by Patty Penn.

A dramatization of the legend of Abraham Lincoln's birth, "Leavin's," by Janie Britt, is the second production and is directed by Josephine Niggli. The lighting will be done by Evelyn Snider with the setting

Capacity Crowd To See Ruth, Podger Lead Teammates

Edge Given Duke

With tourney and Big Five spots dependent upon the outcome, Carolina's great "second-half" team meets Duke's great "second-half" team on the latter's home court at 8 o'clock tonight.

The winner will probably be ranked second to the favored Washington and Lee quintet in the Southern Conference tournament to be held in Raleigh March 4, 5, and 6.

Possible Split

Should Duke win, the two teams will be tied for the Big Five basketball championship.

Any advantage in tonight's game is conceded to Duke because of the site of the game. Treading on familiar ground, the Phantoms set a fast pace a few weeks ago in the Tin Can to outdistance the Blue Devils 41-35.

Line-Ups

At full strength, Coach Walter Skidmore will probably start Mullis and Bershak at the forwards, Potts and Ruth at guard, and Meroney at center for the Tar Heels.

Coach Eddie Cameron will rely on O'Mara and Edwards at the forward posts, Podger and Cheek at the guards and Herrick at center.

Rally Planned By Democrats

March 4 Set As Date For Dinner Party

The Democrats of Orange county will stage a rally here March 4 centered around a dinner dance in the Carolina inn and later in the evening will listen to a radio speech by President Roosevelt.

Judge Phipps of Chapel Hill, estimated that approximately 100 people will attend the dinner party and announced that one of the campus orchestras will be engaged to play for the evening.

Plans

The committee in charge of preparations for the event have not as yet completed plans for the evening but Judge Phipps, chairman of the committee, expressed the belief that the local rally will be well attended because it is the only rally in this county.

The committee working with Judge Phipps is composed of W. E. Thompson, C. T. Durham, E. C. Smith, Larry Flynn, and S. A. Nathan, all of Chapel Hill, and A. H. Graham, G. W. Ray, and B. D. Sawyer of Hillsboro.

Freshman Smoker

The annual Freshman class smoker will be held tomorrow night in Swain hall at 8 o'clock, it was announced today. Freshmen should obtain passes for the occasion in the lobby of the "Y" today during chapel period, and between 12 and one o'clock this afternoon.
