THE RETURN TO NORMALCY WITH DAVIS

Someone ought to point out that Glenn Davis will be on the wall again tomorrow afternoon leading the cheers for Carolina. You know by now who Glenn is.

The cheering last Saturday was an improvement, whether that was due to the temporary cheerleaders or to the crowd or to the excitement of the great game. Whether Davis will take advantage of the situation is entirely up to him.

The significant comment now is that everything seems to have settled back down, and the campus uneasiness over the apparent abandonment of the "due process of law," fair play, and the general way things are done about this place had its desired effect. Everybody involved in the incident must have come out of the thing a little more wise for the wear.

SOMEONE OVERHEARD THE BUCCANEER PLOT

Our Special Secret Agent Operator 14 was snooping outside the Buccaneer office late last night.

"The next issue will be Bitter," Clement was saying, "Bitter."

Our operator swore that Clement intends to hurl diatribes at everyone and everything. He will be stinging, cutting, caustic, malignant, spiteful, acrid, pungent, unpalatable, railing . . . and mean.

Well, we know what that means, has always meant, in respect to the rest of us. We are, therefore, publicly beating the Buccaneer to the draw: we are hereby "turning the other cheek."

We will be true blue, friend to man and magazine, even unto the Buccaneer. Our cheek is turned. You know who is supposed to cast the first stone. Amen.

FIXING BOTH ENDS OF THE PROBLEM

This is the start of a heavy week-end. There'll be an unusual excitement over the Fordham game to be added to the regular high temperature that comes with Fall Germans, imported dates and visiting families.

Just how you are going to "let go, Carolina" and still refrain from pulling down highway signs in the middle of the night is altogether an individual problem. There's no need for regulations upon exuberance, or for our waging any moralistic attack on "raising hell," for that matter.

Most of us realize the nature of the Gentleman and some sort of obligation to someone—maybe the conscientious objectors or the visitors or the name of the greater University—to exercise the expected amount of decorum.

There will always be a certain element which lets itself out of control. And there will always be a group of spectators to gasp in horror at the slightest provocation about the way the student generation is fast going to the proverbial tragic destination.

To the latter element is due the consideration of a gentleman to his society; an exhibition of manners which will prove better than apologies that students have enough self-respect and good manners to act decently if they decide to want to, early enough before hand.

As for the first element, the Irresponsibles who won't decide to want to, you cannot trust to their "catching it in the neck" from the objectors, that won't cure 'em. About the only thing that will curb their blasts will be some sort of an example by the Responsibles. This is the same example that cures the scandle-mongers and ever-ready criers.

MOORISH TROOPS BREAK IN LOYALIST'S LINES

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 28.—Moorish troops had, according to unofficial reports received today, penetrated the Spanish government lines in the Usera sector of Madrid and advanced 800 yards in Paseo de Rosales.

Fighting was centered around Madrid, it was stated by these advices, but there was no confirmation of these reports by any of the insurgent or loyalist war communiques.

Official sources indicated that Madrid was the scene of considerable fighting but no details of progress or losses for either side were given.

From other fronts where minor engagements were held unimportant reports were received.

Performers

Anyone who might be willing to perform for Mr. Ivey is urged to report to the director's office by next Monday. No one need be afraid to apply for the program, as the crowds are friendly, and the master of ceremonies will be very kind about giving the gong, declared Ivey.

A faculty member will act as master of ceremonies. In keeping with the celebrated Major Bowes motif, he must have a military title. "Admiral" Archibald Henderson, "Colonel" Robert House, "Field Marshal" William A. Olsen, "Generalissimo" Harry F. Comer, and "Commander" Roy Armstrong are some previous masters.

If one does unusually well by the Memorial, he is awarded the highly coveted title of "Great Mogul." Only Deans House and Henderson have won the title so far.

Pep Rally At 7:15 Tonight

"The pep rally last week started the spirit that beat Tulane," says Glenn Davis, "so let's get started again tonight. We beat Tulane and we can beat Fordham. Fordham has never been beaten by a major southern university, so there's no time like the present to break that record."

It is estimated that about 225,000,000 people in the world speak the English language.

INTRAMURALS AND VARSITY

Intramural athletics on the campus—next to the varsity squad—probably create more campus interest than any other group activity.

Last year 1689 individuals—more than half the student body—participated in an average of 2 1/2 sports. Less than half the campus failed to "get on the band wagon" mainly because of interfering afternoon activities, "varsity" ineligibility, or physical inability.

So strong is the intramural program at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., that it holds an upper hand over the varsity itself. On the intercollegiate scene, Emory's varsity squad seldom captures any championship trophies. An extensive and strongly supported intramural program substitutes for the varsity's weakness.

Our varsity squad will never need a substitute—especially after last Saturday. But we are able to be greedy enough to have both an extensive intramural program and a strong varsity.

Fraternity and dormitory men—defeated or victorious—are tensely looking forward to the outcome of this fall's touch program. Intramural players are not relaxing their efforts for the championship.

HERE COME THE CLASSES

Sensing a campus-wide enthusiasm for intramurals and the glorification of inept athletic teams, Presidents Jim Joyner and Joe Patterson, saw a chance to bring about for the first time a unification of the junior and senior classes, respectively.

Their plan—heartily endorsed by both executive committees—would organize intramural teams drawn from both classes. So a new part of the intramural program would become a hard fought game for the championship of the junior and senior classes.

Such a scheme, the presidents feel, would not only be a cardinal addition to the intramural program but it might also give juniors and seniors a cause to bear their name. The athletic field might become a common ground for the old class enthusiasm and rivalry that existed in the University's younger days when juniors and seniors gathered between classes to win the campus trophy.

If the executive committees are successful in their attempts, upperclassmen, united for a new common cause, may be able to pass their budgets by an ample quota of voters.

PUMPING GAME

Yesterday's Durham Sun ran a streamer on page nine. It said: "Bershak, Hudgins Among All-America Prospects."

Alan Gould, Number One Associated Press sports writer and commentator, was responsible for the opinion.

For the first time this season a deserving player on the Carolina team takes a top rank position among the football men of the nation. "The Southern conference," Gould says, "has two top-notch wingmen in Andy Bershak of North Carolina and Don Hudgins of Duke."

Whether or not Bershak wins out over Hudgins for an All-America ranking may depend at least to some measure on the degree of recognition that he is given.

If recognition and consideration are gained through publicity—it may not be solely through publicity—we are behind the News Bureau in making a concerted effort for bigger, better, and more forceful news stories.

To The Editor
The DAILY TAR HEEL:
Dear Sir:

Several times during the reading of the devotionals in freshman assembly, the reader has been greeted with applause and upon his conclusion he has also been applauded. Thursday morning, this occurrence became so outstanding that it seems necessary to correct the freshmen.

Is it because the freshmen are so inattentive and do not realize what is going on or are they just ignorant of the behavior necessary during the reading of the devotionals?

Even though the majority of first year men are dissatisfied with the assembly programs, there is no reason why they cannot be respectful during the devotionals.
