Students Urged To Eat At Grade "A" Restaurants

State Board of Health Indicates Rating Requirements for All Restaurants

All students are urged by the state board of health to patronize restaurants displaying a Grade A health rating certificate.

A Grade A rating indicates that the establishment has been found clean and sanitary by health inspectors and entitled to a numerical ranking of 90 to 100.

Other Grades

Restaurants displaying Grade B certificates received a rating of 80 to 90 and those displaying Grade C signs merit a rating of 70 to 80.

According to the state board of health, those who eat in restaurants not fulfilling sanitary requirements run the risk of contracting one or more of these diseases: septic sore throat, typhoid fever, diphtheria, trench mouth, syphilis, or tuberculosis.

Among the board's requirements are:

1. Wash room must be well ventilated, illuminated, clean, and in good repair; soap and individual towels must be furnished.

2. The dining room must be well ventilated, illuminated, free from flies, and clean; the tables and linen must be clean.

3. The kitchen must be screened against flies, well ventilated, and protected, against roaches, mice, and other vermin. The cooking utensils must be cleansed thoroughly after each usage and kept clean. The refrigerator must be kept clean and free from all odors and rancid food that would contaminate other food in the refrigerator. Dishes must be thoroughly washed with hot water and allowed to remain until dry. No hand drying is permitted.

4. Servants must hold certificates from reputable physicians showing they are free from syphilis, gonorrhoea, tuberculosis, and other communicable diseases, and that they are not typhoid carriers.

5. All Grade A cafes and restaurants serve only Grade A raw or pasteurized milk in original containers.

6. The water must come from

Russell who told the police Taylor's life story.

"Let's go to my hotel and get my passport," he suggested. But in the excitement he had forgotten the name of the establishment. However his sense of direction came to his rescue and he led the police up several flights of stairs to his room. The missing passport was unveiled and the police apologized.

"Now perhaps you can tell me what it's all about," Taylor said. The police told of a suspected German spy who was known to operate in the vicinity of the shop where Taylor bought his food. His Nordic features gave the police a lead. His missing passport strengthened their suspicions.
