P. U. Board Seeks Council Ruling On Staff Elections

John Parker Promises Interpretation At Monday Meeting
Campus May Vote

Through Voit Gilmore, secretary, the Publications Union board yesterday called for a student council interpretation of the section of its constitution describing campus election of editors-in-chief of campus publications, as a result of the resolution of the DAILY TAR HEEL staff Thursday to elect its editor rather than nominate him for campus vote.

The clause in the section on the duties and powers of the board being called for interpretation is that which reads: "To appoint and set forth the duties of all other paid officers on the various publications, excepting that the editors-in-chief of the various publications are elected by the Union."

Entire Student Body

As defined in the publications constitution, which was revised and approved by the student body last spring, the "Union" means the entire student body.

John Parker, president of the student body, last night stated that the student council will consider the clause and issue an interpretation at a meeting Monday night. He termed it "most significant."

Thursday afternoon the newspaper staff passed, by a vote of 33-3, the resolution, "That the DAILY TAR HEEL staff elect its editor instead of nominating him for campus vote."

Council Must Decide

Legality of the resolution must be determined by the student council. If it does not recognize the resolution, a campus referendum may be called, with the staff asking the student body to vest the power of election.

All Y. W. C. A. units in Eastern North Carolina, comprising one of thirteen southern districts, will meet in Chapel Hill Saturday for a general assembly. Western units will meet at Guilford college Sunday and Miss Willett and Miss Celestine Smith will attend both services.

Business problems will be discussed and open forum discussions will be held concerning the needs of local associations and their problems of effecting a tie-in with the national group.

Jepson Will Sing In Memorial Hall At 8:30 Monday

Metropolitan Soprano Is to Appear as Second Winter Quarter Performer

Acclaimed by critics as the "radiant find of the year," Helen Jepson, Metropolitan opera star, appears Monday night at 8:30 in Memorial hall on the student entertainment series.

Says the New York Post of Miss Jepson: "Tall and blonde, she reminded me yesterday of a young and svelte Jeritza. In fact, if Mr. Gatti-Casazza were Mr. Earl Carroll he would consider Miss Jepson the first among the lady singers at the Metropolitan."

In Review

"The audience was at her feet before she had sung a note. It's not often, even in these favored days, that opera stars look like that and sing so well. She gave a thrilling performance," according to the Washington News.

Following her debut at the Metropolitan opposite Lawrence Tibbett, Miss Jepson in the past two seasons has sung the leading soprano roles in "Faust," "Pagliacci," "La Boheme," "Martha," "Thais," "Louise," "Tales of Hoffman," and other operas.

She has also appeared as guest artist with the Chicago Grand opera during the last two years, and has been acclaimed the successor to Mary Garden in that city.

Freshmen Smoker Held In Swain Hall

Ivey Amateurs Are Highlights Of Affair

To the strains of "Star Dust," played by Sam MacPherson and his Carolina Buccaneer Orchestra, the Freshman smoker began last night at 8 o'clock in Swain hall.

During the first of the program while refreshments were being served, MacPherson's Buccaneers gave a short concert of syncopated swing music with vocal renditions by Randy Cooner.

Pete Ivey, master of ceremonies, introduced Dean Spruill who made a short talk. A "Hill-Billy" trio, of Ivey amateur night fame, swung forth with the "St. Louis Blues" followed by another amateur-nightster, Geddie Monroe, who sang "Up in Bessie's Room" and "Stomping at the Savoy."

Bill Olsen, public speaking professor, lead the freshmen in "Sweet Adeline" and an old

Plans for Future Wife of Weisner Include Skiing, Cooking

Recently graduated from the University, and until a few days ago, employed by the local advertising firm of Gray and Thompson, Lydia "T" Daniels took leave of the campus Sunday morning and turned northward towards Swampscott, Mass., and her impending marriage.

"I've always hated June weddings," "T" volunteered, "so I'm going to be different. That's why we have picked May instead of the conventional June."

When May rolls around, Dick Wiesner will be on hand. "T's" plans for the future include learning to ski and touching up a bit on the art of cooking.

New Play Bill Ends Tonight

Playmakers To Present Plays Again Tonight

The 48th bill of new American plays to be presented by the Playmakers closes its three-night run tonight at the Playmaker theater.

Directed and produced entirely by students in the dramatic arts department, the plays were chosen as the best examples of dramatic writing done this year in the playwriting classes of Professor F. H. Koch.

Under the general supervision of Samuel Selden of the Playmakers' staff, the scenery was designed by Walter Preston and Don Watters, and constructed by John Walker, general stage manager, and the stage crew. Lighting is by Joe Feldman.

Vote Changes In Court Poll

Balloting To Continue Through Monday

For the first time since the polls were opened, the voting was definitely against President Roosevelt's recent plan for Supreme Court revision in yesterday's balloting at the survey being conducted by the Carolina Political union. Yesterday's count yielded 23 against the plan with 13 in favor and 3 undecided.

A count taken of the total votes cast during the poll so far revealed a total of 255 votes in favor of the proposal and 229 against it with 42 undecided.

Staff Names Hudson, Read Mag. Editors

Literary Men Fail To Endorse Action Of Student Daily

A joint editorship of Bill Hudson and Nick Read was endorsed by the Carolina Magazine staff last night as their official nomination of editor for 1937-38.

The Hudson-Read combination defeated Ralph Miller, the only other candidate. Jim Daniel, present editor, who presided, would not announce the final count.

After three ballots, the Magazine staff deadlocked on the motion made by Miller to support the action of the DAILY TAR HEEL yesterday in electing instead of nominating its editor.

First Ballot

On the first ballot the Magazine staff voted 9 to 4 to support the DAILY TAR HEEL's action. On the second ballot the writers stood again in favor of endorsing the action of their sister publication, with a vote of 8 to 7. Editor Daniel, however, cast his vote against the proposal and threw the issue into deadlock.

The Read-Hudson combination was nominated by Shelby Foote, who explained that the dual arrangement would guarantee representation of both the artistic and reportorial phases of editing the publication.

"This irregular arrangement will fulfill a long-felt need," Foote said.

Associate Editors

Both Hudson and Read are at present associate editors of the Magazine and are serving their third year as contributors.

Hudson, non-fraternity, now in charge of reviews in the DAILY TAR HEEL, has served on the staff of the campus daily ever since his freshman year. He is also a member of the University club, which Read heads this

Play Reading To Be Given

Anderson's "Wingless Victory" On Bill

"Wingless Victory," Maxwell Anderson's latest Broadway production, in which Katherine Cornell is now playing in New York, will be read by Mrs. Urban T. Holmes tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the Playmaker theater.

Anderson's story of the marriage of an eastern princess to a New England sea captain, and the reaction of the hide-bound villagers to the match has won the almost unanimous praise of the critics, who agree that as the Princess Oparre, Miss Cornell has one of the more powerful roles in her career.

Largely in Verse

Written largely in verse, "Wingless Victory" rises to dramatic heights of great force considered by many to be unsurpassed in the modern American theater.

According to Professor F. H. Koch, it is particularly fitting that Anderson's play be read at this time since three of his

International 'Y' Worker To Talk Here On Tuesday

Sherwood Eddy to Describe Lives of Share-Croppers at Memorial Hall

"Y" Secretary Harry Comer said yesterday that Sherwood Eddy, international "Y" worker who will speak in Memorial hall Tuesday night, is an authority on share-cropping as a result of his recent interests in Mississippi delta farming.

Eddy's talk will be on the lives of share-croppers, based on his experience as operator of a co-operative farm experiment with a number of tenant families.

Dollar a Year

Before confining himself to this country, Eddy was a "dollar-a-year" international secretary for the Y. M. C. A., travelling in 50 foreign countries.

As a special interest during recent years, Eddy has led special study tours of students and professors from the United States to the different troubled countries of the world, particularly in Europe.

Class Is Halted By Robin's Visit

Bird Returns Dr. Adams Visit Of Several Weeks Ago

A robin, one of the famous Orange county roost of a month ago, recently stopped an English 22 class to return a visit to Dr. Raymond Adams, which he had paid the robins when they stopped here.

The class was discussing Shelley's "To a Skylark," led by Dr. Adams when the social robin announced his visit in a very loud voice just outside the window. At first the class was startled but then listened to the robin's shrill conversation with animated interest. When the robin ended his visit as abruptly as he had begun it, the class resumed its studies, understanding what Shelley meant by "profuse strains of unpremeditated art."

Public Utilities Expert Addresses Students, Faculty

Dr. Bauer Discusses Aspects of Municipal Ownership of Public Utilities

Public utilities expert Dr. John Bauer addressed a group of students and faculty members Thursday night in the auditorium of Bingham hall on the aspects of municipal ownership of public utilities.

From the experience accumulated as present director of the American public utilities bureau in New York and as former member of the Princeton university faculty, Dr. Bauer expressed the conviction that regulation of public utilities, in which public interest is extensive, by private individuals for private profit had always proved unsuccessful.

Dr. Trabue appeared on the program of several important sections, according to Guy B. Phillips, general college adviser. On Saturday morning the department of education head spoke on "Articulation of Records and Research for Guidance Purposes" before the American College Personnel association.

"He also spoke at a luncheon meeting of the National Vocational Guidance association," said Mr. Phillips, "and participated in the afternoon in the discussion of a yearbook on 'Reading' prepared by the National Society for the Study of Education, to whose board of directors he has just been re-elected for another three year period.

Dr. Knight, former president of the Society of College Teachers of Education, participated in discussions of the yearbook of that society, which deals this year with "Backgrounds of Education."
