Final Banquet May 11 Will Have Debate, Speeches

Over 200 political notables have been invited to attend the first anniversary celebration of the Carolina Political Union May 11.

The occasion's main event will be a debate in the evening between Ralph O. Brewster, exgovernor and senator from the state of Maine, and Texas' Congressman Maury Maverick on new angles of the Supreme Court issue.

Preceding the debate, students, faculty, and politicians will feast at a banquet in the Carolina Inn where Governor Clyde Hoey and Charles A Jonas, University trustee and chairman of the Republican National Committee of North Carolina, are expected among others to make after dinner talks.

C. P. U. Chairman Frank Mc-Glinn requests that men wishing to attend the banquet contact Union members. Admission tickets will be sold at $1.25.

Geddie Monroe To Give "Spinnin' The Bottle" For Wigue And Masque Production

One of the feature numbers of "Say the Word," the original musical comedy and revue now in rehearsal and to be produced the middle of this month by the Wigue and Masque club, is "Spinnin' the Bottle."

The song is introduced by Geddie Monroe, leading comedian of the play, to persuade the students at the university where the scene of action is laid to revive the old game of "spinning the bottle."

After Quadrangle Jones, played by Monroe, explains in song and pantomime just how the game is played, the entire chorus takes up the song and goes into action. Monroe wrote the words and music for the number. those made famous by Alice

Further comic elements of the play are upheld by Nancy Schallert as Mrs. Van Smythe, born Daisy O'Brian; Audrey Rowell as a waitress in the local cafe frequented by the university students; and Sue Southerland the Of CPU Group college widow type with "S. A."

Carl Fistel, principal in organizing the club, is directing the production with the assistance of Fred Tunick and Sanford Stein, who serves as script boy. Walter Preston is general singled out Alex Heard, Voit technical director and Bert Halperin, advertising manager.

Explains Inter - Dorm Council's Powers And Purpose

Already Approved

A dormitory constitution, the first of its kind in the United States, explaining the purpose, organization and powers of the Inter-dormitory council was written by a committee headed by Jim Joyner, read to the council and unanimously adopted by them Wednesday night.

The constitution, after some additional provisions were suggested at the meeting, is not complete as yet, but Joyner promised yesterday that it is certain to be ready for publication in a few days.

Organization

The council, which is composed of the various dormitory presidents and councilmen, will now operate strictly according to the articles set down for them in the new constitution.

Having been working on the legality for some time, Jim Joyner and his assistants, Billy Robpresented it to the council Wednesday night with the thought of improving the workmanship of the group and having a more unified form of organization.
